New Rioting Flares at Two Steel Plants In Waukegan

Deputies Battle Union Sympathizers After Day of Violence.

Illinois Governor Studies 'Sit-Down'

Firm's Owners Refuse to Deal With C. I. O. Representatives.

By the Associated Press.

Waukegan, Ill., Feb. 19 (AP).—Rioting flared suddenly tonight outside the strike-bound property of the Fansteel Metallurgical Corporation, with special deputy sheriffs battling a crowd of approximately 200 union sympathizers.

The fighting began when several men surged out of the crowd and tore the badges off half a dozen special officers recruited from farms and villages along the North Shore.

In the first rush of officers, several persons were driven to the right of the way of the Chicago & North Shore Electric Line and pushed off a 6-foot ledge onto the tracks.

Like a fuse, the disorder circled the fenced area surrounding the two buildings housing 82 bruised and defiant sit-down strikers.

Roving bands recruited from the crowd made for the deputies and chased them from their posts. Several officers lost their cudgels as well as their badges. One was reported badly beaten.

Shouts and yells filled the air. The guards were openly threatened and ordered to "throw away your badges and go home."

A number of sympathizers were cudgled and retired with aching heads. There were no arrests reported immediately.

Forces Evenly Matched.

The forces of the sympathizers and deputies were said to be about evenly matched, although as the fighting continued, the crowd began to increase in size.

Officers guarded an area about four blocks square. Inside a steel fence, unlighted and unheated, lay the $1,500,000 plant, its windows smashed and the doors nailed shut.

Rioting broke out after it was thought peace would prevail for the night. Lake County officers had doubled their forces and the situation appeared under control.

Earlier today Sheriff L. A. Doolittle's force of 125 men was beaten off in a two-hour attack on the strikers inside the plant.

The strikers had wrapped themselves in blankets and most of the crowd had dispersed, when suddenly, the disorder broke out anew.

Confers With Governor.

By the United Press.

Waukegan, Ill., Feb. 19.—Sheriff Doolittle today disclosed he had conferred by telephone with Gov. Henry Horner at Springfield, but did not ask for troops. He added:

"I told the Governor we need help. He said he would send Martin P. Durkin, State director of labor, and that if Durkin failed to bring about a settlement he would come here himself."

Doolittle also informed the Governor he feared "four of five other factories will be placed in similar circumstances" if the Fansteel dispute continued.

The strikers, demanding recognition of their Committee for Industrial Organization union, wrapped themselves in blankets to ward off the wintry winds whistling through the shattered windows of the plants.

6 Hurt in Riot.

One of the first actual efforts to carry out a court order directing the evacuation of a factory seized by "sit-downers" precipitated the riot this morning. Six men were injured.

Sheriff Doolittle asked the strikers to come out in compliance with the edict issued by Circuit Judge Ralph Dady. From the two plants came this shouted reply:

"Go to hell."

The law forces moved to the attack. A nailed-shut door was pounded with a steel battering ram. The officers were met by a shower of nuts, bolts, pulleys, other metal missiles and a barrage of acid.

The Sheriff's men hurled tear gas into the structures. The strikers turned on the ventilating fans and the choking fumes were wafted off.

A deputy and a policeman were burned by acid. Another deputy was hurt by an exploding tear gas bomb. Three strikers also were injured.

Members of C. I. O.

President A. J. Altchison of the corporation—who notified the demonstrators they were discharged when they quit work Wednesday—said he was willing to confer with them, but would not discuss recognition with Committee for Industrial Organization organizers.

The "sit-downers" were members of a C. I. O. unit—the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers of North America.

Nicholas Fontecchio, regional director of the C. I. O. steel organizing group, said at Chicago the C. I. O. had not called the strike, but would "back them all we can."

Conciliator Robert Pilkington, of the U. S. Department of Labor, rushed to North Chicago and conferred with Mayor John Dromey.

Although without heat or light the strikers received food supplies last night. Other bundles were

26 Countries To Blockade All of Spain

Help of Portugal Believed Assured; Guard Areas Assigned.

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 19.—Twenty-six European nations—with Portugal's help apparently assured—tonight virtually completed plans to encircle war-ravaged Spain to halt men and munitions at midnight Saturday.

Only details of the coastal naval patrol and the Anglo-Portuguese agreement for stationing of frontier guards remained to be ironed out by international negotiations, nearing the end of months of bickering and deadlock.

A ring of warships and border guards, to isolate Spain from foreign assistance, was the neutrality committee's final solution of the Spanish problem.

Foreign observers within her realm, Portugal at first asserted, would reflect upon her national honor, although neither France nor Great Britain demurred at the stationing of observers along the Pyrennees and at Gibraltar.

Britain, however, persuaded Portugal to accept tentatively a compromise providing that British officers patrol the Hispano-Portuguese frontier. Only an agreement on the number of guards remained before final Portuguese approval of the scheme.

In addition, details of the exact sea zones to be patrolled by each nation remained to be worked out. Members of the neutrality subcommittee, composed of the six most interested nations, agreed at a meeting tonight to submit tentative plans to their governments.

Informed quarters said the present plans called for a joint Russian-Portuguese patrol of the Basque coast of northern Spain, British supervision of the Gibraltar Straits, French patrol of the Balearic Islands and Spanish Morocco, and Italo-German control of the remainder of the Mediterranean coast, including Valencia.

100 to Guard Frontier.

It was believed 100 frontier guards would be provided at initiation of the scheme, which must be approved finally by the full membership of the international committee, probably at a session next week.

Some sort of guarantee that Portugal, whose sympathies have been strongly with the Spanish insurgents, would not violate the compact appeared important to the negotiators because both the Valencia and insurgent Burgos governments have refused to permit posting of foreign agents within Spain.

A patrol of Portuguese ports, as well as Spain's, was the only device left to the non-interventionists if Portugal refused at the last minute to tolerate even British observers. Informed sources believed this would be attempted only as a last resort and that Germany and Italy would register extreme objections.

Former Rebels Guard Madrid.

Madrid, Feb. 19 (AP).—Embattled Madrid sent 83 captured insurgents back to the trenches tonight to fight their former comrades in the bitter siege of the capital.

The former insurgents, now clad in government military uniforms, filed into the floodlighted palace of justice courtroom to hear themselves solemnly declared "free men going back into the trenches, not as prisoners, but as comrades."

They were captured January 19 by government forces.

After presiding judge read a formal acquittal of the men on charges of rebellion, an attorney addressed them with an injunction to "go back and fight this three-headed monster—of Italians, Germans and Moors."

One of the soldiers made a radio appeal to his former comrades to quit the insurgent armies and fight for the government.

Reports from the Jarama front indicated the governmnt had held its ground southeast of Madrid despite bitter attacks. On the other side of the capital quiet prevailed.

Italy Bans Aid for Spain.

Rome, Feb. 19 (AP).—The Italian government tonight decided on "penal measures" to check the flow of volunteers to Spain as the deadline for foreign recruits at midnight Saturday neared.

The Fascist government made its action public "in conformity with the decision of the non-intervention committee in London," which agreed to halt all volunteers for Spain tomorrow night, and to cooperate in a naval blockade March 8 to cut off war supplies.

Senator Wheeler Calls 'Liberals' To Uphold Court

McAdoo Daughter Files Divorce Suit For Non-Support

Los Angeles, Feb. 19 (AP).—Ellen McAdoo de Onate, daughter of United States Senator William Gibbs McAdoo and granddaughter of President Wilson, today filed suit for divorce from Rafel Lopez de Onate, charging non-support.

She asked custody of their son, Richard, 1½ years old.

They were married in November, 1934, after a lengthy controversy over De Onate's right to wed under the laws of California, in Albuquerque, N. Mex., when he bride was 19 years old.

De Onate was born in the Philippine Islands, but claims his parents were Basques and that he was not barred from the marriage.

The divorce complaint, filed by William H. Neblett, law partner of Senator McAdoo, merely charged De Onate had failed to support his wife.

'Progressivism' Is Urged by Montanan to Fight Roosevelt Plan.

Alternative Suggestions, an editorial—page 8.

By Robert C. Albright.

Alignment of "true Progressism" against the President's plan to enlarge the Supreme Court was called for last night by Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, after Administration leaders in the Senate had charged a "strongly organized force is seeking to control every publicity agency in the United States to cry down this plan."

Wheeler, spearhead of Senate liberal opposition to Supreme Court remodeling, saw "dictatorship" possibilities in the President's program, and declared "a liberal cause was never won by stacking a deck of cards, nor by stuffing a ballot box, nor by packing a court."

Renewed Senate debate and radio airing of both sides of the issue coincided with an apparently authentic report that the Administration will allow its program to "simmer" for two or three months before any effort at a showdown.

Wagner Decision Important.

It was said in a reliable quarter that the President's farm tenancy and crop insurance messages to Congress will be followed by labor recommendations, but action on the court plan may be sought before their enactment. The Supreme Court decision on validity of the Wagner labor relations act may precede any move for a vote on the court plan.

Charges of an "organized" attempt to control publicity by interests opposed to court reform were made in the Senate by Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson in the course of a defensive two-hour speech by Senator Henry F. Ashurst, of Arizona, nominal author of the court reform bill.

Cites Opponents' "Fire."

The Arkansas Senator said the "whole fire" of opposition has been concentrated on the Supreme Court enlargement proposals.

"I want some one to tell me why a different rule either with respect to retirement or with respect to the appointment of additional judges shall be applied to the District courts and to the circuit courts of appeal from that which is applied to the Supreme Court of the United States," said Robinson.

He said that if it is admitted inferior court judges may suffer physical and mental impairment with age, there is nothing warranting a conclusion that "those who have the final judgment * * * should be held exempt."

House Bloc Backs President.

As the liberal Wheeler elaborated his opposition last night in a radio address, Representative Gardner Withrow, Wisconsin Progressive, announced 13 Progressive and Farmer-Labor members of the House would support the President's proposals. Two members of the House Progressive-Farmer-Labor bloc were said to have withheld indorsement.

The 13 supporting it followed the Senate leadership of Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr. (Progressive), Wisconsin, only liberal in the Senate to announce whole-hearted support.

Guyer Attacks Plan.

Joining the opposition radio speakers was Representative U. S. Guyer, of Kansas, ranking Republican of the House Judiciary Committee, who charged the attack on the Supreme Court results from "a lust for power and the impatience over restraint of a Chief Executive who seems to think that his recent re-election was a mandate to carry out any idea he happens to entertain, with little or no regard as to whether it is in accord with the Constitution."

Far into the night echoes of the controversy swept over radio's ether, as Representative E. E. Cox, Georgia Democrat, and outspoken opponent of the court plan, debated

Court Nullifies Alberta's Debt Settlement Act

Basic Law of Canadian Province's Relief Setup Held Illegal.

By the Associated Press.

Edmonton, Alberta, Feb. 19.—Alberta province's reduction and settlement of debts act, considered the cornerstone of the debt legislation of the Aberhart government, was declared unconstitutional today by Justice A. F. Ewing in the Alberta Supreme Court.

The decision said the act encroached on a field reserved to the Federal Government under the Canadian constitution because it dealt primarily with interest payments.

Passed at a special session of the provincial legislature last September, it divided private debts into two classes: old debts, contracted before July 1, 1932, new debts, contracted since that date.

It provided that all payments of interest and principal, which have been made on old debts, should be applied to reduction of principal, that there should be no further interest and that the debts should be made payable in ten years.

On new debts the maximum interest was set at 5 per cent, and all interest paid in the past in excess of 5 per cent was ordered applied to reduction of the principal.

It has been estimated that several thousand Alberta debtors, most of them farmers, have adjusted their debts to the terms of the legislation.

The effect of the court ruling could not be determined immediately, especially as the provincial government had not announced whether it intended to appeal the decision.

The judgment was the first court rebuff to Major legislation passed by the social credit administration of Premier William Aberhart.

There were persistent rumors the province would eventually legislate a moratorium on debts or a reduction of debt principal or a combination of both.

Czech-Nazi Pact Is Believed Near

Praha, Czechoslovakia, Feb. 19 (AP). Settlement of the difficulties between Germany and Czechoslovakia appeared near today.

The Praha government accepted a four-point plan for elimination of friction between Czech and German elements within Czechoslovakia. It makes various concessions to German racials. Its outstanding features are:

1. Important public works will be executed in German sections of Czechoslovakia under the control of Germanic cabinet members.

2. Germans will be allocated a proportional share of civil service posts and German youths will be given facilities for entering the civil service.

3. Social welfare allowances for Germans will be increased.

4. State subsidies for German theaters, art and scientific institutions will be increased to aggregate 20 per cent of the total Czech budget appropriations for such purposes.

Hazen Planning Group to Study D. C. Efficiency

Citizens to Be Given Free Rein in Investigation of City Problems.

Striking back at charges of waste and inefficiency in the local government, the District Commissioners yesterday created a citizens committee to determine whether municipal machinery needs a thorough overhauling.

Decision to appoint the committee was reached after Commissioner Hazen conferred for three hours with Robert Fleming, president of Riggs Bank; E. Barrett Prettyman, former corporation counsel, and several District officials.

"The committee will be given a free rein to find out whether anything is wrong with the District government," Hazen said. "We want them to take an inventory of the government and determine whether any of its functions have become antiquated."

No Time Limit Set.

Hazen said no time limit will be assigned the citizens committee, but the Commissioners are hopeful it will submit its recommendations in sufficient time to have them acted upon at the present session of Congress.

"This will not be just another committee report to be pigeonholed," said Commissioner Hazen. "We are going to press for reorganization if reorganization is needed."

The committee, Hazen said, will comprise "15 or 20 business and professional men." He said the Commissioners have not yet determined who will serve on the committee or who will be its chairman.

Seantor William H. King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, who has asked the Senate for a $10,000 appropriation to make a thorough study of the need for reorganization of the District government, said appointment of the ticizens committee would not altar his plans.

Asks Co-operation.

"We will be glad to hear from the citizens and I believe they can be very helpful to the Commissioners," Senator King said.

Commissioner Hazen denied that the report of the Jacobs committee recommending reorganization of the local government or the apeparance of a delegation of business men before the House Appropriations Com-

Ford Warns Against Unions; Walsh Assails 'Sit-Down' Strike

Magnate Opposes Proposed Plan to Change Supreme Court.

Priest Calls Flint Tactics 'Collective Attempt at Grand Larceny.'

By the Associated Press.

Ways, Ga., Feb. 19.—Henry Ford today advised all workers to "stay out of labor organizations" and charged "international financiers are behind the labor unions."

The Detroit automobile manufacturer, in an authorized interview, also criticized the proposal to increase the number of Supreme Court Justices.

"International financiers," said Ford, "are behind the labor unions because they want to control industry and kill competition. They are the cause of all these strikes."

He said he opposed the plan to revise the Federal judiciary because, "it gives one man too much power—more power than the Constitution defines.

"The Supreme Court now is ideal. Changes over the years have seen to that. But if it is suddenly increased to the proportions considered, then it ceases to be a court at all."

Ford was interviewed at his Bryan County winter estate, about 20

The "sit down" strike, recently employed by automobile workers at Flint, Mich., was characterized last night by the Rev. Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., as "an attempt at collective grand larceny" patterned after the Soviet technique of "ruthless confiscation and inevitable violence."

Dr. Walsh, vice president of Georgetown University and head of its Foreign Service School, spoke before 1,500 persons in Memorial Continental Hall. It was the beginning of his fourteenth annual lecture series.

Besides the "sit down" strike, he touched on two other issues—President Roosevelt's proposal to reorganize the Supreme Court and the Communist movement in the United States. Describing the court issue as the most critical since the eve of the War Between the States, he urged both sides to let "reason, not epithet, be their argument." He proposes to discuss the court issue in his subsequent lectures.

Dr. Walsh prophesied that agita-

Medical Student Saves School Pal Injured in Crash

A fellow student yesterday probably saved the life of Robert Lewis Watts, 17, of Washington Missionary College, Takoma Park, Md. Watts, who was riding on the running board of a car, fell off when the car turned at Pine street and Columbia avenue. His head struck the bumper of a parked auto.

Clancy Dower, 22, a pre-medical student at the college, stemmed the flow of blood from a severed artery with his finger until the youth was removed to Washington Sanitarium. Phpsicians said, Watts was seriously hurt, suffering internal skull injuries.

Watts, whose home is at 32 Rhode Island avenue northeast, fell from the automobile of John Moorhead, 17, of 6602 First street northwest, who was driving a group of students home from their classes.

Moorhead was arrested by Sergt. Frank Iane, head of the Takoma Park, Md., police force. He was charged with reckless driving.

Boy, 17, Missing; Mother Fearful For His Safety

Mrs. Lawrence Hall, of 2111 Eighteenth street northwest, whose 17-year-old son, Gibson, has been missing since February 16, told police yesterday she feared her boy was the victim of foul play.

Although unusually tall for his age, he is 6 feet 2 inches tall, Mrs. Hall said, Gibson was shy and retiring and would not think of running away from home.

"I am sure," she told members of the missing persons bureau, "that something has happened to him. He has been injured or deliberately taken away by someone."

A check of hospitals in the city did not reveal anyone answering his description. Gibson weighs 140 pounds, has blue eyes and red hair and a fair complexion.

Green, Justice Officials Plan Steel Bid Parley

By William V. Nessly.

The American Federation of Labor will carry to the Department of Justice its "impressions" of collusion among steel companies of the country in their refusal to bid on contracts to supply the Navy with steel for its construction program, it was announced last night.

This was an outstanding development in a day of official conferences over ways of assuring continuation of the Navy's building plans, a day that brought from President Roosevelt an assertion that the Government must do something about getting steel.

Official determination to speed construction of the Navy's many ships was seen following Great Britain's revelation of her new $7,500,000,000 defense program which includes provisions for numerous new naval craft.

William Green, president of the labor federation, announced that he would discuss the alleged collusion with the Justice Department. His statement followed the session yesterday of the federation executive council which took a "very definite stand" against any modification of the Walsh-Healey act which would require steel companies awarded any of the Navy contracts to maintain a 40-hour week, certain minimum wages and other labor standards.

The steel concerns insist they cannot afford to revise their production schedules to maintain the 40-hour week in view of heavy private orders. The Secretary of Labor has emergency authority to grant exemptions from the provisions of the act, but organized labor is firmly opposing any such action.

The steel impasse yesterday led to discussion of possibility of the Government reopening an armor plate plant it has owned at South Charleston, W. Va., since World War days. At his press conference yesterday President Roosevelt pointed out it had been obtained while he was Assistant Secretary of the Navy

Union Agent Slain At Teaneck, N. J.

Teaneck, N. J., Feb. 19 (AP).—R. Norman Redwood, New York business representative of a tunnel workers union, was shot to death tonight in his automobile in the driveway of his home.

Police said that apparently several gunmen in another auto had followed Redwood's car and fired six shots as he pulled into the drive.

Theodore Roosevelt's Estate Shrinks 10%

New York, Feb. 19 (AP).—An accounting filed in Nassau County Court today in connection with the appointment of a new trustee, said the estate of President Theodore Roosevelt shrank $89,844, or approximately 10 per cent, in value in the period from 1930 to 1936.

The accounting listed the value of the estate as $897,056 on October 27, 1930, and $808,056 on October 8, 1936. Roosevelt, who died in 1919, left the estate in trust, with the income going to his widow, Mrs. Edith Kermit Roosevelt.

Mother to Get Reward For Surrendering Sons

San Francisco, Feb. 19 (AP).—A legal opinion today placed a taciturn, gray-haired mountain woman within reach of a $1,000 reward for surrendering her fugitive sons, John and Coke Brite, to face triple murder charges on which they were sentenced to hang.

Attorney General U. S. Webb ruled the mother, Mrs. Martha Brite, was entitled to the reward, because she arranged the surrender while a sheriff's posse was hunting her "boys."

"Mom" Brite has hinted she might use the $1,000 to aid her sons, who have appealed.

Fields Asks $25,000 In Cross Complaint

Blonde Very Much Infatuated With Rubinoff, She Tells Jury

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 19.—Peggy Garcia, suing Dave Rubinoff upon the claim his failure to marry her was worth half a million to her, testified today she was very much in love with the squat maestro, or anyhow, at the very least:

"I was very much infatuated."

To counsel and the courtroom at large she added the rhetorical question:

"How's that?"

Late in the day court was abruptly adjourned until Tuesday after Rubinoff's attorney, Braham Haprin, asserted Miss Garcia was a married woman in 1933—at the time she claims Rubinoff gave her the run-around.

Haprin asserted he had a telegram from Peggy's father in Roanoke, Va., to prove it.

She flatly denied the statement. The only marriage she has said anything about was one some six months ago to a "young business man" she refused to identify further—and this attachment, she claims, was fatally hurt because of Rubinoff.

The long adjournment of the trial was taken by some to mean that witnesses from Virginia might be called.

Peggy, born Pauline Taylor, but the sometime pre-emptor of the fine old Spanish name of Garcia because she admired that name on the band of a cigar, conceded Rubinoff, the Soviet Industry Faces Crisis After Death of Ordzhonikidze

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Feb. 19.—The Soviet Union tonight faced an admittedly serious industrial situation.

The lagging heavy industrial machine was left without a monitor with the death of Gregori K. Ordzhonikidze, heavy industries commissar. Thousands filed past his bier today in the greatest funeral Moscow has seen since that of Lenin more than a decade ago.

Published statistics on the day of the funeral showed a bad industrial start for 1937. The tractor industry was the only one ahead of its schedule for January, with other basic industries 15 to 20 per cent below the planned production.

The death of Ordzhonikidze was the second successive blow to Soviet industrial leadership, following the recent execution of Gregori Piatikoff, vice commissar of heavy industries, and other department heads convicted of treason and sabotage.

When the new commissar is chosen he will face the task of uprooting bureaucracy, restoring morale and stamping out dissidents which the Piatikoff trial revealed scattered throughout the industry.

Overwork generally was credited as the cause of Ordzhonikidze's death yesterday from a heart attack in his Kremlin apartment.

Radio stations today devoted entire programs to his memory; an endless dirge was played as mourners, sometimes 15 abreast, filed by his body in a mile-long line. The body lay in the historic House of Columns. Entombment is expected to be in the Kremlin.

Winant Is Seen Slated for Post With Cabinet

May Be Social Welfare Secretary; Altmeyer to Head SSB.

By Sidney Olson.

The long Lincolnian form of John G. Winant moved closer to a Cabinet post yesterday as President Roosevelt withdrew Winant's nomination for re-appointment as chairman of the Social Security Board and promoted Arthur J. Altmeyer, present vice chairman of the board, to chairmanship.

Observers were in general agreement that the President expects to appoint the black-maned New Hampshire man to the Cabinet as Secretary of the Department of Social Welfare, if and when Congress approves the Federal re-organization program.

The President, withdrawing Winant's name, also sent to the Senate the name of Murray W. Latimer, chairman of the Railroad Retirement Board, to fill the vacancy on the Social Security Board. Vincent M. Miles is the third member. Altmeyer, as a present member, does not require further Senate confirmation.

In the exchange of letters between "My dear Mr. President" and "Dear Gill," indications were thickly sprinkled that the former Republican Governor from Concord, N. H., will return some day to the New Deal.

Urges "Judicial Functions."

Winant said, in part:

"You asked in your letter that I might think on 'the problems of integrating the Social Security Board's activities with those of the other Government agencies.' May I suggest that the usefulness of a board that does not exercise judicial functions is hragely limited to the development of policies in its administrative functioning.

"This may be helpful during the early period of initiating a large co-operative enterprise of this character, but the time is not far off when the incisiveness of individual direction and line administration will be found as necessary in administering the major sections of the social security act as in the functioning of any other important legislative program entrusted to responsible direction."

"Splendid Service" Cited.

Mr. Roosevelt said, in part:

"I am particularly glad to have your suggestions in regard to the integration of future activities with those of other Government agencies. This I shall want to discuss later on with you in connection with other problems of reorganization affecting executive departments and agencies.

"* * * As I have told you on many occasions, I am grateful to you for the splendid service which you have given—and, after what I hope will be a short period of time—I count on your returning to national public service."

Winant, lank-limbed, sparing of speech, dryly humorous in attitude and characterized by two habits—chair-teetering and a constant attempt to shove his black forelock back from his forehead—is a lifelong dry and Republican. He was mentioned often for the 1936 Republican Presidential nomination before the President brought him to Washington to lead in establishment of the Social Security Board.

Altmeyer Was With NRA.

He performed valiantly for the New Deal on the stump last fall when Republicans attacked the social security act in the campaign, resigning his post as board chairman in order to speak freely in opposition to the viewpoint of Republican spokesmen. After the election he was reappointed temporarily to conclude the organizational work of the board.

Altmeyer, new SSB chairman, was born in De Pere, Wisc. He is 45 years old, was formerly assistant chief of the NRA compliance board, later second assistant to Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, and was a member of the group which drafted the social security act.

Latimer, another drafter of the act, is 36, a native of Clinton, Miss., a former Harvard University instructor, and an expert on industrial pensions. After service as assistant to the co-ordinator of transportation, he was appointed chairman of the railroad retirement board.

H. P. Seidemann Resigns.

The Social Security Board yesterday announced the resignation of Henry P. Seidemann as director of the Federal Old-Age Benefits Bureau. The resignation becomes effective February 28. He will return to his duties with the Brookings Institution, of which he has been treasurer for a number of years. Seidemann had been loaned to the board by the institution.

LeRoy Hodges, of Richmond, who has been managing director of the Virginia Chamber of Commerce since 1924, has been appointed to fill the vacancy the board also announced. A graduate of Washington and Lee University, Hodges has been engaged in public service for 30 years, in Virginia and with various Federal departments.

School Will Close If New Well Fails

Saluda, Va., Feb. 19 (AP).—G. G. Anderton, superintendent of Middlesex County schools, announced today he had agreed with county health authorities to close Saluda High School Monday if the water and plumbing systems, held responsible for the walkout of 24 pupils, are not functioning properly at that time.

He said he believed, however, the three men working on the outdoor well from which the building draws its water supply, will complete their work by Monday.

At the same time J. J. Lancaster, principal of the Saluda school, stated after a conference with a committee of patrons, "there would be no attempt to discipline striking pupils provided they conduct themselves properly on their return to school."

Politics and People

President Roosevelt's Supreme Court Reform Plan Evokes Flood of Half-Truths.

By Franklyn Waltman

Seldom have the American people been confronted with so much misinformation, propaganda, hysteria and so many half-truths and exaggerations in the discussion of a major issue as they are now during the current debate precipitated by President Roosevelt's proposal for revamping the Supreme Court by naming six new justices for it.

WALTMAN.

Not only did Mr. Roosevelt justify his proposal on grounds that were, for the most part, without a factual basis, but the opponents of that scheme now have started making misleading statements in projecting substitutes for it. If ever there was a time when the country should be on guard against generalizations and unsupported assertions—not only by politicians but by the book writers—it is now in regard to this subject. Indeed, it may be well for all of us to undertake reading courses in the history of the adoption of the Constitution and the work of the Supreme Court.

Specific reference is made here to the proposal of Senators Burton K. Wheeler and Homer T. Bone for a Constitutional amendment which would permit Congress to re-enact by a two-thirds vote, after the interval of an election, a Federal law declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court, and the recent book of Morris L. Ernst, "The Ultimate Power," in which the Wheeler-Bone proposal was in substance projected.

* * * *

Both Senators and Mr. Ernst invoke the name and authority of James Madison, sometimes called the father of the Constitution, in support of their proposal. Senator Wheeler has termed his proposal "the Madison plan." Mr. Ernst likewise refers to the proposal as "the Madison plan" and he asserts that Madison "advocated: if the court declares an act unconstitutional, Congress should have the power to override the decision by a two-thirds vote of both houses."

"This suggestion has all of the authenticity of wide support of many of the Founding Fathers," Mr. Ernst adds. "It contains that degree of pause and delay which permits coagulation of public opinion. A law passed in 1936 would not reach the court until 1937 or 1938; if declared void, the Congress of 1938 or 1939 could override the veto, but the public would have had several years of debate on the value of the law in the meanwhile, and many new Congressmen would be holding office in 1939 who were not sitting in 1936."

But James Madison did not make such a proposal to the Constitutional Convention. Nor is there any evidence whatever that such a plan had "wide support of many of the Founding Fathers"—if by "Founding Fathers" Mr. Ernst means the framers of the Constitution, as his book indicates he does. The Ernst-Wheeler contention is, as the Christian Science Monitor asserts, "one of the most curious and astonishing historical fallacies that has ever gained currency in the United States."

Madison, with James Wilson, of Pennsylvania, however, unsuccessfully proposed several times to the Constitutional Convention a provision that "every bill which shall have passed the two houses, shall, before it become a law, be severally presented to the President of the United States and to the judges of the Supreme Court for the revision of each."

His proposal provided that if both the President and the Court approved the bill, it should become law. But if the bill "shall appear improper to either, or both" it shall be returned with the objections against it and it shall not become a law, unless passed a second time by a two-thirds of each house of Congress, in case only the President or a majority of the Court disapproved, or by a three-fourths vote if both disapproved.

This is an entirely different proposition from the Ernst-Wheeler proposal. Its effect, if it had been adopted, would have been to strenghten the power of the Supreme Court by giving it authority to veto a Congressional enactment, not alone on grounds of constitutionality, but for any reason whatsoever. This was the end Madison had in mind when he proposed it.

In his own notes of what happened in the Constitutional Convention Madison records himself as telling that body on July 21, 1787 that this proposal "would be useful to the judiciary department by giving it an additional opportunity of defending itself against legislative encroachments." He was not seeking to restrict the authority of the Supreme Court as are those who propose the Ernst-Wheeler proposal.

Moreover it seems clear from a reading of the debates in the Constitutional Convention that under the Madison proposal the Supreme Court would have two opportunities of striking down a Congressional enactment—through being associated with the veto power before a bill became law and on the grounds of Constitutionality after it became a law.

At all events, it was opposed on that ground. Luther Martin of Maryland asserted that " as to the Constitutionality of laws, that point will come before the judges in their proper official character" and that "in this character they have a negative on the laws."

"Join them with the Executive in revision and they will have a double negative," he asserted.

George Mason, arguing in behalf of the proposal, asserted that "it would have the effect not only of hindering the final passage of such (unjust and pernicious) laws; but would discourage demagogues from attempting to get them passed." He argued that the court should have power to stop such legislation, even though it were Constitutional.

Incidentally, two days later Madison recorded himself as saying in regard to the method of ratification of the Constitution that "it would be a novel and dangerous doctrine that a legislature could change the Constitution under which it held its existence . . . A law violating a Constitution established by the people themselves, would be considered by the judges null and void."

Charles Warren, the historian, commenting on the debate on this subject, explains that "the general opinion of the delegates was that it was improper to join the judges in this veto power, since the question of the constitutionality of an act of Congress might come up before them later in their judicial capacity, and that they ought not to be given opportunity to pass twice on such an act, once in a legislative or executive capacity, and once judicially."

"Moreover," he adds, "this veto power was to be exercised not only in case of unconstitutional laws, but in case of laws felt to be oppressive or unwise, and as to objections based on such latter grounds, the judges were not qualified to act."

Sufficient of the record has been cited to demonstrate that James Madison cannot be invoked as the sponsor of the plan which Senator Wheeler now proposes for the purpose of curbing the Supreme Court.

Financial Ring Backs Unions, Ford Charges

"A man loses his independence when he joins a labor group of any kind," Ford said, "and he suffers as a result.

"Competition in industry will guarantee workers a fair wage, but labor unions destroy this competition.

"It is organizations of this type that lead up to war.

"I am thoroughly convinced that the cure for strikes and other labor difficulties is a high minimum wage.

"It is the less skilled man, working on the smaller wage scale, who causes trouble when his income is insufficient for his family needs. Merit, skill and ability take care of the salaries of the higher-paid men.

"A high minimum wage has been our policy since 1914. Industries must arrange to take care of the expense of this."

Ford reiterated his belief that farming ought to be closer to industry, and asserted "there is no need for idleness in this country today."

Born on a farm himself, Ford believes the laboring man should spend a part of his time in the field, another part in the factory and have some time for study and recreation.

He said workers should have an opportunity to own a garden, even if industry must furnish the necessary land.

"Soil is the only real security," he declared.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said last night of Henry Ford's advice to workers to stay out of all labor organizations:

"His conclusions, in my judgment, are unfounded and not well based. The individual worker stands helpless in dealing in wages and hours with a powerful employer like Mr. Ford."

Young Roosevelt, Virginia U. Dean Confer on Course

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 19. (AP). Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., apparently fully recovered from a sinus ailment, conferred with officials of the University of Virginia today and said he intends to enter the law school here next fall.

Accompanied by Frank L. Polk, jr., with whom he attended preparatory law school, the President's son called on Acting Law Dean George B. Eager. Polk, a third year Virginia law student, introduced Roosevelt to Eager.

Young Roosevelt said he expects to be graduated from Harvard in June, despite the month he has missed. He came to Charlottesville today from Richmond with his fiancee, Ethel du Pont.

Truck Leap Fatal To Lynchburger

Lynchburg, Va., Feb. 19 (AP).—Funeral services were being arranged today for Carlton L. Ramsey, 33, of Lynchburg, fatally injured when he leaped from a burning truck yesterday near Rice.

He died seven hours after the accident in Southside Hospital at Farmville.

Ramsey was en route to Petersburg when the truck caught fire. Before he could stop he was forced to jump to escape the flames.

Surviving are his wife, one child, his mother, four brothers and two sisters.

Seven Aboard Plane Missing in Australia

Sydney, Australia (Saturday) Feb. 20 (AP).—An airplane with seven persons aboard, including W. Fountain, a New York architect, was missing today after leaving Brisbane yesterday afternoon for Sydney. Searching planes began a hunt along the route, which was swept by a gale.

Labor Council Defends Green On Expulsion

A. F. of L. Executive Body Cites Lewis 'Spleen' in U.M.W. Ouster Move.

The executive council of the American Federation of Labor yesterday went on record in defense of William Green, federation president, in the move by John L. Lewis and his United Mine Workers to expel Green from that union.

At the concluding session of its midwinter meeting here, the council directed that a lengthy statement upholding Green be sent to all national and international unions, State and city central labor bodies and 35,000 local unions.

The expulsion step is an outgrowth of the split between Lewis and Green that came with Lewis' organization of the Committee for Industrial Organization and its drive to organize mass production industries along industrial lines, rather than the federation's system of craft unions. Lewis and the unions affiliated with the C. I. O. were suspended by the A. F. of L.

"Anti-Union" Views Charged.

While Lewis was directing the recent automobile strike he charged that Green issued "gratuitous, insulting, anti-union, strike-breaking statements" critical of the strike. The expulsion vote by the policy committee of the Mine Workers' Union, of which Lewis is president, followed last week.

The council's statement yesterday declared that the attack on Green "is prompted not so much by personal considerations but rather the underlying and all-predominating motive is to embarrass and weaken the American Federation of Labor by causing its president to resign, willingly or unwillingly."

The statement said the council "reaffirms its full confidence in President Green and denounces the attacks made on him as wholly unjustified." It said the attack was inspired solely by "spleen and bitterness."

Lewis' Praise Cited.

"It is impossible for the executive council to believe that the rank and file of the United Mine Workers will either tolerate or permit such a deliberate persecution and unconstitutional prosecution long to continue."

The council called attention to the fact that Lewis had placed Green in nomination for the federation presidency at each succeeding convention for years, and that in the 1935 convention he said of Green:

"The present president of the federation typifies all that is desirable in American citizenship and in the leadership of American labor. * * * He has served * * * as a citizen and as an industrial statesman in a manner that commends itself to all thoughtful citizens."

"Sit-Downs" Discussed.

Possibility of the friction between the two factions of labor being further intensified was seen in the revelation that the Council had discussed at considerable length the question of the "sit-down" strike as a policy of labor. The "sit-down" method was used by Lewis' automobile strikers in Detroit and Flint, Mich., and considerable opposition was expressed at the time on the grounds that it constituted "illegal seizure of property."

Green said the council considered all phases of the matter, but decided not to take a definite position at present.

"The discussion was in line," he said, "with our traditional position as an organization, standing for the enforcement of law and order." He declined to say, however, that this indicated the members felt the "sit-down" strike method was not legal.

The council directed Green to study the question further and report to it at its May meeting here.

Change in Surtax Law Is Demanded

By the United Press.

Tax experts of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States last night demanded revision of the 1936 surtax on undistributed corporate profits to lighten the "unfair burden" on corporations in debt and eliminate other "destructive" provisions.

Congress should enact new taxes "less inequitable and less harmful to economic progress," a special committee reported to the chamber.

Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, said he was convinced this session of Congress would revise the act along lines proposed by the Chamber of Commerce.

House Unit Hears Neutrality Views

By the Associated Press.

A Socialist Party spokesman urged stringent mandatory neutrality legislation on the House Foreign Affairs Committee yesterday.

A Chicago University professor recommended partially discretionary action.

Roy Burt, of New York, Socialist Party secretary, said responsibility of administering discretionary legislation was "too great to put on one man with the pressure involved."

Quincy, international law professor at Chicago University, suggested that when war threatened, the United States consult with other nations under the pact of Paris with a view to settling the controversy.

Sentences of 8 Plotters In Puerto Rico Upheld

Boston, Feb. 19 (U.P.).—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals late today denied appeals of eight Puerto Rican nationalists from prison sentences on armed insurrection charges.

The defendants were convicted of attempting to overthrow the United States rule on the island. They were sentenced to four to six years.

Walsh Brands Strike Tactics As 'Larcenous'

Priest Foresees Attempt to Bring Trotzky Into United States.

tion soon would start to admit Leon Trotzky, now an exile in Mexico, into the United States.

Discussing the "sit-down" strike, Dr. Walsh criticized "a member of the Cabinet" for virtually condoning such tactics, which, he added, if found legal "would have meant the end of the Bill of Rights."

"For property," he said, "includes spiritual and moral rights as well as material objects. Invariably those precious liberties are endangered once the dike of general principle is undermined.

"The attempt at collective grand larceny at Flint was encouraged in high places in a petulant tone that seemed to ignore or to welcome the tremendous implications involved. Was not that the identical process sanctioned by Lenin when he influenced the workers of Petrograd by inciting them to occupy the factories of Russia, confiscate private property nad erect councils of workmen to be known as Soviets! The analogy is crystal clear to every historian of the Russian Revolution.

"Seized by Mobs."

"And did not mobs inspired by alien propaganda seize the factories of northern Italy, at Turin and elsewhere in that period of 1922 and 1923 when communism so nearly engulfed the Italian peninsula?

"Was not the march on Rome and the rise of the Fascist State the answer contrived by Mussolini to meet that challenge? But to the sociologist there is a profound and disturbing significance in the fact that such a phenomenon could happen in the United States, with virtual condonation by a high government official under oath to support the Constitution and the laws enacted under it. That is why I consider the 'sit-down' strike as a definite advance in Leftist psychology."

Recalls Suitor's Chains.

In a lighter vein, Dr. Walsh recalled the stubborn "sit down" suitor who chained himself to a radiator until his beloved agreed to marry him, and he conjured up a picture of disappointed office seekers chaining themselves to mail boxes until Jim Farley rewards them with jobs.

If "sit down" tactics were valid against the General Motors Corporation, Dr. Walsh said, they would be just as valid against the United States Government. He continued:

"He is an amateur psychologist and an unsafe counselor who imagines that human passion will make nice discriminations between public and private theft once theft is sanctioned in any degree. 'Thou shalt not steal' is the plain immutable command of God, not subject to economic schools or private predilection and equally binding on capital, labor and members of the Cabinet.

"Because Wall Street sinned, and sin it often did, illegality is not thereby canonized. The claims of labor to a more equitable share in the profits and the fruits of industry are beyond denial, as I have insisted in previous lectures and will again defend in later lectures in the present course.

"But no true friend of social justice can countenance the Soviet pattern of ruthless confiscation and inevitable violence, for we know from cold facts of record that such madness leads to the rule of brute force, the ethics of the jungle, and the reign of firing squads in secret cellars. Where law ends, chaos and tyranny begin."

Perjury Asked Of G.M. Worker Senators Hear

Flint Man Tells of Being Paid for 'Undercover Job' in Michigan Plant.

By the Associated Press.

A self-styled "fighting Frenchman from the Wolverine State," Arthur Dubuc, testified today a Pinkerton official had urged him to "perjure myself" at the La Follette Civil Liberties Committee hearings.

The swarthy, thick-set auto worker, formerly a Pinkerton undercover man, told the committee Lawrence Pugmire, assistant superintendent in the detective agency's Detroit office, had paid him $62.50 on February 4, shortly after Dubuc was subpenaed as a Senate witness.

"They wanted me to perjure myself here," shouted, "they told me that if I was called to the witness stand I shouldn't say anything."

Tells of Double Job.

Waving his arms and spluttering an occasional oath, Dubuc told how he had served both as a United Automobile Workers officer and as an informant for Pugmire in the General Motors plant in Flint, Mich., since January, 1936. He said he took the job as undercover man under the misapprehension that Pugmire was "connected with Roosevelt" and might assist the union.

Insisting that he had remained faithful to the union throughout his undercover work, Dubuc testified that he let his fellow union officers edit all his reports to Pinkerton.

The witness testified Pugmire slipped into the back door of his Flint home and paid him the $62.50, with a warning that if they met at the Senate hearing "I wasn't to know him and he wouldn't know me."

The detective official also told him to discontinue his secret reports, Dubuc continued, "because they had to suspend operations until the Washington investigation blew over."

Tells of Conference.

Pugmire arranged a four-hour conference at a hotel here a few days ago, he said, and "gave me drinks to get me to talk, but didn't have enough liquor."

Following the Frenchman to the witness stand, Pugmire admitted the hotel interview and the $2.50 payment, which he said was an "advance" for Dubuc's February espionage service.

He admitted Dubuc was the only operative paid for February, and the only one known to be under subpena by the La Follette committee.

Charges Prejudice.

Twisting nervously in the witness chair, the youthful curly-haired detective declared "most of Dubuc's utterances were based on prejudice."

When Pugmire completed his testimony, Chairman La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, announced yesterday's hearings virtually completed the committee's investigation of the General Motors espionage system.

Armed with a new $40,000 appropriation, the committee will turn its inquiry into new channels, he indicated. The Black Legion and similar vigilante groups are among the subjects scheduled for investigation.

Finest G.P.O. Book To Contain Peace Talks of Roosevelt

What was termed the finest book ever produced by the Government printing office here is rapidly being completed, Augustus E. Giegengack, public printer, reported to President Roosevelt yesterday.

The edition, limited to about 25 copies, will contain the three addresses made by President Roosevelt on his South American cruise in December to open the All-America Peace Conference at Buenos Aires. The copies will be given by Mr. Roosevelt to the Presidents of all of the American republics.

The speeches are reproduced in English, Portuguese, Spanish and French.

Whisky Displays Banned in Virginia

Richmond, Va., Feb. 19 (AP).—The State Liquor Control Board issued an order today providing that all outdoor advertising of distilled spirits cease in Virginia, April 8.

The same regulation prohibited wine and beer displays in windows of licensees and posters within the stores after that date.

Outdoor signs for wine and beer were given a year of grace until February 8, 1938.

British Royalty, Flatbush Pair Hobnob at Fair

'How's Business?' Queen Mary Says to Brooklyn Cutlery King.

By the United Press.

London, Feb. 19.—The Fullers (Fred E., cutlery, and the Mrs. Brooklyn, U. S. A.) scratched their heads tonight and tried to remember just exactly what the king and queen and Queen Mother Mary said to them, so they can tell it back home in Flatbush.

The Fullers and the Windsors ("Oh, boy, the whole darned royal family,") ran into each other in the hardware section of the British Industries Fair day before yesterday.

Mrs. Fuller, who came along with her husband on the business trip he is making as president of a cutlery company back home, gave an exasperated laugh.

"I can't remember," she said, "whether Queen Mary walked up and stuck out her hand and said, 'I'm Queen Mary,' or whether she just shook hands. But she's so darned charming I forgot to remember just what she said."

But the Fullers did remember that:

Queen Mary said: "How's business in the United States?"

So did Queen Elizabeth, when she came up with King George VI, the Duke of Kent and his duchess and the princess royal.

The Duke of Kent (said Fuller) "cornered me about business matters."

The King said not much at all, except, in an aside to the rest of the royal party, "how about some lunch?"

"He didn't say that to me," Fuller explained. "But they were all just like real folks."

"Kent is a keen man," he added. "He wanted to know about business back home, whether I was buying much cutlery, whether I was staying in London long.

"Queen Elizabeth came over to me and picked up a red, white and blue knife and asked, 'how much?'

"I said: "I am the buyer; I'm not the seller.' She laughed and asked whether I was buying much and we talked business."

The Fullers are going from London to Paris. Their children, Roslyn, 15; Sema, 12, and Harris, 8, are back in Brooklyn.

Naval Airplane Falls as Blast Inquiry Opens

Crew Held Aboard Ship as Toll Mounts to 7, With Death of Jersey Man.

By the Associated Press.

San Pedro, Calif., Feb. 19.—A fighting seaplane engaged in the Navy's tactical maneuvers off the California coast crashed late today, injuring two, as the Navy in close-guarded secrecy began an investigation of yesterday's battleship gun explosion which killed seven and left 13 wounded.

D. R. Towles, aviation machinist's mate, first class, was seriously injured, and Lieut. (J. G.) Wallace C. Short, slightly hurt, when their seaplane crashed near the shore of the Isthmus of Catalina.

The plane was attached to the heavy cruiser Chicago. Lieut. Short reported that downward air currents caught the seaplane taking it out of control.

Inquiry Started.

Meanwhile, aboard the demilitarized battleship Wyoming, officers met in a board of inquest, surveyed the disaster scene in the casemate where the 5-inch gun exploded yesterday, then talked to surviving eye-witnesses to ascertain why the 30-pound charge of high explosive blew up in the breach of the secondary battery.

It was all in secret because gunnery action is one of the most guarded of the secret phases of the four-day fleet landing exercise in which 3,700 marines, 750 troops, squadrons of airplanes and some twenty fighting ships of the fleet participated.

The tragedy came in stark realism of wartime conditions just before the close of the battle exercises. The Wyoming is the oldest of the battleships carrying guns. It is used only for training purposes, having been demilitarized under the London treaty of 1930. It was commissioned in 1912.

Marine Led Crew

Capt. Edward J. Trumbule, distinguished officer of the Marine Corps, who founded Nicaragua's West Point after the campaign against Sandino, was commanding the gun crew and four other enlisted marines who were under training for gun crew work, were killed. Another member of the gun crew, Sidney Emsley, of Atlantic City, N. J., died early today, bringing the death toll to seven.

David R. Williams, enlisted marine of Burgen, N. C., a member of the regular gun crew, is in a critical condition aboard the hospital ship Relief. Twelve others are listed as injured, five of them not serious.

To insure secrecy about deails of the tragedy, the 100 sailors and marines aboard the Wyoming were denied the planned shore liberty at Long Beach and San Diego, being held aboard the warcraft until further orders.

To Fix Responsibility.

The inquest was to determine officially the cause of death and to fix responsibility.

A more extended investigation will be opened tomorrow when a board of injury will meet aboard the battleship New York. This board will make the usual exhaustive investigation and may make any recommendations to prevent such distaster in the future.

The findings of both boards will be dispatched to the Navy Department at Washington, officially sealed as naval secrets.

Asks House Inquiry.

By the Associated Press.

Representative McFarlane (Democrat), Texas, proposed yesterday an investigation of the explosion on the battleship Wyoming off the California Coast Thursday. The House Naval Committee would make the inquiry.

American Bar Group Meets to Hear Reports

Reports on the activities of the house of delegates of the American Bar Association recently held in Columbus, Ohio, were made to a meeting of District member of the American Bar Association at the Mayflower Hotel Thursday.

The meeting, which was called by George M. Morris, chairman of the house of delegates, was addressed by William R. Vallance, delegate from the Federal Bar Association; Judge Clarence N. Goodwin, delegate of the American Judicature Society; James Murdock, chairman of the section of international and comparative law of the American Bar Association; Robert N. Miller, chairman of the committee on Federal taxation; Col. O. R. McGuire, chairman of the committee on administrative law; Justin Miller, chairman of the section on criminal law and Paul F. Hannah, secretary of the Junior Bar Conference.

Coolidge Quartet Gives 2 Concerts Next Week

Under the provisions of the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress, the Coolidge Quartet (William Kroll, Nikolai Berezovski, Nicolas Moldavan and Victor Gottlieb) will present concerts next Tuesday and Thursday afteroons at 3:45 in the chamber music auditorium.

Tuesday's program will consist of Beethoven's Quartet in F, Op. 18, No. 1; Mozart's Adagio and Fugue in C minor (K V 546) and the ninth quartet by Darius Milhaud. The program for Thursday includes Schubert's Quartet in G minor, Erno von Dohnanyi's Quartet No. 3 in A minor, and the second quartet by Walter Piston.

Until the supply is exhausted, free tickets will be mailed to those making application by letter to the music division of the Library of Congress, with a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Miners and Operators Discuss Coal Control

New York, Feb. 19 (AP).—Soft coal operators and miners discussed the fate of the Guffey coal control bill today in connection with their wage and hour negotiations.

In this same connection, they watched closely for the outcome of President Roosevelt's proposal for court reform. The Supreme Court outlawed the first Guffey coal act, but the miners and some operators now urge enactment of a similar measure, designed to force the sale of coal above production cost. The operators and miners are negotiating a new wage and hour contract to succeed the agreement expiring March 31.

Trio Convicted In Kansas City ElectionFrauds

Government Victorious in Its First Case; 10-Year Maximum Penalty.

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, Feb. 19.—The Government chalked up its first convictions today in its warfare on what Federal Judge Merrill E. Otis termed "election thievery" in Kansas City.

A jury convicted Edson M. Walker, Democratic precinct judge, and John H. Drummond, Democratic precinct captain, of conspiring to deprive voters of their rights in the general election November 3. They will be sentenced Thursday.

The maximum penalty is a 10-year prison sentence and a $5,000 fine.

A mistrial was declared in the cases of three other defendants in which the jury was unable to agree. They are Mrs. Anna V. O'Laughlin, Democratic clerk; Miss Loretta McEntee, Democratic judge, and Elijah Burke, Republican judge.

In rapid-fire order, Judge Otis proceeded with trial of a second group of five defendants, among the first of 75 indicted since another Federal judge, Albert L. Reeves, thus instructed a grand jury last December:

"Reach for all—even if you find them in high authority."

Many Witnesses Appear.

A continuing procession of witnesses marched before the juries in both cases, telling stories of multiple voting, alteration of ballots, miscounting of votes and intimidation of protesting election officials. The defense argued that despite irregularities there had been no conspiracy.

Thomas J. Pendergast, who enlarged his Democratic domain from a Kansas City riverfront ward to city-wide and finally State-wide political control, had no comment on the convictions. Previously he explained he was ill and inactive during the registration and voting periods.

"If they want to investigate, it is all right with me," he said when the grand jury started.

Gov. Landon Cheated.

were from the Thirteenth Precinct, Twelfth Ward. The official count of that precinct gave no votes to Paul R. Byrum, Republican Congressional nominee, although the grand jury count showed he actually received 162 votes and more than a dozen witnesses testified they voted the straight Republican ticket. The official count for C. Jasper Bell, successful Democratic candidate, was 686 votes, the grand jury count was 572.

Certified Presidential returns in the same precinct gave President Roosevelt 686 votes and Alfred M. Landon 61. Evidence was that Roosevelt actually received 570 votes and Landon 170.

"Misguided loyalty to Franklin D. Roosevelt, the Democratic Party and Jasper Bell," declared Defense Attorney Harry L. Jacobs, seeking to pin sole blame on Election Judge Walker and win acquittal for all on the ground there could be no one-man conspiracy.

Minnesota Scientist Discovers Faint Star

Minneapolis, Feb. 19 (AP).—Discovery of a star, one of the faintest ever seen by man, from 25,000 to 30,000 times fainter than the sun, was announced today by Dr. William J. Luyten, head of the department of astronomy, University of Minnesota.

Word was received today from the Harvard Observatory, Cambridge, Mass., confirming Dr. Luyten's discovery. The star, he reported is located in the constellation Aquarius, in the direction of the sun's present position, but at a distance of seven light years, or 42 trillion miles from earth.

D. C. Unit Recommends Improvement of Street

At the request of Senator Millard E. Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, the District Highway Department yesterday recommended immediate improvement of Thirteenth street northwest from Massachusetts avenue to Edgevale terrace. At an estimated cost of $9,000, Leonard Robertson, engineer of streets, urged construction of a concrete curbing and gutter and asphalt paving along the roadway.

Earlier this month, Senator Tydings wrote Engineer Commissioner Dan I. Sultan requesting the work be started immediately.

Co-ed Smoking Campaign.

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 19 (AP).—Co-ed use of cigarettes might as well be recognized, the Ohio State University Women's Self Government Association concluded today in fostering a campaign to discourage "bumming" from boy friends and to obtain ash receptacles in college halls.

Supreme Court Is 'Sacred Cow,' Says Professor, on Auto Trek

Wilbert Snow and Family Here On Way to South for Vacation; He Expresses Interest in President's Acts and New Deal.

By Liam Lenihan.

With some apprehension, we went to call on Prof. Wilbert Snow yesterday, who with his family and "a nuisance dog," pal, has embarked on a trailer-trek of the Nation.

Prof. Snow (for the initiate) is the author of "Maine Coast" and other verse and, since 1929, professor of English literature at Wesleyan University, Connecticut.

Tall, hawk-nosed and New Englandish the professor shook hands with us in a tourist camp lot where he has been "resting up a bit" before the arduous journey South.

"Please don't take the attitude that I am a freak," the professor said with an admonishing look. "So many photographers have been snooping around here I already am feeling nervous."

Interested in New Deal.

With such a warning we got serious and we queried the professor on his views: "I am glad to be here in Washington and I am interested in what the President is doing and the New Deal."

"But your views, Herr Professor?" our tone was now pressing. "I most certainly think something must be done," he said with a flourish, "about credit, labor and the Supreme Court."

We were now on interesting ground and we shot home the telling query. "The Supreme Court?" we asked with a triumphant echo; "Yes," he pronounced with finality. "The Supreme Court is the sacred cow of America."

"Every nation has its sacred cow," the professor elaborate in his best classroom manner. "England has its divinity of the Crown; the United States its Supreme Court."

Solved Vacation Problem.

The professor, who is enjoying a six months sabbatical leave, solved the vacation problem of a large family with a wanderlust by investing in a trailer. Accompanied by his wife, the former Jeanette Simmons, and five husky children, he is headed for points South.

Confessing that he was putting the finishing touches on a new book, he said that Mrs. Snow has her hands full with cooking and Baby Gregory. As for the boys:

"They occupy their time with horseshoe pitching and roller skating," he said. "They also have two pair of boxing gloves autographed by Gene Tunney."

Edward to Marry In Vienna May 22

New York, Feb. 19 (AP).—Frances Clyne, New York fashion expert, said today the Duke of Windsor will marry Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson in Vienna next May 22—ten days after the coronation of King George VI.

Miss Clyne said she learned of the plans of the former British monarch at a recent cocktail party in St. Moritz, Switzerland.

Fingerprints of Dead Kidnap Suspect Studied

Sacramento, Calif., Feb. 18. (AP).—Fingerprints of a man found dead in a freight car at Portola, Calif., Monday night are being studied at the Federal Bureau of Identification here, agents said today.

Interest in the case was aroused because the dead man resembled descriptions of the kidnap-slayer of Charles Mattson, 10, of Tacoma. William B. Shed, print expert of the Bureau, said that the finger tips had not been touched up with acid, as had been reported. What appeared to be an attempt to obliterate identification marks was evidently due to freezing, Sked said.

D. C. Finance Hearings Delayed Until Tuesday

Hearings on the 1938 District supply bill were recessed Thursday until next Tuesday due to the absence of Chairman Ross Collins, of Mississippi. The public library estimates will be considered next.

As a result of the delay the hearings probably will continue through next week with J. L. Jacobs, director of the fiscal relations study, to be one of the last witnesses.

Rev. Mrs. W. D. Moore Missionaries to Italy

The Rev. W. Dewey Moore, pastor of Anacostia Baptist Church, and Mrs. Moore have been named missionaries to Italy by the Foreign Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention, it was announced yesterday at Richmond.

According to the Associated Press, the couple will leave immediately for their new post.

Archeologist to Retire.

Ottawa, Feb. 19 (AP).—Harlan I. Smith, dominion archeologist for the last 25 years, will retire March 1, it was announced today. Smith, a native of Saginaw, Mich., and formerly connected with the American Museum of Natural History, in New York, is noted for his excavations of Indian relics in Ohio, Nova Scotia and western Canada.

Mexican Church Peace Threatened

Mexico City, Feb. 19 (AP).—Powerful anti-religious forces threatened tonight to disrupt conciliation of Mexico's stormy church-state controversy.

The Confederation of Workers of Mexico, CTM, strong labor syndicate which carries influence in virtually every Mexican sphere, decided tentatively to resist legal reopening of churches in Veracruz state. Militant Catholics recently opened the churches themselves. They had been closed for a decade.

Holiday Causes Change In House District Day

District day in the House will be observed on next Tuesday, instead of Monday, on account of Washington's Birthday, Majority Leader Rayburn announced yesterday.

The principal bill on the calendar is the Norton juvenile court reform measure. It was debated on last District day, but not voted upon.

Rural Parson, Kinsman Held As Night Riders

Flogging by Hooded Band in N. C. Is Charged to 2 Men.

By the Associated Press.

Shallotte, N. C., Feb. 19.—Sheriff J. A. Russ announced today he had arrested the Rev. Vance Simmons, a primitive Baptist preacher, and B. Garfield Simmons in connection with the Thanksgiving night flogging of Will Inman and Jesse Cox by a hooded band.

The men were charged with assault with a deadly weapon, he said.

Russ said he turned the men over to Sheriff Herman Stanley, of Columbus County, where the flogging is alleged to have been administered.

They were allowed to remain free temporarily while attempting to raise bonds, fixed at $500 each by District Solicitor John J. Burney.

A preliminary hearing was set for next Tuesday in recorder's court at Whiteville, Columbus County seat.

Russ said the preacher and Garfield Simmons were distant relatives. Simmons is a storekeeper at Freeland in this (Brunswick) County. The preacher serves several churches in Horry County (S. C.), just across the State line.

The minister was arrested while plowing. Russ quoted him as saying he was "embarrassed" because a man of his character and reputation should be jailed because he had not condemned the flogging of what he called a "not desirable group."

Simmons, the sheriff reported, declared he "never put a hand on either Will Inman or Jesse Cox" in his life.

U. S. Mail History Given by Branch In Speech to Club

The Washington Transportation Club, whose members direct the activities of rail, bus, steamship and street car lines, Thursday night heard Harllee Branch, Second Assistant Postmaster General, outline the history of the Postoffice Department and uphold Government subsidization for the merchant marine and for aviation.

Speaking at the Transportation Club's thirty-first annual banquet at the Hotel Raleigh, Branch said:

"It is my opinion that a majority of the American people approve reasonable Government aid for the development and maintenance of our merchant marine and for the development of our aviation. We are up against stiff and intensive world competition in both and, with other governments liberally subsidizing their merchant marine and their aviation, the United States cannot maintain its position and serve the interests of its people without adequately meeting this competition."

Branch traced the history of mail transportation in this country. He pointed out the constant speeding up of service and predicted that "within the year" air mail would cross the Atlantic in less than 30 hours.

Other speakers at the banquet were Harry L. Haines, Representative from Pennsylvania, and Phil Campbell, former Representative from Kansas. About 400 attended the banquet, which was followed by an entertainment program.

Cumberland Light Plant Referendum Proposed

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 19 (AP).—Senator Robert B. Kimble (Republican), Allegany, today introduced in the Senate a bill providing for a referendum on the construction of a municipal electric power plant in Cumberland.

The bill provides that the proposal shall be voted on at the next election. If the residents approve the municipal plant, the city is authorized to borrow up to $2,000,000 to build it.

Kimble also introduced a bill increasing the salaries of justices of the peace at large in the Eighteenth and Twenty-seventh districts from $500 to $600 per year.

Rain, Snow Settle Plains Area Dust

Guymon, Okla., Feb. 19 (AP).—Begrimed residents of the high plains "Dust Bowl" breathed tonight the first respite in six days from choking clouds of blowing soil as Federal and State forces marshalled to check the "black blizzards."

Light rain, snow and subsiding winds largely dispelled the dust from parts of western Oklahoma, Kansas, Colorado and Texas, but new dusters spread over northern and central Oklahoma.

Delegates from 25 wind-eroded Kansas counties assembled at Garden City, Kans., to discuss a plan for putting wind-blown sections of western Kansas and neighboring Plains States under a "farm dictatorship" until erosion is bridled.

Slum Act Upheld.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 19 (AP).—The Kentucky Court of Appeals upheld today the validity of a 1934 legislative act providing for the creation of municipal housing commissions to eradicate slum areas with Federal aid.

U. S. Jury Studies 'White Slave' Ring

Los Angeles, Feb. 19 (AP).—Evidence that a "white slave" ring has ensnared scores of girls and sent them to the Orient and Hawaii "for immoral purposes" was studied today by a Federal grand jury.

U. S. Attorney Pierson M. Hall said the alleged ring has reached "incredible proportions" and is financed by an organized "money ring."

Dr. Goebbels Is Father Of 4th Child in 5 Years

Berlin, Feb. 19 (AP).—Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, Nazidom's oratorical advocate of more and better babies, became the beaming father today of his fourth child in a little more than five years.

The fact that Frau Goebbels had given birth to her third daughter was published but modestly, however. Dr. Goebbels is Minister of Propaganda and, as such has the say about what the newspapers do or do not print.

Idle Insurance Board Exempts Report of 'Tips'

Suggested Act Amendment Submitted to Bureau, for Approval.

District employers, under a proposed amendment to the unemployment compensation insurance act, would not be required to report employes' tips to the local administrative board, according to an announcement yesterday by John A. Marshall, board director.

This amendment was among several suggested changes in the act adopted by the board for submission to the Budget Bureau, Marshall said.

Under the present unemployment insurance law, employers are required to obtain from employes amounts of their daily tip gratuities and include them in reports to the local board.

Impossible to Obtain.

Recently, employers have complained that it is impossible to secure correct information on tips and asked that this source of employes' income be exempted from the monthly report, Marshall explained. The Internal Revenue Bureau does not require this information, it was pointed out.

In another proposed amendment to the act, all nonprofit sharing organizations—religious, charitable scientific, literary, educational, etc.—would be excluded from its provisions. This exclusion would be retroactive to the proposed amendment's enactment.

Other Things Urged.

Changes also were suggested to remove special protection granted employers in the prohibition of making public pay-roll data. It was proposed to strike out the words "which will reveal the employers' identity" and make the provision read "such information shall not be published or open to the public in any manner."

Other amendments proposed would provide for adjustments and refunds in cases of overpayments, traveling expenses for board officials, penalties for violations of board rules and advance to March 1 the date for the board's report to Congress.

2,700 Youths Parade Today For Their Bill

March to White House Will Be Demonstration for Pending Measure.

Organized youth will be on the march this morning.

Approximately 2,700 young men and women from 44 States will parade Pennsylvania avenue from the Capitol to the White House at 11 o'clock today to urge the passage of the American Youth act now pending in Congress.

The parade will be the outstanding feature of the four-day pilgrimage sponsored by the American Youth Congress. It will mark the climax of the program which extends through Monday and includes general meetings for the delegates and organizational meetings for city secretaries, regional chairmen and members of the National Council of the Congress.

Will Visit White House.

President Roosevelt will receive delegates and their petitions at the White House. The petitions, describing the plight of unemployed and out-of-school young people, will urge the passage of the youth bill recently introduced by Senator Ernest Lundeen, of Minnesota, and Representatives Jerry Voorhis, of California; John M. Coffee, of Washington, and Maury Maverick, of Texas.

Among youth representatives who will present the petitions to the President will be William W. Hinckley, chairman of the American Youth Congress; Myrtle Powell, of the National Business and Professional Council of the Y. W. C. A.; Edwin Mitchell, of the Southern Tenant Farmers Union; Cecil McKiddy, of the California Youth Congress; Harold Peterson, of the Junior Farmer Labor Association and a member of the Minnesota Legislature; Angelo Herndon, member of the executive committee of the National Negro Congress and a vice president of the Workers' Alliance, and Joseph P. Lash, national secretary of the American Student Union.

Hear Constitution Explained.

At an open assembly of the pilgrimage at the Labor Department auditorium last night, Morris L. Ernst, prominent New York attorney and officer of the Lawyers' Guild, discussed the Constitution, its origin and intent, in the light of proposed social legislation such as the youth act. Congressmen who introduced the American youth act also were on the list of speakers, which included leaders of the national youth organizations affiliated with the American Youth Congress.

A Washington's Birthday memorial ceremony will be observed by members of the pilgrimage tomorrow morning at the Washington Monument at 11 o'clock. Bishop Francis J. McConnell, of the Methodist Episcopal Church; Rabbi Theodore Gordon, of Baltimore, and the Rev. Russell J. Clinchy, of the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, of Washington, will conduct the services. Afterward the services officers of the American Youth Congress will lay a wreath on the Washington Monument and conduct a ceremony written for the occasion.

Post's Curbstone Broadcasters Try Bazooka Playing

Small boys and girls will have to watch those bazookas being used for the big Bob Burns-Washington Post contest. And here is the evidence. Charlie Stofberg and Bob Garrison, who conduct The Post's "Curbstone Queries" on the air at noon each Monday, Wednesday and Friday, couldn't resist a tempting stack of bazooka boxes and the result was a bazooka solo for WMAL listeners yesterday noon. The bazooka artist giving the demonstration in the picture is John Michael Conroy, one of the "Curbstone" listeners. We suggest that Young Washington keep an eye on the bazookas used for practice for the big contest, March 6, or dads, big brothers—and even mothers—will be using them!

Woodring Asks More Leaders For Defenses

Tells Reserve Officers of Scarcity, in Address at Annual Dinner.

Speaking before the annual dinner of the Reserve Officer's Association at the Carlton Hotel last night, Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring said that "trained leadership" is one of the major necessities for National defense.

"We have in America a large amount of untrained man power," the Secretary stated. "We are singularly blessed in the quantity and variety of necessary raw materials. We have many industrial organizations which can quickly provide us with finished products essential in war. But we never have sufficient leaders."

The Secretary's address was the main event in the association's three-day meeting here, which will conclude today. The Association's 200 delegates included Lieut. Col. William P. Wattles, of Washington, who is secretary of the organization; Lieut. Col. P. E. Engler, of Omaha, Nebr.; National president, and Maj. Roy E. Hughes, president of the local unit.

Reserve Officers Scarce.

In his talk the Secretary stressed the dearth of reserve officers with experience during the World War. "In another decade," he stated, "we must reluctantly admit that few of our war-trained officers can be considered available for active service in a future emergency." He stressed the value of the R. O. T. C. units, and added he hoped Congress would shortly see fit to provide for a "substantial enlisted reserve.

Earlier in the evening Secretary Woodring spoke to a Nation-wide audience in a radio address delivered in observance of National Defense Weed, under the auspices of the Reserve Officers Association.

In his radio talk, the Secretary urged an adequate army, small but well equipped. He stressed that the armed forces' present equipment now compares favorably with the best technical developments. "Our modern airplanes are the best in the world. Our motor equipment is in the front rank. Our industry is capable of the necessary production within reasonable limits."

Army Funds Third.

Admitting that the present Army appropriation of $580,000,000 is third among the great powers, he stated that only a small portion is used for actual armament.

He emphasized the Army's peacetime construction, calling particular attention to the armed forces' role during the Mississippi flood. The emergency having passed, he added, the facilities of the War Department are now being directed to help in the speedy reconstruction of the stricken area.

"As head of the War Department," he concluded, "it will be my constant purpose and determination to direct its operation for the preservation of peace for this nation—to develop such efficiency and preparation for defense as will reasonably assure us such a state of security that others, less peace minded than ourselves, shall not dare to disturb that peace. It is a far wiser national policy to expend dollars in security than human lives in war."

Shaw Finds, Too Late, Fingerprints Lacking

London, Feb. 1. (U.P.).—Sava Botzaris, Yugoslavian sculptor, finished a bust of George Bernard Shaw today and asked the playwright to put his thumb prints in the soft clay.

Shaw tried several times, but left no mark.

"It's a pity I didn't know this before," Shaw remarked. "I would have chosen another profession."

Fire Lieut. Norton Will Be Retired

The retirement of Fire Lieut. D. J. Norton, effective March 1, was approved yesterday by the District Commissioners.

Lieut. Norton, attached to Engine Co. No. 8, was recommended for retirement by the Board of Police and Fire Surgeons because of disability incurred in line of duty. He was appointed to the District Fire Department in 1910 and is 49 years old.

Following his retirement, Lieut. Norton will receive relief payments of $118.33 a month, granted by the Policemen and Firemen's Relief Fund. Physicians told the Commissioners Lieut. Norton was suffering from a heart ailment.

Ramspeck Speaks To U. S. Workers

Representative Robert Ramspeck, of Georgia, was the guest speaker, at an organization dinner held last night by the Treasury Department Local 262 of the National Federation of Federal Employes.

"I am intensely trying to perfect the civil service," said Ramspeck, who is chairman of the House Civil Service Committee. "I want to see it made into a system that will attract persons who wish to make a career of it.

Mrs. Carlisle Leaves Estate Of $690,063

Daughter Chief Beneficiary Under Will Filed Here; Servants Get Cash.

An estate of $690,063 was left by Mrs. Kate T. Carlisle, 1722 I street northwest, who died Tuesday, it was shown in District Court yesterday when her will was filed for probate.

A daughter, Mrs. Mary Carlisle Howe, well known here as a musician, was named as the principal beneficiary, though there were a number of substantial bequests. Among those who received bequests were the household servants, two of whom were given homes as well as cash.

Directing a number of specific bequests, Mrs. Carlisle asked that the remainder of her estate be divided into two equal parts, one to go to Mrs. Howe and the other to go to the children of a deceased son, James Mandeville Carlisle. These are Katherine Carlisle Ourusoff, of Chevy Chase, Md.; James M. Carlisle, of New Haven, Conn., and Edith Carlisle, of Fort Bragg, N. C.

Mrs. Howe was given the tangible personal property, the residence at 1722 I street and an estate known as "Shadeacre" at Hot Spring, Va. Walter Bruce Howe, a son-in-law, was given Mrs. Carlisle's books and all the grandchildren were given cash bequests.

Richard Brown, a servant, was given $1,500 and a home at 2142 Ward place northwest; James Magruder, another servant, was given $1,000 and a house at 1147 Twenty-third street northwest. Other employes who were given portions of the estate were Margaret Gannon, $1,000; Howard A. Thomas, $500; Catherine Fair, $500 and Catherine Reilly, $2,500.

All but $43,000 of the estate is made up of real estate, the rest being composed of cash, stocks, bonds and other securities.

Service Chiefs Discuss Gains In U. S. Work

Management Society Parley Hears of New Viewpoint of Officialdom.

In what may become an historic meeting, the Society for the Advancement of Management yesterday gathered to discuss means of making Federal Government administration more scientific. It was the first of its kind in Washington.

Fifty bureau heads swapped information and data at the Raleigh Hotel on how they have made over their viewpoint on Federal business management, basing their budgets on work accomplished rather than money spent, the latter being the traditional basis for centuries.

Dr. Charles A. Beard at the night session declared that "democracy, indeed civilization itself, rests upon administration" and advocated establishment of an Institute of Administration in Washington which would be independent of the Federal Government.

Advocates Journal.

Such an institute, Dr. Beard said, should publish a journal in which employes of the Government could voice their ideas for improving its administration without any red tape restrictions.

Dr. Beard said that while he did not think the President's governmental reorganization program was perfect it had his support. "It is better than anything yet proposed by a President," Dr. Beard said. He added that features of the program which would establish a career service in the Government had his whole hearted indorsement.

He is doubtful, Dr. Beard said, of the wisdom of placing quasi-judicial bodies under Cabinet officers. He said he is opposed to creation of a Department of Public Works.

Col. George D. Babcock, management engineer for the Rural Electrification Administration, emphasized the importance of evaluating "mental fatigue" in any personnel disability program.

Dr. William E. Mosher, of Syracuse University, summarized the aims and deeds of the organization in his opening remarks. He said:

"A new chapter is opening up since 1933 in the administration of Government as a science and as an art. The Federal Government has made tremendous progress in the past few years. A survey we made in 1924 shows in comparison with one made in 1934 the remarkable advance made."

New Promotion Basis.

"Administrative promotions are really being made on a basis of merit and qualification, and subexecutives are rising through merit to top jobs once filled by political appointments. The 'career service' is becoming an actuality. Both Roosevelt and Landon emphasized the need for it, and I believe both, given the same opportunity, would have acted the same.

"Eighty colleges in the United States at the present time are either forming or already have formed colleges of public administration. Harvard has taken a lead in providing courses in Government leadership."

Control of work through work units as a measure, rather than dollars, is the keynote of efficient management, he said, adding that "relatively little attention has ever been paid to scientific budgeting in the Government. Not one-twentieth as much consideration has been given to measurement of work done as dollars spent in the past."

He said that the movement is spreading rapidly through municipal Governments, the most significant impetus being the result of a schedule prepared by the University of Chicago for the sanitation division of the City of Chicago. The schedule has been adopted in 40 other cities, he stated.

Fourteen Federal officials heading such divisions as Forestry Service, the Rural Electrification, Labor Statistics, Postoffice, etc., told how they had revamped their accounting and budgeting systems in line with modern business theories.

Roberts Likely Choice to Head Lawyers Guild

Washington Expected to Be Chosen as National Headquarters.

Selection of William A. Roberts, former People's Counsel of the District, as its first president, and of Washington as national headquarters, loomed yesterday as strong probabilities as the National Lawyers Guild opened its first annual convention.

Headed temporarily by Frank P. Walsh, the newly organized group of liberals in the legal profession will elect permanent officers at the closing session Monday. At that time, or possibly sooner, action will be taken on the headquarters city, it is believed.

A movement to draft Roberts, now engaged in private practice here, for the presidency of the guild is gaining momentum, it was learned. More than 600 lawyers representing 38 States, Puerto Rico, the Canal Zone and the District are attending the four-day convention.

Three Chairmen Named.

At a meeting of the executive committee yesterday, President Walsh appointed Lee Pressman, of Chicago; Judge John P. Devaney, of Minneapolis, and Judge Robert W. Kenny, of Los Angeles, as chairmen of the committees on the constitution, resolutions and nominations, respectively.

Members of the constitution committee are S. John Block, Telford Taylor, Jerome Helliestein, Joseph Noonan, Walter Fisher, Felix S. Cohen, Irving J. Levy, Louis McCabe, Francis Goodale and Bailey Stanton.

Resolutions committee: Theodore Lamb, Osmond K. Fraenkel, George I. Davis, Ruth Weyant, Thomas Egan, James Rowe, George Leonard, Thomas I. Emerson, Phillip Nichols, Isadore Polier, Jerome Walsh and Harry Sacher.

Nominations committee: Henry T. Hunt, Jerome Frank, Paul Kern, Judge Justine Wise Tulin, Charles Houston, Judge William H. Holly, Herbert Ehrman and Ernest Cuneo.

Barkley to Speak.

At the first general session today at the Hotel Washington speakers will be Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky; Representative John E. Rankin, of Mississippi; Walsh and Roberts. The Rev. Charles A. Hart, of Catholic University, will deliver the invocation.

"A Layman's Challenge to the Lawmakers, the Lawyers and the Courts" is the subject of an address to be given at an informal dinner tonight by Raymond Clapper, Scripps-Howard columnist. Senator Homer T. Bone, of Washington, will respond for the lawmakers; Morris L. Ernst, of New York, for the lawyers, and Judge Devaney for the courts.

Bramhall Takes Oath As Chief Police Clerk

Walter F. Bramhall, 32-year-old law student, and junior administrative assistant in the AAA, was sworn in yesterday as chief clerk of Police Court.

Bramhall, who attends the National University Law School, succeeds Frank A. Seebring, who has acted as chief clerk for the past 30 years. Seebring, according to official reports, retired because of ill health. Bramhall will take up his duties as chief clerk March 1.

Viaduct Paving Job Awarded to Wilmoth

Proposals of the Wilmoth Paving Co., Tower Building, Fourteenth and K streets northwest, to pave and repave approaches to the old and new Benning Viaducts on Benning road northeast were accepted yesterday by Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways.

Construction costs were estimated by the company at $29,966.50.

Money Shrinks, Too, In Laundry Process

Newark, N. J., Feb. 19.—Two laundresses were under arrest today on a charge of a male customer they washed his shirts too thoroughly.

The complain was a matter of unusual shrinkage.

His 14 shirts came out of a washing machine in good shape, the plaintiff conceded. But six hours later he remembered something else he had sent to the laundry—$1,250 in one of the shirt pockets.

The laundresses looked in the machine, said they found $550. The other $700, it seems, came out in the wash.

Louis Rouleau, D. C. Architect, Is Dead at 41

Fails to Recover Following Pneumonia Attack; Rites Tuesday.

Louis T. Rouleau, 41, well-known Washington architect, died yesterday at his home, 15 St. Andrews lane, Silver Spring, Md., from complications which followed pneumonia. He had been ill a month, but was apparently recovering.

A native of Washington, Mr. Rouleau spent his boyhood with his parents in France and Germany and was educated in schools in France. He was graduated in architecture from Catholic University. He passed most of his life in Washington, moving to Silver Spring several years ago.

Mr. Rouleau was known particularly for his work in designing apartment buildings. He was the architect for Woodley Towers in Washington and the Ambassador in Baltimore. During the World War he was a lieutenant in the Naval Air Service and was stationed at Chatham as a test pilot.

He was first vice president of the East Sligo Valley Citizens' Association, one of its organizers and a delegate to the Montgomery County Civic Federation from that group.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Margaret Huffman Rouleau, and four children, Wilfred, Louis, jr., James and David Rouleau. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Rouleau of Montreal, Canada, also survive.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday at 10 a. m. at Grace Episcopal Church, Woodside. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery. The body will remain at the Warner E. Pumphrey Funeral Home in Silver Spring until time for the services.

Weddells Head for U. S.

La Paz, Bolivia, Feb. 19 (A.P.).—Alexander W. Weddell, United States Ambassador to Argentina, and Mrs. Weddell arrived here today by plane en route to the United States.

House Passes $1,501,930,151 Appropriation

Record-Breaking Treasury-Postoffice Fund Bill Goes to Senate.

By the Associated Press.

A record-breaking $1,501,930,151 appropriation to finance the Treasury and Postoffice Departments for the next fiscal year won House approval yesterday and went to the Senate.

Although the measure passed without a record vote, debate over a "rider" to prevent use of any of the funds to pay salaries of departmental employes lent to Congressional investigating committees delayed its passage.

Inquiries now being conducted by two Senate committees would be most directly affected by the prohibition.

Ocean Airmail Provided.

In addition to routine expenditures, the bill provided for an outlay of $750,000 to permit establishment of this country's first trans-Atlantic airmail service. Plans call for commencement of two round trips weekly by an American-owned company about November 1. Negotiations also are underway to have a British company begin a similar schedule of flights about the same time.

Carrying $782,469,361 for the Postoffice Department and $718,485,790 for the Treasury, the bill's total exceeded last year's appropriation by $234,900,149 but the increase was occasioned entirely by an almost 50 per cent boost in the Social Security Board's old-age reserve account, for which $500,000,000 was provided this year.

Morgenthau Testifies.

Secretary Morgenthau testified during hearings on the bill that most of the reserve account and similar funds would be used to retire the public debt, estimating approximately $30,000,000,000 would be lopped off in the next 17 years.

The attack on the "rider" was led by Representative Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, who termed it an attempt to "gag the United States Senate." He sought to eliminate the section on a point of order but was overruled.

Representative Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia, a member of the House Appropriations committee, defended the prohibition as designed primarily to help enforcement of a law on the statute books since 1809.

5 Foreign Express Agents Tour D. C.

So that they may learn how American travel bureaus work, five American Express representatives from Rome, Luzerne, Paris, Berlin and Amsterdam, today are making a tour of Washington.

The men Cav. Guido Sergi, Italian; H. A. Sormani, Swiss; M. P. La Farge, French; Claude L. Steele, German, and A. Wildshut, Dutch, will go from here to Baltimore and Philadelphia. On Friday they will sail for their homes.

D. C. Motor Club Plans Legislation

Strengthening the safety-responsibility law and passage of a compulsory motor vehicle inspection measure are principal objectives in a four-point legislative program adopted yesterday by the A. A. A. District of Columbia Motor Club's advisory board.

The program was drafted by the special legislative committee and submitted to the board by Bishop James E. Freeman, chairman of the committee. The program also calls for Federal-aid contributions to the District and for a law requiring the recording of automobile liens in the Traffic Director's office.

Approval of Capt. H. C. Whitehurst's plan for street and bridge improvement was voiced by the board, which stressed the need for bettering physical conditions under which Washington traffic operates.

Special guests at the meeting, presided over by Isaac Gans, acting chairman, were Leonard E. Kolmer, general manager, and Palmer Nickerson, counsel, of the Automobile Club of Maryland. Nickerson, discussing the legislative program of the A. A. A. Club in Maryland, urged that all members of the District Club residing in Maryland, join in the fight against threatened diversion of $7,600,000 of special motor vehicle taxes to non-highway purposes.

Mrs. Rebecca Gans Dies in Baltimore

Mrs. Rebecca Gans, sister-in-law of Isaac Gans, member of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, died Thursday at her home in Baltimore, it was learned here last night.

Mrs. Gans had been ill several months. She was the widow of William Gans, formerly of the firm of Saks & Co. She is widely known in Washington for her work with charitable organizations.

Surviving Mrs. Gans are a son and a brother, both of Baltimore. Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. from the residence, 1902 Eutaw place, Baltimore.

Rep. Smith Introduces Bonneville Dam Bill

By the Associated Press.

Representative Smith (Democrat), Washington, introduced a bill yesterday to carry out President Roosevelt's proposal to place disposal of Bonneville Dam power in the hands of an administrator. The dam is located on the Columbia River between Oregon and Washington.

Smith said his bill was merely "provisional."

"Ultimately all projects in the Columbia River Basin will be placed under an authority similar to that in the Tennessee Valley."

Rites Set Today For Carl Dow, Insurance Man

General Agent, 36, Dies After Long Illness; Was 'Y' Teacher.

Carl S. Dow, general agent for the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Co., died yesterday at his home, 3215 Forty-fifth street northwest, after a long illness. He was 36.

Dow, prominent in insurance circles here, was born in Assyria, Mich., July 17, 1900. His early education was obtained in Hillsdale, Mich. After his graduation in 1923, from the Wharton School of Business and Finance in the University of Pennsylvania, he came to Washington as an associate in the insurance department of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Shortly thereafter he entered the underwriting field and for nine years represented the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co. In 1932 he was appointed general agent of the Washington office of Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Co.

Active in Drama.

A member of Delta Sigma Rho, honorary forensic society, he had been active in both dramatics and debating at the University of Pennsylvania. He was also president of the Washington Alumni Chapter of Delta Sigma Phi, secretary-treasurer and later president of the District of Columbia Club of the University of Pennsylvania; vice president in charge of the southern district of the Associated Pennsylvania Clubs, president of the Washington chapter of the Chartered Life Underwriters and a member of the board of the Underwriters' Association.

At one time Dow had been president of the Young People's Service League of Epiphany Church. At the time of his death, however, he was a member of St. Alban's Church. During the period of his residence here he gave courses in life insurance at both George Washington University and the Y. M. C. A.

Dow is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Dow, of Hillsdale, Mich.; his widow, Mrs. Alice Hulce Dow, and two children, Rowland, 8, and Neal, 3.

Funeral Rites Today.

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p. m. today in the Epiphany Episcopal Church. The Rev. Dr. Ze Barney Phillips will officiate. Burial will be in Hillsdale, Mich., on Monday.

The Rev. Charles T. Warner of St. Alban's Episcopal Church, and the Rev. Albert Lucas, headmaster of St. Alban's School, will assist Dr. Phillips.

Honorary pallbearers will be Rex. Rafferty, Eastern supervisor of Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Co.; James A. De Force, president of Chartered Life Underwriters; Vernon Holleman, president of the managers group of the Underwriters' Association; Dr. Walter H. Jaeger, national president of the Delta Sigma Phi Fraternity; the Rev. Albert Lucas, president of the District of Columbia Club of the University of Pennsylvania; A. L. Baldwin, H. Lawrence Choate, E. N. Lewis, Dr. John F. Preston, Alan Maphis, Earl Sapp, Darrell Smith and Paul Sleeper.

Former Governor Of Georgia Dies

Atlanta, Feb. 19 (AP).—Dr. Lamartine G. Hardman, 80-year-old former Governor of Georgia, died of a heart ailment yesterday at Emory University Hospital.

The Commerce, Ga., physician, businessman and politician was elected Governor in 1927 after two unsuccessful races. He served two terms. On his eightieth birthday, April 14, 1936, President Roosevelt sent him a congratulatory message.

Dr. Hardman's wife, one son, L. G., jr., and three daughters, Mrs. Linton Collins, of Washington; Miss Sue Colquitt Hardman, a medical student at John Hopkins University, Baltimore, and Miss Emma Griffin Hardman, a college student in Lynchburg, Va., survive.

Princess Thurm and Taxis, Uniontown-Born, Speaks Against Socialism, Social Registers

"You take my cook," remarked the Princess Thurm und Taxis in her first and only press interview yesterday at the Mayflower. My cook is dissatisfied—not with social conditions in the world, mind you, but with her face.

"She said to the second maid: 'If I only had a face like the princess'.' Isn't that extraordinary? She doesn't want my money. She doesn't want to travel all over the continent and own 40 trunksful of clothes. No. She wants a different face. Her face is too thin. She must have a fatter face. She doesn't want a car or a home or a lover. Just a new face.

"Well! I told her I might take her to New York some day and have her face stuffed with wax and make it fatter. But you know that's ridiculous. It would only sag sooner or later. Besides, her nose is too broad, her mouth too wide, to ever look decent even if her face was fatter.

"That's the Way It Is."

"That's the way it is in the world. Everybody wants something which is absolutely impossible to achieve. The sit-down strikers in Flint, the sit-down strikers in France, the revolutionists in Spain—they all want something they never can get. Why?

"Because the world is made up of individuals. There are no masses. Everybody aspires to something different. The have-nots want what the haves own. But it's too silly. When they get it—assuming they could—they wouldn't be satisfied. Look at me. I have everything, theoretically, that every woman wants. Title, castle, money, leisure. But it doesn't mean anything. The only genuine satisfaction comes from within.

"That's why socialism is so ridiculous. If the have-nots got hold of everything the haves own, the whole structure would collapse. Capital is needed to carry forward the industry which creates jobs for the workers. Without capital, where would the world be?"

Solitary Pearl Ring.

The princess, dressed in a smart Burgundy wool suit, tucked a strand of brown hair over a pearl earring, toyed with a pearl necklace with fingers brightened by a huge solitary pearl, and went on.

"I am so sorry everyone is dissatisfied. But the solution isn't in turmoil and strife. Everyone should work together, co-operate. I believe the workingman should be paid what he earns, but no more. Some of them want to destroy capital entirely. If they do, they will destroy themselves.

"Washington fascinates me. Architecturally it is the most beautiful city in the world. But that isn't it. The thing that catches my fancy is the politeness and charm of everyone. The bellboys, the diplomats, everyone you meet is polite and extremely well-mannered—and, mind you, in the very center of all the political arguments and struggling in America. It's paradoxical, so much consideration for strangers in the midst of a fight."

The princess had a few words to say about the Social Register and Almanach de Gotha and Burke's Peerage. She seemed to think they are purely inconsequential. "They asked me to list my name in the Social Register. Why should I? It's a money-making proposition. You have to pay to get it in. Not cash, but you buy the book afterward, so it's the same thing. And then if you do something they don't like they toss you out. What kind of a register is that?"

WPA vs. Sound Movies.

She got back to socialism again in this wise:

"I went to a picture show out in Pennsylvania, a 25-cent movie. Well, there were so many WPA workers in there with their babies I couldn't hear a thing. They brought babies of all sizes and all noises. I don't know yet whether it was a good picture or not. But that's your dole system for you. WPA workers spending a whole afternoon in a theater."

The princess, who was born Lyda Nichols in Uniontown, Pa., did not explain how she knew they were all WPA workers. She said she had first married Gerald Fitzgerald, Irish nobleman, "but that was all ended 30 years ago." Fitzgerald left her a fortune. She then married his serene highness, the Prince Thurm Taxis, of a reigning Hungarian royal house. He is since deceased.

"There are some 25 princesses of the name," she stated, "so the title doesn't mean as much as it might seem to. The only things that mean anything to me are my children. They're all different. One is charming, one is handsome, one is brilliant. I give them $7 a day apiece to live on and they're satisfied. They are philosophical. All they ask of life is the simple things and a chance to think. One of them speaks in verse. But always! It's unbelievable. Nobody can understand how he does it. He forgets everything he says the minute he says it and it's all lost."

The princess has been visiting in Washington for two days. She likes America because of its plumbing. She may go to Florida today, or perhaps to New York or perhaps to Uniontown. It's hard to say. She visited the White House and shook hands with Mrs. Roosevelt. She smelled a fresh gardenia languidly, threw a silver fox fur around her throat, and started for Alexandria for tea.

Ohio Minister Guest Speaker At D. C. Church

Dr. Long, of Toledo, to Preach at Presbyterian Church.

Dr. R. Lincoln Long, minister of the Collingwood Avenue Presbyterian Church, Toledo, Ohio, will be guest speaker at New York Avenue Presbyterian Church tomorrow. He will preach at both morning and evening services.

Dr. R. S. Bassler, curator in the Smithsonian Institution, will speak at the 6 p. m. meeting of the C. E. Society. Dr. Bassler, who is also professor of geology at George Washington University, will speak on "Science and Our Growing Appreciation of God." Helen Friis will lead the discussion.

Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, former pastor of the church, who is now minister of the Collegiate Church of St. Nicholas in New York, will deliver the Lenten message at a special prayer service Wednesday night.

Covenant-First. "The Golden Altar of Prayer" will be the subject on which Dr. Albert Joseph McCartney, pastor, will preach at 11 a. m. services tomorrow. Miss Elizabeth Langsford will lead the discussion on "Sending the Light" at the meeting of the Covenant Fellowship at 7 p. m. in the chapel. Dr. McCartney will address the Westminster Club at their 7 p. m. meeting on "The Origin and Organization of the Church." Led by Bryan Ogden, jr., the Intermediate Group will discuss "Outstanding Missionaries Today."

Central. Dr. James M. Taylor, pastor, will begin a Sunday morning series of sermons on "Why I Believe" tomorrow morning. His first topic will be "Why I Believe in the Bible." At the evening service the pastor's sermon will be on "The Power of the Spirit in the Christian Life."

French Congregation—The Rev. Frank Andre Liotard, pastor, will preach at 4 p. m. services in New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

Metropolitan—Dr. Freeley Rohrer, pastor, will preach tomorrow morning on "A Christian Gentleman." At 6 p. m. a group of young people will present a worship service on the theme "The Courage of Consecrated Giving," which will be illustrated by a religious play, "The Lord's Acre." In the cast are Mr. and Mrs. J. Carl Spivey, Julia Bell, Alice Robinson, Florence Boutchyard and Edith Daddyman.

Gunton Temple—The Rev. Bernard Braskamp, D. D., pastor, will preach at 11 a. m. on "Examining Our Religious Life."

Chevy Chase—"Then Live It" will be the subject of Dr. J. Hillman Hollister's sermon tomorrow morning.

Westminster—The Rev. Harry V. Porter, pastor, will deliver a morning sermon on "Does God Care?" The senior society of the Chrisfian Endeavor will conduct the evening worship and present "George Washington as a Christian."

U. S. Average Age Creeping Higher

By the Associated Press.

The Census Bureau reported yesterday that the Nation's population as a whole "is slowly, but persistently, growing older."

It said the median age—that of persons at the mid-point of all reported ages—stood at 27.6 years in 1935 compared with 26.4 in 1930, 25.2 in 1920 and 18.8 in 1850.

In 1935, 61.5 per cent was 21 years or older. This compared with 59.4 per cent in 1930 and 57.6 per cent in 1920.

Of the 127,341,300 aggregate population in 1935, 64,161,000 were male and 63,180,300 were female, or 101.6 males to each 100 females.

Wisconsin Court Reform Proposed

Madison, Wis., Feb. 19 (AP).—Progressive Party leaders regarded Gov. Philip F. La Follette's plan for judicial reform yesterday as additional evidence of a common legislative viewpoint shared by La Follette and President Roosevelt.

The Governor has proposed voluntary retirement for Wisconsin Supreme Court and circuit court judges at half pay upon reaching 65 years of age.

On numerous occasions, party leaders said, the Governor and the President have drawn upon each other's ideas.

Gov. La Follette's plan permits him to appoint two of seven Supreme Court justices and 10 of 20 circuit court judges but all would have to run for office at a succeeding election because no Wisconsin judge may serve indefinitely by appointment.

Your Prospects Feel That Way Too!

YOU don't welcome new ideas at the fag end of the afternoon. You're tired out—ready to relax and call it a day. The time to take up new projects is in the morning, when you are fresh and alert and when your decision can be followed by action the same day.

Your prospects feel that way, too. They are tired out by the business of the day, whether office work or housekeeping. Evening hours are for relaxation.

Place your advertising message before Washington's able-to-buy families in the morning. Their minds are fresh and receptive. They are accustomed to planning the day's activities in the morning. Your sales message will get more interested attention and immediate action if it reaches the prospects when their minds are keyed to business rather than to rest.

Major Changes In Navy Ranks Are Approved

Adm. Hepburn Retained; 19 Rear Admirals in Transfers.

Annual changes in Navy high commands, affecting 19 rear admirals and retaining Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn as commander in chief of the fleet, were approved yesterday by President Roosevelt.

The announcement stated that the following ranking flag officers, in addition to Admiral Hepburn, would contniue in their present duties, commanding major units afloat: Admiral Claude C. Bloch, commander, battle force, United States fleet; Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, commander in chief, Asiatic fleet; Vice Admiral William T. Tarrant, commander, scouting force; Vice Admiral Edward C. Kalbfus, commander, battleships, batlle force; Vice Admiral Frederick J. Horne, commander, aircraft battle force.

Seven officers stationed at the Navy Department here were included in the orders. Rear Admiral John D. Wainwright, president of the board of inspection and survey, will take command of Battleship Division No. 3; Rear Admiral Harry L. Brinser, now commanding Cruiser Division No. 4, scouting force, will take his place in the Navy Department.

Rear Admiral William S. Pye, now Assistant Chief of Naval Operations, will be assigned to duty commanding destroyers, scouting force, succeeding Rear Admiral James O. Richardson, who will be the new Assistant Chief of Naval Operations.

Rear Admiral Harold Stark, Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance, will command Cruiser Division No. 2, battle force, being relieved by Rear Admiral Andrew C. Pickens, now chief of staff of commander in chief, United States fleet.

Rear Admiral Ralston S. Holmes, at present chief of staff of the commander, Battle Force, will become director of Naval Intelligence, relieving Capt. William D. Puleston, who is retiring from active duty.

Capt. Herbert F. Leary, now director of fleet training, Office of Naval Operations, will succeed Rear Admiral Holmes as chief of staff of the commander, Battle Force.

Other Changes Listed.

Other orders in yesterday's announcement include: Rear Admiral Wat T. Cluverius, now commander Base Force, to commandant Fourth Naval District, with headquarters at Philadelphia, relieving Rear Admiral William C. Watts, who will command the Base Force.

Rear Admiral Edward B. Fenner, commander cruisers, Scouting Force, has been appointed commandant of the Thirteenth Naval District on the West Coast. He will succeed Rear Admiral Thomas T. Craven, who will retire from active service.

Rear Admiral Joseph K. Taussig, commander, Battleship Division 3, will relieve Rear Admiral Fenner as commander cruisers, Scouting Force.

Rear Admiral Clark H. Woodward, commander destroyers, Battle Force, will become commandant Third Naval District, following a brief tour of duty here on the Navy's general board. Rear Admiral Harris Laning, whom Woodward succeeds as commandant of the Third Naval District, will retire from active duty in the fall.

Rear Admiral Walter S. Anderson, formerly Naval Attache at the American Embassy in London, will become commander, Cruiser Division 4. Rear Admiral Julius C. Townsend, commander of Cruiser Division 2, Battle Force, is ordered to be commander, cruisers, Battle Force. He is relieving Rear Admiral Walter N. Vernou, whose new assignment has not yet been announced.

Rear Admiral George F. Neal, commander Minecraft, Battle Force, has been ordered to duty as head of the Pacific Coast Section, Board of Inspection and Surveys. His present post will be taken by Capt. David W. Bagley, now in command of Destroyer Squadron 20, Scouting Force. Capt. Bagley has been selected for promotion to the grade of rear admiral.

Capt. David M. LeBreton, who has been selected for promotion to the grade of rear admiral, will become Chief of Staff of the Commander in Chief, United States Fleet. Capt. LeBreton is now Chief of Staff, commandant Fourteenth Naval District, Pearl Harbor, T. H.

Admiral Hepburn, who is continuing as Commander in Chief United States Fleet, assumed that post on June 24, last year. Appointed to the Naval Academy from Pennsylvania in 1877, he makes his permanent home in Richland, Ellicott City, Md. Awarded a Distinguished Service Medal for his World War service, he has held Navy high commands since 1919, when he became Assistant Chief of the Bureau of Engineering here.

Once Was Naval Adviser.

A member of the American delegation at the three-power conference for limitation of naval armament in Geneva, in 1925 and 1926, he was naval adviser to the American representation at the naval conference in London in 1930. Previous to his present command he was commander, Scouting Force, following promotion to the rank of rear admiral.

Rear Admiral Thomas T. Craven, who will reach the retirement age this August, makes his home in Washington, although appointed to the Naval Academy in 1891 from Tennessee. Attached to the U. S. Naval Aviation Forces in France during the World War, he received the Distinguished Service Medal for his service. His previous services have included commander, battleships, Battle Force, commandant, Ninth Naval District and Yangtze Partol of the Asiatic Fleet. He was appointed to his present post, commandant of the Thirteenth Naval District, on March 10, 1935.

A native of Illinois, Rear Admiral Laning is a veteran of the Spanish-American and World Wars, being awarded the Navy Cross for his World War service. He also has been awarded the Medal and Diploma Fifth Olmpiad by the King of Sweden. He assumed his present station, commandant of the Third Naval District, April 20, 1936.

Capt. Puleston, who has served as Director of Naval Intelligence since 1934, is retiring from active service. An appointee to the Naval Academy in 1898 from Florida, he served on the staff of the Commander in Chief, Asiatic Fleet during the World War, and later was ordered to duty with the naval forces operating off of Queenstown, Ireland, in the submarine zones. For that service he was awarded the Navy Cross.

Wheeler Calls 'Progressivism' To Arms Against Court Plan

Asks "People" as "Dictator."

Wheeler in a slashing speech advised the President to "trust the people," declared the "liberals of America have come this far by trusting the people," and concluded:

"If there must be a dictator in America, I nominate the American people for dictator."

The Montanan also turned his fire on Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, ironically referring to Cummings' recent complaint of "unfriendly voices" on the air that "have vexed our ears with insensate clamor."

"A Pity to Vex Him."

"So they vexed the Attorney General," said Wheeler. "What a pity to vex him! And he calls the voice of America's millions 'insensate clamor.' We differ with him and therefore he says we are unfriendly. Are we to understand that only those who agree are to be called friends?

"What unrealized arrogance that reveals! 'On what hath this, our Caesar, fed, that he hath grown so great!"

Wheeler referred to Cummings' "pride of authorship," and declared that if his colleague, the late Senator Thomas J. Walsh, who preceded Cummings in the Attorney General's office, had lived "I would not be addressing you tonight." He said Walsh was "a true progressive, not a political progressive," and "the trail of true progressivism is long but it is right."

Speaks for "Liberals."

"I believe I speak for the liberals of America," continued the Montanan, "when I say that true liberalism is opposed to one-man power, always defends the rights of the people, always stands for fair play, always opposes indirection, always stands on the merits of its cause, always insists on the due expression of the will of the people."

Wheeler said he agreed social legislation is needed, that the court has remained a bar to such legislation, and that the courts have "usurped" legislatiye powers. Then he asked:

"Is there anyone that is so naive as to believe that the placing of six new men upon the Supreme Court is going to correct the evils of which we complain?"

Attacks "Promises."

He said that only if promises were exacted in advance could there be any certainty on how the new justices would vote, and "if promises are exacted it would form a structure on which dictatorship might be reared."

The Montanan referred only once to the proposed constitutional amendment he has jointly offered with Senator Bone (Democrat), of Washington, to permit Congress to override Supreme Court decisions, with a congressional election intervening.

He denied the amendment process was necessarily a long one.

"I am weary of ill-advised and poorly-conceived expedients," he said. "If this Administration seriously desires reform, let us face the problem now."

Plan "Mild," Ashurst Says.

Senator Ashurst, judiciary committee chairman, who introduced the President's bill in the Senate, opened a lenghty speech on the Senate floor with a statement that he "marveled" at the "mildness" of the Administration plan.

Ashurst followed Senator Guy Gillette, Iowa Democrat, who had explained his own bill for requiring a 7-to-2 majority by the Supreme Court before a statute could be invalidated.

The Arizonan replied he would oppose any plan to "dictate" to the court by requiring a two-thirds or even a 7-to-2 vote of the justices. He said he also would resist any bill that would rob the court of its powers to invalidate acts of Congress, and for this reason would oppose the Wheeler-Bone amendment. Finally he denied the President's plan either "tinkered" with the Constitution or curbed the court's powers.

"No Transfer" of Powers.

"There is nothing," Ashurst said, "in this bill that in any way restricts the Supreme Court acting as it has in the past. There is no suggestion of a transfer of any of the judicial powers of the Government from the court to the Congress."

He recalled that an American Bar Association committee in 1921 recommended an increase in Supreme Court membership to 11 members, and said the report was adopted.

He said it was "insulting" to suggest that the President might "presume to suggest" to any of the proposed new justices how they should decide a case.

Inconsistency Suggested.

At one point, Senator Josiah W. Bailey (Democrat), North Carolina, interrupted Ashurst to remind him he had once said it was a "ridiculous, absurd, unfair and unjust criticism" to suggest that the President planned an increase in high court membership.

Ashurst replied that he had never prided himself on consistency. He recalled Emerson had said "a foolish consistency is the vice of little minds and little statesmen." Conceding that he had "many faults," he said his opinions were always "his own" and concluded:

"If any Senator wishes to bring forward any accusation against me of inconsistency I am sure I shall not come out second best in the matter."

Called "Revolutionary."

Meanwhile, Labor's Non-Partisan League in a telegram to Dr. George Gallup, director of the Institute of Public Opinion, expressed confidence that "as your poll reaches deeper into the great body of American people it will show that the citizens are decisively behind the President." The Gallup poll had shown a 53 to 47 opposition to court reform, as against 63 to 37 opposition in the fall of 1935.

Earlier yesterday, Dr. Hugh S. Magill, president of the American Federation of Investors, Inc., asserted in a statement that the court proposal was "revolutionary" and would "pack" the Supreme bench with justices who "presumably would conform to his will."

Representative Guyer in his radio speech last night said the President "to an unbelievable degree is a dictator and if armed with this law to increase the number of judges of the Supreme Court which he still insists upon, he will possess powers of dictatorship which no sane man a decade ago would have dreamed any President of the United States would ever covet and much less possess."

during the World War, and that several efforts have been made recently by private interests to buy the property, but that he has declined the offers.

Plant Needs Repairs.

He said the plant is well located for the production of steel plate, but that some of the machinery had been sold and it was his impression the plant would have to be retooled before it could be used. He said possibility of reopening the factory had not been discussed, so far as he knew.

The President said he had not discussed the British defense program. Asked to what extent the American naval policy should be predicated on British strength, he said the policy should be based on an adequate national defense.

In connection with the steel situation Mr. Roosevelt was asked whether he approved the principle of the Walsh-Healey act. He said in reply that he favors very distinctly the labor provisions of the act and would like to see them applied over the country.

Miss Perkins, Roosevelt Talk.

The President said he did not know what steps would be taken to assure the Navy of steel supplies, but emphasized the need for action soon.

Secretary of Labor Perkins conferred with the President twice later, once about noon and again in the Cabinet meeting, but said the Walsh-Healey act was not discussed. Late in the day she was in conference with Assistant Secretary Edward F. McGrady, who has been doing much of the negotiating for the department over the steel problem.

Miss Perkins, at the White House, told newspapermen that prospects for obtaining steel bids appeared to be improving. She said there was hope of a change in the steel companies' attitude.

Walsh Defends Steel Industry.

Navy yards will be required to halt work in the latter part of March unless steel is obtained, officials have said.

At the Capitol, Chairman Walsh, Massachusetts Democrat, of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, said he did not feel the steel industry should be blamed as "being a party to any interference or blocking of Government proposals to purchase steels."

"It is merely an unfortunate impasse which reasonable negotiations should adjust," he added.

Explaining the firmness with which the Federation of Labor is opposing exemption for the steel industry from provisions of the act, Green said the Federation had sponsored the measure and holds that the standards it sets up are "fair and reasonable."

Luther G. Welch, Rail Official, Dies

Luther G Welch, 71, special officer for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, whose ancestors settled in Anne Arundel County in 1667, died yesterday at his home in Laurel, Md.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 2:30 o'clock at the Welch home, burial will be in National Capital Memorial Park on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard near Laurel.

Mr. Welch is a descendant of Maj. John Welch, early settler in Anne Arundel County. In 1902 he was appointed a member of the Baltimore City police force and served in that capacity until 1918.

Surviving Mr. Welch are five children, Mrs. Marvin R. Shipley, Mrs. Clyde Miles, Miss Emily T. Welch, Luther Gassaway Welch and G. N. Welch.

Baker to Speak On Co-operatives

Jacob Baker, chairman of the President's commission on co-operatives, will make his first speech on the work of the commission Wednesday at 8 p. m. in the Interior Department auditorium.

Baker is a member of three Washington co-operatives, Washington Consumers Club, Konsum, Inc., and Rochdale Stores, Inc. As chairman of the President's commission he spent several months in Europe studying the co-operative movement. His subject Wednesday will be "Co-operatives in Europe and America." Marquis Childs, journalist and author, is chairman for the meeting.

G. M. Studies "Seniority" Plan.

Detroit, Feb. 19 (AP).—The United Automobile Workers of America pressed tonight for an agreement with General Motors Corporation providing "seniority based on length of service" for its members who are employed in the plants of the big automobile concern.

General Motors officials have indicated that any decision made in current conferences with union leaders, designed to compose differences unsettled in last week's agreement which ended widespread U. A. W. A. strikes, would be extended to apply to all employes. The negotiations were adjourned this afternoon until Monday.

An additional demand was formulated by union officials today when Wyndham Mortimer, first vice president, announced he would ask General Motors to "agree to discharge all known stool-pigeons."

Aroused by testimony of former undercover agents before the La Follotte Senate Committee's hearings at Washington, Mortimer said it demonstrates "that espionage is an inefficient and extravagant substitute for collective bargaining."

Commenting on an assertion by a witness that officers of a union local had been detective agency informants, Mortimer said that in some cases after members were exposed as informants they had "remained in the employ of the detective agency to get information for the union," and in such cases had "turned over all salary from the agency to the strike fund of the union."

Anderson, Ind., Feb. 19 (AP).—The Madison County grand jury, moving swiftly in an effort to fix the blame for the outbreak of a labor feud that brought military rule to Anderson, today indicted 19 men for rout and riot shortly after the military had given their custody to civil authorities.

The 19 indicted—all identified by Victor Reuther, organizer for the United Automobile Workers of America, as union members or sympathizers—had been military prisoners since their arrest following a clash between union and non-union forces last Saturday, in which shots were fired and several men wounded.

Only five of those indicted are from Anderson or vicinity. Thirteen are from Flint, Mich., and one from New York City.

After martial law was declared last Saturday National Guardsmen and State police halted a long caravan of automobiles en route here from Flint and ordered the occupants back to Michigan. Several of those arrested told authorities they had come from Flint to aid fellow union members.

In addition to the rout and riot charges, other indictments, charging malicious trespass, were returned against 16 of the men.

Blonde Terms Radio Fiddler TooFascinating

radio fiddle man, had once announced a marriage by him would be too severe a shock for his feminine public.

But, she said, she didn't pay any attention to that for at the very time he spoke she knew it was a jest.

He had, she explained, "that big beautiful smile all over his face."

The "big beautiful" smile, which she insisted somewhat tartly that everybody conceded to Rubinoff, was not often upon the fiddler's face during the proceedings. Indeed, upon occasion, his face was hidden in his hands.

With a show of high spirits Miss Garcia fought back today at all efforts of defense counsel to show she has been on unconventionally friendly terms with several men.

In the matter of the number of names on her mailbox, she said it was three, but when counsel insisted there were only two Peggy agreed to waive it as "a slip." She observed, while all concerned—save Rubinoff—had a little laugh, that perhaps even counsel had made a "slip" at one time or another.

Couldn't Place the Face.

As another of the various men brought forward by the defense was stood before her, she announced the name was familiar, but she couldn't place the face.

Finally, however, she remembered she had met him—his name was Joseph Van Dyke—in an employment agency. But she said she absolutely never did go with him to Virginia, nor to New Jersey, for that matter.

She screamed an indignant "never" to the insinuation she might have obtained money from him.

As to Rubinoff, she said she had had a high old time with him around town. There was the occasion, in "Tillie's Kitchen," in Harlem, when a musician honored the couple, she said, by composing a song upon the theme that the maestro was on hand "with his fourth blonde that week."

Again, in another night spot, she testified, Rubinoff allowed her to pose for a sketch by an "artist," calling her either "sweetheart" or "darling."

She said that upon another occasion Rubinoff had protested no other girl made him so "excited" as Peggy. As for that remark, however, she added:

"I didn't know what he meant."

mittee demanding a more efficient government influenced the Commissioners to appoint the citizens committee.

"We have been considering such action for some time," said Commissioner Hazen. "We want to keep our government on a business-like basis and we are calling in men with experience in business to see if we are wasting or duplicating efforts in any department."

No Tax Studies.

Commissioner Hazen said the committee would be told not to extend its study to finances. The whole purpose of the committee, he said, would be to determine whether the District government could operate more efficiently if it were reorganized. The committee will not be asked to study taxes or other income matters, he said.

One of the tasks of the committee, Hazen revealed, will be to determine whether the powers of the Commissioners should be increased.

The President of the Board of Commissioners emphasized, however, that the city heads would bring no influence to bear on the committee.

"The Commissioners will appear before the committee like ordinary witnesses," he said. "We will give them our ideas and they can do with them what they will."

Previous Reports Ignored.

Hazen said the committee's report would not meet the same fate accorded those of the Jacobs committee, the special committee comprising Lewis Douglas, then Budget Director; William A. Roberts, former people's counsel, and Daniel Donovan, District Auditor; the Brookings Institution reorganization report, and the reorganization report of the Bureau of Efficiency.

None of those investigations were initiated by the Commissioners and they sat complacently by while they were pigeonholed. Appointment of the citizens committee, it was said at the District Building, marks the first active step taken by the Commissioners toward reorganizing the local government.

France Changes Envoys.

M. Georges Bonnet is not a career diplomat as was his predecessor here, M. de Laboulaye. But the new French Ambassador's experience as minister of commerce, minister of finance and leading participant in many very important international conferences, will serve him in good stead in his present post. More and more it is international financial and economic problems which are crowding the attention of statesmen and governments and becoming the principal subject matter of diplomacy.

France has been well served by her envoys in the United States. The name of Jules Jusserand is still fondly remembered by the American people, as is that of Paul Claudel, whose reputation as a poet and dramatist preceded his arrival here as Ambassador. M. de Laboulaye, now leaving our shores, made many firm friends during his four-year stay in the Washington post and performed his duty with an ability which matched his perfect courtesy.

During recent years an underlying question in Franco-American relations has been that of the war debts. That question was, under existing circumstances beyond the capacity of M. de Laboulaye or any other individual to solve. Nevertheless the retiring Ambassador can take credit for the circumstance that during his tenure of office the Franco-American reciprocal trade agreement was negotiated and concluded and that the tripartite accord on monetary stabilization was reached.

These developments help to pave the way for that mutually satisfactory solution of the war debt question which M. Bonnet's talents and training equip him admirably to further. But Washington will hope that such tangled problems will not weigh too heavily upon the new French Ambassador. It will hope that he will here enjoy something of the delightful pleasure which his predecessors have given to us.

Pioneer In City Planning.

The death of Dr. John Nolen takes from the developing profession of city planning one of its earliest and most accomplished practitioners. During a very active career he laid down programs for 400 developments, scattered from Lewiston, Me., to Sacramento, Calif. Since 1913 he had been retained as a consultant by the several Federal agencies now turning the depression to advantage by introducing elements of beauty and design into the Nation's reviving building activity.

Dr. Nolen, as much as any other one man, sold the country the idea of city planning. He possessed an effective facility in impressing civic groups, principally chambers of commerce, with the desirability of integrating community development. He helped greatly in leading the public to broaden its concept of municipal design from parks and squares to embrace the community as a whole. Today the happy result is that planning is accepted generally the country over as a necessary preliminary to all public and most private construction.

Perhaps as fine a tribute as any to the sincerity and appeal of Dr. Nolen's work is the fact that his son, the director of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, is so ably and enthusiastically carrying forward the traditions of the father.

Holland Also Arms.

When the thrifty Dutch decide to spend their hard-earned guilders on such unproductive articles as battleships and bombing planes it is a clear indication that the world is in the grip of a fear psychosis.

The Netherlands has real cause for alarm. Despite the recent offer of Chancellor Hitler to guarantee the neutrality of the Dutch kingdom, the people of that nation are convinced their territory cannot be kept inviolate by paper guarantees alone. There is, of course, the protection they can expect from Great Britain, which will fight to prevent any great power from establishing itself along the dikes of Holland. Then there are the dikes which can be opened to flood the land in the path of an invading army. But in addition the government demands that the defense establishment of the kingdom be kept in good order.

Last year the States-General voted an additional $36,000,000 for modern airplanes, anti-aircraft guns and other defense purposes. This week, almost unanimously, the lower house of the Dutch Parliament voted to appropriate 95,500,000 guilders ($52,000,000) to make possible an expansion in the defense system.

It is not only the European situation which worries the peaceful people of the Netherlands. In southeast Asia the Dutch have an imperial domain 61 times the size of the mother country. Some day, they fear, they may have to fight to prevent an aggressive and land-hungry power from seizing these Dutch East Indies.

It may be, of course, that war clouds in the Far East and in Europe will blow away. When that happens the Dutch will again prune expenditures for armaments as they did after the World War. But until that day comes they plan to be ready, peaceful but armed, disturbed by the trend of events but determined to resist invasion at all costs.

Alternative Suggestions.

Most advocates of the President's plan to pack the Supreme Court are now willing to admit that the actual purpose of this so-called reform of the judiciary is to assure validation of social legislation that either has been or is likely to be declared unconstitutional. Because of this frankness it is becoming easier to discuss the proposal directly and dispassionately, without the irritation inevitably aroused by the lack of candor in Mr. Roosevelt's message.

As the debate progresses it becomes clear that the President's supporters are by no means a united group. Roughly speaking, they may be divided into two classes: those who applaud both his tacitly acknowledged objective and the surreptitious method chosen for achieving it, and those who sympathize with the aim, but accept the plan of packing the Court with extreme reluctance.

On the other hand, those opposed to the present program are similarly divided. Some would welcome an alternative plan to extend the regulatory powers of the Federal Government into fields which are reserved to the States. At the same time, they unequivocally denounce any proposal designed to make the Supreme Court subservient to the executive branch of Government. Finally, there is a group who have as little sympathy for the President's legislative aims as for his methods.

Those who are prepared blindly to follow the President's lead, arguing that the end justifies the means, have something in common with those who are entirely satisfied with the existing situation. Neither group has any interest in alternative plans for securing a reinterpretation or amendment of the Constitution. The intermediate groups, however, believing that some enlargement of Federal regulatory powers over economic and social activity is desirable, are anxious to canvass the possibilities of achieving that end in a way that does not irrevocably injure our existing constitutional system of checks and balances.

There is undeniable force to the contention that the changed conditions of modern industry justify a new and more liberal definition or conception of the powers that Congress may exercise under the commerce clause, the taxing power and other rather vague constitutional grants of power. There is growing recognition of the need for a national policy for agriculture, for flood control, for regulation of trade practices in our manufacturing industries. We are painfully conscious of that "twilight zone" within which neither the States nor the Federal Government seem to have authority to intervene to provide effective regulation of agricultural, commercial and industrial processes.

Viewpoints differ as to the extent to which Federal authority ought to be expanded. But it seems highly probable that a majority of the electorate would favor vesting much greater powers of control over industrial relationships and activities in the hands of the Federal authorities. A fundamental question before Congress is whether it shall assume with the President that the electorate has already expressed its wishes, or whether it shall favor the democratic procedure of testing popular sentiment by the relatively slow process of a constitutional amendment.

The Wheeler-Bone proposal for permitting Congress to override a decision of the Supreme Court by a two-thirds vote, after a congressional election in which the issue has been before the country, has the fundamental merit of being both frank and democratic. It is not a new scheme, having been broached in its essentials by James Madison. Its plan to vest ultimate sovereignty more clearly with the electorate confronts the major issue squarely and has much to commend it. Among the criticisms which will be made is the probability that under this scheme there would be delays that might be as great or greater than those entailed by relying upon the present methods of amending the Constitution.

Apart from the time element, however, a large number of people who favor greater centralization of power in the Federal Government are honestly perplexed as to how that can be accomplished by an amendment to the Constitution without completely breaking down the distinction between interstate and intrastate activities. Perhaps this cannot be done by any single general amendment. But it would seem entirely possible to pass specific amendments from time to time definitely bestowing upon the Federal Government powers denied to it by the Constitution.

Prof. Robert E. Cushman, of Cornell University, asks very pertinently whether the powers of Congress must "inevitably be construed to cover all the emerging problems calling for centralized control." He thinks that the Supreme Court ought not to be expected to stretch inflexible provisions of the fundamental law to coincide with the will of the Executive. If we do not like the way the Court draws the limit of governmental powers, he emphasizes, "it is quite possible to change the Court's job by defining those powers with some precision and sharpening the terms of the limitations." Certainly that is preferable to packing the Court to insure that it will stretch the fundamental law.

The White House is now putting on heat to drive the enlargement plan through. But it is evident that the Nation is not going to be stampeded into hasty action on an issue of such tremendous importance. Various alternatives to packing the Court have already been suggested; more may be expected to follow. Though they may seem to complicate they will really clarify the issue. For they illustrate how many practical alternatives exist to achieving desirable objectives by those dictatorial methods which are deeply repugnant to the American people.

A Case For Deliberation.

Following the recommendations of a special committee which made a report to him last December, President Roosevelt urges Congress to approve a plan for all-risk crop insurance applying in the initial year, 1938, to wheat only. The committee concluded, however, that it will be possible in time to establish actuarially sound systems of insurance covering other basic crops.

The importance of assembling accurate data of this sort and subjecting the material to painstaking analysis in order to arrive at the loss experiences of insured farmers is patent. Even after that preliminary work has been done and the amount of the premiums has been determined, the Government will undoubtedly encounter considerable opposition to any soundly administered plan that allocates the costs of crop insurance in strict accordance with ascertained risks. That is because a system of crop insurance to be really self-sustaining must exact much heavier proportionate payments from farmers on lands with highly variable yields liable to drought and flood hazards than from cultivators on lands where crop failures seldom occur.

Of course, this policy would be all to the good if it resulted in the abandonment of lands on which farmers are unable to make a decent living. But in practice the Government's requirements would probably mean that submarginal cultivators, like farmers on good lands, would simply remain outside the voluntary system of crop insurance, established presumably for their benefit.

It is also essential that the amount of insurance be limited to a certain percentage of the average yields as otherwise a premium would be placed upon incompetency and shiftlessness.

The fact that premiums and benefits under the proposed plan would be paid in kind would necessitate storage of insured crops, like wheat, in years of abundance. In accord with Secretary Wallace's "pet" plan for setting up an "ever normal granary," these stored stocks would be drawn upon to cover the losses of insured farmers in lean years—a process that would, it is argued, make for more stable prices. A good many objections have been raised to this granary proposal which is by no means essential to the insurance features of the plan. Congress should weigh these criticisms and reflect long and earnestly before committing the country to a system that might have most disturbing effects upon orderly marketing processes.

The experimental character of all-risk crop insurance—that is, insurance against the multiple disasters which cause crop failures—shows the need for thoroughgoing debate of the proposal on its merits. President Roosevelt has conveyed an unwarrented impression of urgency by the tone of his message to Congress. He has also hinted broadly, as he did in his communication on farm tenancy, that the Supreme Court stands as an obstacle to carrying out reforms on behalf of farmers that are "essentially national in scope and in administration." This strategy tends to emphasize the need for deliberation.

So far as crop insurance is concerned, there do not appear to be any constitutional obstacles in the way of the recommended plan. Certainly, the proposal to reorganize the Supreme Court does not need to be hastened in the name of tenant relief or crop insurance. These are long-range proposals that should be developed slowly, with modification as experience reveals their defects.

Neutrality.

From the Montreal (Que.) Star.

Naturally a people so fortunately placed (as the people of the United States) feel very confident that they need never be drawn into war unless their financial leaders see profit in it or their political leaders are seduced by wily Old World diplomats. But they were in a war, not so long ago. So they greatly desire to pass laws which will keep their financial leaders from sending out tentacles that may become entangled in the European war machine and their political leaders from losing their heads.

These are now largely visionary dangers. A far greater danger is that the insistent advertisement of American abstinence from war, no matter what the provocation, will encourage predatory powers to go farther than they otherwise would dare if there seemed a greater chance of the United States joining the forces of liberty and peace. Thus, their very loathing of war may bring war to their doors. And if anyone imagines that it will ever be safe to slap Uncle Sam across the face, he is in for a violent and painful surprise when he tries it.

Our Naval Needs.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Yes, the British are going to spend more than seven billion dollars, principally for naval armaments. Yes, we know that there is a tradition of "an American navy second to none." Of course we are one hundred per cent in favor of an adequate navy to protect the shores of our glorious nation from the invasion of any foreign power. Always, we stand ready to give our last dollar, yes, our last drop of blood to defend the stars and stripes of these United States of America.

But isn't it true, that American naval needs vary from those of Great Britain—that the blessed isolation of the happy American eagle offers a degree of safety not enjoyed by the unhappy British lion? Isn't it true also, that to match the program of Great Britain would involve, for the most part, increase in offensive rather than defensive armaments, and surely, the good neighbor contemplates no war but of defense? Don't you agree that war with England is inconceivable; that to match their navy ship for ship, gun for gun, man for man, involves no small amount of misguided national vanity?

We implore you, Mr. Admiral, and you, Mr. Secretary, and you, Mr. Congressman, and you, Mr. President, to take what you need of our unbalanced national bank account for guns that will rust before they are used, and ships that will be obsolete after a few brilliant maneuvers. But leave us a little, if you can, to educate the millions who can't read or write, to feed the millions who are still unemployed, to shelter the millions who are homeless or living in squalor, and to succor the millions who are sick in mind, body, and soul.

Advice For D. C.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I make a few suggestions in reference to the financial contract, now a law, existing between the Federal Government and the District of Columbia and any other future agreement between the same parties.

In any action taken by Congress to establish what shall be the sum the Federal Government shall pay as its share of the expense of the District of Columbia, authority should be given to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to bring suit against the Federal Government to establish and recover the large amount of money which Congress has failed to appropriate under the law (contract of 1878) which I understand has never been repealed, or the more recent law, if legal, under which the proportion the Federal Government should pay was reduced to 40 per cent instead of 50 per cent.

If the act of Congress making the proportion 40 per cent is legal, there is now due the District about $150,000,000. If the law of 1878 still prevails the amount due is over $250,000,000.

If this large amount should be collected (and it should) the District of Columbia would never more have to appear in a beggar's role, asking for this and that money to enable it to put the seat of government in condition to take care of its needs, not wants. These include schools, libraries, fire-fighting facilities, welfare work, police protection, etc., to say nothing of the need of proper housing of municipal government activities, which Congress dictates but for which it makes no provision.

I am not now a resident of Washington, having decided a few years ago to move to where I could exercise the great privilege of participating in the selection of proper persons to put into office to conduct our government and municipal activities, a privilege the disfranchised citizens of the District of Columbia are denied.

In the spirit of fair play for the District of Columbia, I respectfully submit this plea for prompt and proper consideration by those whose immediate concern and duty it is to right the wrong done to a great body of loyal citizens of these United States of America.

Christianity's Source.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Religion, of whatever kind, is often an excellent thing when confined within reasonable bounds and commonsense. When, however, claims are made which have no basis in fact but are pure fabrications, religion becomes not only a source of deceit but partakes of the nature of fraud in misleading the simple and controlling the mind and actions of men.

The true source of Christian belief is to be found in the Holy Scriptures—God's message to man. Substitutes which fail to conform to the Christian faith, as set forth in the Bible, are foreign to Christian truth. Hence a knowledge of the Bible and its teachings is essential in order to know the truth. In other words, "know the truth and the truth shall make you free."

C. L. U. Housing Conference.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Something has stirred in Washington in a place where a stir forward has real significance at this time.

I refer to the important conference on lower rents and low-cost housing which the Washington Central Labor Union has called for March 8.

Labor in town wants lower rents and "those are fighting words." Few people realize that the Central Labor Union probably represents more taxpayers and homeowners than all the citizens associations in Washington put together. Its paid-up membership of over 100,000 local trade unionists, are determined to get action in this matter of housing in Washington.

In every calamity, drought, flood and war we find some people getting the worst end of a bad situation. Government employes working for New Deal agencies have certainly gotten a "raw deal" so far as housing in Washington goes. In the main, they have been compelled to occupy shoddy housing at "sky the limit" prices.

Rents keep rising—11.5 per cent higher in December, 1936, than in December of 1935. Resentment keeps rising—100 per cent higher in December, 1 36, than in December, 1935.

And why shouldn't it? In a recent cost of living study the Works Progress Administration found living costs higher in Washington than in 59 other United States cities. Let me quote from this report, "the most expensive city in which to live among the 59 studies was Washington . . . In Washington, rents and the costs of food and miscellaneous items accounted for the high total costs. As a matter of fact, only in rents was Washington at the top of the list," etc. Think of a situation where rents in a city like Washington can exceed those of large metropolitan cities such as San Francisco, New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, St. Louis, etc.

All Washington, and especially labor, should wake up to a situation where such conditions are possible through close organization of financial and realty interests.

We hope this conference will do what it plans—organize the tenants, the real taxpayers, to fight for their very much neglected interests.

Here's to the Central Labor Union conference. We support it to the hilt. SIDNEY R. KATZ.

The "Poor Guy" Complex.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The labor-faking racket must be fine when people give up the ministry of the Gospel to get into it. And, by the way, if John L. Lewis and other labor leaders received only the pay of a day laborer for their efforts, how long would they be weeping tears and dripping blood over poor, downtrodden workingmen?

When I was a young reporter in New York I used to know a labor leader who so mesmerized me with his talk about the poor mine workers that I sincerely believed him to be sort of a commissioner from high heaven sent to protect day laborers from skinflint employers. He died suddenly and left about $175,000 that he cleaned up calling strikes and then stopping them. I wonder how much money these modern "leaders" have got salted away. Why doesn't the United States Senate call for the union books, their assessment data, etc., and find out how much Mr. Lewis has, for example. He's been sticking out his neck and chin—maybe it's time for somebody to swat him where it'll do good.

My own opinion is that the Government is ratted with people who are fairly obsessed with the "poor guy" complex. Take away their fat incomes and make them go to work and the world will be better off. Organized labor is 10 per cent on the up and up and 90 per cent graft and bluster, as I see it. Most employers are fair with their help.

Care Of Virginia's Needy Sick.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mrs. Elizabeth J. McSherry, whose letter appeared in The Post of February 16, is to be commended for attention and beneficence in the case of a needy sick Fairfax County woman recently—but may I say, as a native Virginian, that she has unfortunately gained an erroneous impression of our citizens and their interest in the care of needy and unfortunates.

It is the established policy of county governments throughout Virginia—including those of Arlington and Fairfax—to annually assess taxes for all county needs and purposes, and to set aside specified amounts estimated to care for the normal needs of all the poor and unfortunate, regardless of race, creed or color. Funds for hospitalization are included in these amounts. In addition to tax funds, the counties have Red Cross chapters which retain for local use a portion of the substantial amounts collected during annual drives. Furthermore, the above mentioned funds have, in recent years been augmented by annual donations to the Washington Community Chest by nearby Virginia county residents who have specified that such donations be turned over to authorities of Arlington and Fairfax for welfare needs.

All of these have been substantial sums and do not include the generous amounts allotted to these counties by the U. S. Government through such agencies as the FERA, which have also been spent for their needy and unfortunate citizens.

According to the Arlington County auditors report for 1935, $6,078.99 of county tax money alone was spent for welfare purposes—of this amount $2,774.40 for hospitalization of indigent persons. Report for 1936 states that $9,007.51 of county tax money was spent for welfare needs—amount for hospitalization not given. In addition to that amount, $4,805.26 tax money was spent for welfare superintendent's office and administration expenses.

Arlington County, the smallest in Virginia, is and has been throughout the depression, fortunate in not having any real serious unemployment crisis to meet. We have never had a large number of really indigent and needy persons to care for. It would seem, therefore, that with such abundant welfare funds available, no Arlington County citizen sick or distressed, should be forced to go without proper attention or hospitalization when occasion demands.

It is my belief that a call to the director of Public Welfare by anyone in distress, even only temporarily, will receive prompt, cheerful and satisfactory action. If the situation is found to be otherwise, it should be remedied immediately.

Dead End.

IF your ticket said "Row L" then you sat in "Row M" and so all along the alphabet. Because "Row A," for this week at least, is nothing but a trough of water—a tributary of the East River. And where the orchestra usually sits is lapped so realistically by little waves that even the most seasoned old landlubbers find their thoughts running fore and aft.

Ermine coats which usually postpone sweeping down the aisle until around 8:29 did their sweeping some 45 minutes earlier this week. Child-labor laws in the District are figuratively acting as stage hands, pulling the curtain down every night at 10 o'clock. That's so the little devilish dears, who find themselves at a Dead End, may be tucked into their beds comfy-like at a respectable hour. But somehow you get a feeling that after the show they all gang up and guzzle beer until 3 or 4 in the morning. Or maybe shoot up a couple of milk men peacefully pursuing their pre-dawn routes. They're that kind of kids—these brain children of Sidney Kingsley. Even their own mothers recognize them. But pretend they don't. They're that kind of mothers, see?

Unexpectedly, the lights go out though half of the audience is still at home, slipping its demi-tasse. They simply can't believe, my deah, that the show begins at the outrageous hour of 8. Surely the management must mean "eightish." Lightning bugs run up and down the aisles, followed by theater-loving Washingtonians. But they would not love the theater so much if they did not nove their demi-tasse more. So minks and foxes and beavers excuse themselves and crawl over you to their seats. Their faint apologies are drowned out by a fog horn. A woman giggles at the raucous sound and settles back in her sequins to watch the big sewer scene. The sequins send out naughty winks every time she sighs over the plight of the poor little slum rats.

A man behind me is chewing gum gummily. Between the smacks, I manage occasionally to catch a line or two that is being said on the stage. If I had a bird of paradise on my hat, I figured to myself, he wouldn't hesitate to ask me to remove the obstruction. If he didn't choke on the wad at intermission, I would ask him coolly, but courteously, if he would mind not chewing quite so loud. At least, during the big moments.

The curtain goes up. Norman Bel Geddes has done himself proud. There's the audience—warm, well-fed, rustling its program, cocked for entertainment. And there's the wrong side of the tracks, practically in the front yard of the first-nighters—dirty, distressing, evil. Spontaneous applause testifies to how dirty, how evil. This, then, is what is known as the "slum situation." The man behind me was impressed. He even stopped chewing for a moment. In the lull, boys' voices using washroom obscenity floated over the footlights. The audience shifted its relaxed posture and strained forward to catch every word that Sidney Kingsley wrote. A playwright making mud cakes, throwing them, splashing them over all who came to listen.

The effect is shocking. It's like trying to keep your eyes off a dog that has just been run over and finding that you can't.

This is a far cry from Kingsley's "Men in White." There is, however, this twin thread through both—man fighting for his right to live. Yet the men in white at least had a tangible enemy—disease. And to combat it they had knowledge, precedent, medicine, antiseptics, anesthetics. But this other—this fight these kids are waging against odds to which society has given such names as "crime," "poverty," "viciousness"—is unfair. The cards are too palpably stacked against them. Here are villians too intangible to be hissed.

Here is Gimpty, the cripple, with his fine unwarped ideals. He represents the faint voice of society, crying in the wilderness. But more than philosophy is needed; more than sketches of settlement houses; more than passionate protests from the passive. Law and order is here, too, passing occasionally through the muck-filled street, swinging a billy.

Almost before you realize it, the show is over. When the lights come on, you look around, a little ashamed that you have been "entertained" by such misery, such hopelessness. The ermine coats go back up the aisle. You'd like to sock those high-hat ones; maybe thumb you nose at the lady in sequins. The old social conscience is up in arms. Who said it couldn't happen here?

You turn to the man who had been chewing gum.

"You should 'a kept your trap shut. Who da hell d'ya tink ya are?"

Emergency's End.

HERBERT LEHMAN, the Governor of New York, who pays neither Federal nor State income tax on his salary of $25,000 a year, has declared an end to the emergency which required reductions in the pay of 110,000 employes of New York City whose base wage is $2,000 a year or more and who pay no Federal income tax on these salaries.

Many of them pay no State tax, either, although people in private business or private employ who live in Gov. Lehman's State have to pay both taxes on incomes in the same brackets. In fact, your correspondent knows a young woman earning one-tenth of Gov. Lehman's tax-exempt salary who pays both Federal and State taxes and is allowed no exemption for a younger sister's education because the sister is more than 18 and not a dependent in the strict legal sense.

Although the Governor sees the end of the emergency which compelled the reduction of tax-exempt salaries he does not yet see the end of the same emergency for those who provide his own $25,000 a year, including the young woman with the non-dependent but otherwise necessitous sister. The young woman still has the special privilege of contributing out of her salary an extra emergency income tax of 1 per cent imposed by Gov. Lehman for the period of the emergency.

• • • •

PERHAPS it is a mere coincidence that the Governor discovered a way to increase the salaries of 110,000 voters in the public service whose salaries already were nicely within the income tax brackets, but all exempt from Federal taxation and in many cases from State taxation as well. This is a mayoralty year in New York, and it is hard to see how this generosity to a well-paid mass of citizens, already enjoying an important advantage over the taxpaying types, will react against his party.

However, the Federal and State salary reductions have been restored, and as these are all exempt from one or both income taxes it were unkind, to say nothing of its being damned bad politics, to discriminate against the city employes.

Your correspondent observes an interesting reaction on the part of the dead-head element of the nation, the tax-exempt employes of the Federal, State, county and city governments, to the proposal that they should pay in their brackets on a common footing with those who support them. They have been exempt so long that they deem it outrageous to propose their inclusion in the tax group. Even though a person in private employ must pay taxes on an income of, say, $3,000 a year, a public employe, with his job protection and his pension benefits, nevertheless feels that he is the object of persecution or a hate campaign when it is suggested that he and his next-door neighbor should be treated alike.

THE SUBJECT is large and is confused by the fact that many States have no State income tax. Thus in Chicago and throughout Illinois the entire public pay roll—an amount which would be appalling if the totals were not hidden in purposely jumbled public records—is free of all income tax. In New York at least certain groups of State, county and city employes are nominally included in the State tax.

This applies only to salaries, of course, and not to graft from sand and gravel companies, dredging and construction companies, bonding and insurance business, gambling houses and brothels. In Chicago, of course, the revenue from gambling houses and brothels has always been important, and there, as in New Orleans, the local organization works in harmony with the great, beneficent whole of the national administration. The Government abandoned some indictments in New Orleans after Huey Long's death and the restoration of harmony.

New York, however, has an uncommonly hostile attitude toward a great group of commuters who live in New Jersey or Connecticut. These are Americans, but the New York income tax treats them about the same as the British or French government treats an American actor. An American living ten minutes away in New Jersey is not even allowed certain deductions which are extended to aliens living in New York City. He discovers that his tax is deducted by his employer without any consultation at all.

It is not surprising that Gov. Lehman believes the emergency is over. A man on a $25,000 salary exempt from all income tax is likely to take an optimistic view.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

The Garble Sisters On Recovery's Return.

"I see we're having recovery."

"Yes indeed, and it's keeping the National Guard and police busy everywhere."

"I knew things were a lot better, just as the Democrats claimed, but I had no idea prosperity was so complete that the riots would be far ahead of anything seen in years."

• • • •

"They tell me that the disorders are 40 per cent ahead of the boom days."

"Sure. And statistics show that deadlocks are up thirty-three and a third per cent over the old high. What's the situation with regard to lockouts for the last quarter?"

"I'm not positive but I think I read where our lockouts have doubled the 1928 figures and we are so far out of the depression that the 1937 figures for lawlessness should set a new all-time record in this country. Isn't it wonderful?"

• • • •

"It's amazing what good times will do for a country. Think of it! Only two or three years ago we were so far in the depths of a slump that it didn't seem we would ever have any calls for State troops and riot squads again!"

• • • •

"A lot of people were so pessimistic they thought America would never be prosperous enough to enjoy pitched battles in the streets again. Wasn't it dreadful?"

"Gee! Do you remember back in 1933 and 1934 when business was so bad there wasn't any bad feeling anywhere?"

"I certainly do. Why, believe it or not, there were times during the depression when the situation was so tough that workers and employers had stopped hating each other. It looked as if we might never get back to normal."

• • • •

"Do you think the recovery is genuine?"

"Genuine? Why, there's no doubt about it. The country has never had bigger strikes."

"But will they last. What I mean, ain't you afraid they may be only temporary?"

"Lissen, the way it looks to me these strikes are permanent!"

• • • •

"We're away ahead of England in recovery, ain't we?"

"There's no comparison. England is doing better but she ain't yet so prosperous that mobilization of the troops has been possible anywhere. And England is 60 per cent behind the United States in ultimatums and conferences."

"How do we stand on conferences as compared to last year?"

"The Secretary of Labor says we are up 52 per cent over 1936."

• • • •

"Well, I guess the worst is over and we can all be happy."

"Over? Why, if this recovery keeps on this will be the happiest country that ever went nuts."

Tokyo Compromise

Hayashi Heads 'Truce Government' In Response To Nation's Criticism Of Army; Political Peace Temporary.

By Frank H. Hedges.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Tokyo.

WHEN the Hirota government presented its resignation to the Emperor of Japan on the afternoon of January 23, following the bitter attack on the army from the floor of the Imperial Diet, an American correspondent received the cabled query from his home office: "Does army win?"

The exceptionally severe political crisis through which Japan has been passing for the ten days past, but which is apparently eased for some time to come through the formation of Gen. Senjuro Hayashi's "truce government" is no such simple matter that a question of this nature can be answered by "yes" or "no."

Not only the fall of the Hirota ministry, but the other epochal events of the very recent past have been major engagements in the foundation-shaking combat taking place in Japan between the two utterly incompatible political ideologies of militaristic fascism and democratic parliamentarianism. On the whole, the victories go to the political parties, the liberals and private capitalism, although the military is still the strongest power in the Japanese Empire and still has an unbroken albeit somewhat relaxed grip on the nation.

The parties have triumphed in that they have not been completely defeated. As events have moved in Japan for more than five years past, this is a distinct triumph for liberalism. To wrest even an inch from the vantage ground occupied by the military is a triumph, and the liberals have gained a sizable number of inches indeed during recent days.

Japanese Masses Today Anti-Military.

THE VAST MASS of the Japanese people are unquestionably anti-military, antiarmy today. They have reached this viewpoint, which is a complete reversal from that entertained a year ago, because of the blundering policy and failure of the army while in complete control of the state.

In its foreign relations and in domestic living costs Japan is in much worse plight in 1937 than it was six years ago before the military took control of affairs and ran the nation to suit themselves. Within the past year the public has awakened to this fact, and is bitterly hostile to military interference in non-military matters. As yet, however, the Japanese public is not able to shake off the military grip. It is not organized, lacks really capable leaders and still retains much of its historical awe of the army.

The attack made on the war office and on military policy in the House of Representatives was the first victory to be chalked up to the liberals. Few Japanese believed that any M. P. would dare go to the lengths that Kunimatsu Hamada of the Seiyukai did.

The Emperor, on the advice of those whom he trusts most, ordered Gen. Kazunari Ugaki, retired, to form the next cabinet. Gen. Ugaki has long been the leader of the moderate, pro-parliamentary group in the army, and the extremist element were infuriated. They were in control of the military organization and they refused to supply Gen. Ugaki with a War Minister, which made it impossible for him to form a government and he had to admit defeat.

Despite this, the liberals made a tremendous gain during the five days that Gen. Ugaki held out. That gain came from the fact that, save for a few small extreme Rightist groups, the whole of the empire rallied to Ugaki. Seldom has public opinion and the public will been so clearly expressed in Japan as in this case. There could be no misreading of it, even by the army itself. Political parties, business men, farmers and virtually the whole nation stood foursquare behind Ugaki in his fight for parliamentary government and the defeat of militarist fascism. And yet Ugaki had to yield in defeat.

Hayashi Selection Again Stirred Army.

GEN. SENJURO HAYASHI, a moderate militarist, was named to succeed where he had failed, and again there was a clash between the extremist and moderate elements in military circles. The clash did not last long, for the extremists were aware now that 90-odd per cent of the people of Japan were anti-army, that the masses felt the army had usurped the prerogatives of the throne in failing to co-operate with Gen. Ugaki and that even a War Office cannot flout public opinion too greatly and expect to remain in power.

The outcome is a "truce government." The new Hayashi ministry includes no party ministers as such. It is composed of bureaucrats, but, on the whole, of enlightend bureaucrats. The new Minister of Finance would not accept his portfolio until he had secured pledges of modifications in the military fiscal policy and economic program. (The services have since agreed to a slight reduction in the defense budget.—Editor.) The navy would not furnish a minister until promised that there would be revision of the drastic China policy of recent years and a respect paid to constitutional government.

Even the War Office, finally awakening to a trend of the times that had been perceived by others for months past, issued a statement pledging allegiance to constitutional government, but it would be dangerous to take this at its face value. Perhaps at this moment the army sincerely thinks it believes this, but, like New Year's resolutions, this attitude of mind will have evaporated within a few months. The same penitent humility was displayed by the army following the military insurrection of February 26-29 last year. But by July the army had swung back to its old views and its old practices, resulting in the agreement with Germany, in the decision of the parties and the capitalists to make a stand against the military, in the recent crisis and in the formation of the compromise government of Premier Hayashi.

The parties, too, were quite willing to compromise. They realized from the Ugaki fiasco that they could not battle the military to a finish at this time. The cards were stacked against them. Hence, when the opportunity offered itself for a compromise that would leave them in a stronger position than they were a month and more ago, they eagerly seized it and agreed to the truce which is represented in real politics by the Hayashi ministry. They did not get half a loaf, it is true, but they did get a fair number of sandwiches and for some years past they have not been obtaining even crumbs from the rich army man's table.

In a pathetic letter to the senior officer of the army just before he abandoned his attempts to form a cabinet, Gen. Ugaki said unequivocally that Japan faced a choice between constitutionalism and fascism, that the extremist clique in control of the army did not represent the will of the whole army and that he could no longer retain his military titles and honors, which he returned. "The change in the army," he wrote, "the army which I loved for so many years, is deplorable." He might have added, but he did not, that the heads of the army were not certain they could prevent a second and larger military revolt if they conceded too much to the liberals. Publication of this letter was suppressed in Japan; the army dared not risk its effect on the public.

Truce Predestined For Early Termination.

A TRUCE can never be expected to endure for long. By its very nature it is a makeshift and temporary arrangement. So it is with the "truce government" of Gen. Hayashi. Nothing is to be gained by making idle predictions now as to when or how this truce will be ended and the bitter struggle resumed, the struggle which ultimately must see the complete defeat of one side or the other.

Certainly the views of the extremist "younger element" in the army are in nowise changed, and they still dream of creating a twentieth century version of the feudal shogunate in Japan, a military oligarchy ruling under the throne and disregarding the people's will. Certainly the political leaders, the liberals and the capitalists have not budged in their viewpoint. To do so, would mean death for them, not physical death but death for all in which they believe and which they represent. Sooner or later the truce will be ended and warfare resumed.

In the meantime, each side will strive to strengthen itself. There is little that the army can do in this direction save to plunge the nation into a foreign war—which it dares not do at this time because of its own weakness—or frighten the nation with such a war as a bogey. The liberals, however, if they possess sufficient wisdom, can retain and strengthen their present hold on public opinion by seeking to pursue a rational course for the good of the nation as a whole.

By his succession to the premiership and by the personnel of the cabinet he chose Gen. Hayashi has endeavored to steer a middle course, avoiding both extreme militarism and extreme democracy. In its present chastened mood, the nation will gladly permit him to do so for the time being. But that mood will pass, probably within a few months, and the struggle which has been eased by the present truce will be resumed. Japan has gone so far already that there can be no turning back, and the issue between fascism and democracy must be fought to the death before genuine stability can return to the empire.

War And Trade

By Barnet Nover

Britain Looks Ahead.

IN PART, no doubt, Britain's gigantic rearmament program, which calls for the expenditure of $7,500,000,000 during the next five years, is sheer bluff. The Baldwin government is half-persuaded that the mere announcement of Great Britain's determination to build up its armed forces on a scale and at a pace which poorer nations cannot duplicate will be enough to scare Europe's would-be aggressors into some kind of a peace settlement.

Should that happen the present rearmament program will have accomplished a great deal without the actual expenditure of the huge sum now earmarked for war preparations. Once a settlement has been achieved, the pace of rearmament could obviously be slackened.

The British cannot, however, reckon on such a development with any degree of certainty. Future British efforts to consolidate European peace may be as futile as past efforts have been. The drift toward war may continue. In that case the present rearmament program, back-breaking though it is, will not only be carried out but, very likely, even elaborated and expanded. In present day Europe preparations for war and efforts to prevent it go hand in hand.

• • • •

AN ESSENTIAL factor in such preparations for war is the determination in advance, so far as it is possible to do so, of what other powers plan to do. In Great Britain's case—but this is true of others as well—this means taking into account the possible course not only of such nations as Germany, whose aggressive tendencies have greatly alarmed the British, but also of such nations as the United States, whose peaceful intent is recognized.

Certainly it would be suicidal for the British government to ignore the possible effects of American neutrality legislation on the British capacity to wage war. Britain's course in the field of rearmament will be determined, in part, by our neutrality plans even as our naval construction depends directly on British action in this sphere.

What interests Great Britain particularly is, of course, whether it will be able, if and when involved in war, to secure in the United States the supplies needed by its armies and its civil population which it cannot produce at home or get elsewhere.

It is clear that the British rearmament program, its peace-time trade policy and the nature and extent of its industrial preparations for war—all of which are parts of a sound program of war preparation—would differ in several important particulars if American sources of raw materials and foodstuffs were certain to be kept open than if they were certain to be closed.

• • • •

IF THE United States decides to impose no restrictions on war-time trade in essential war materials (other than arms and munitions) then the problem, for Great Britain becomes simply one of naval power.

In this particular the British will regard a "cash-and-carry" policy with complete indifference if before war breaks out they can build up their navy to the point where they can dominate the seas. The extent of British investments and bank balances in this country at the present time is considerable.

Mobilized by the British government, the sums derived from their sale could buy all the cotton, copper, petroleum and other supplies needed by Great Britain for many months. The British also possess a large enough merchant marine to be able to haul away all they can buy from us. By the same token, obviously, those nations at war with the United Kingdom, regardless of how much cash they might have with which to buy our products, would be unable to do so.

• • • •

THE SECOND possibility and one which the British also must take into their present calculations, is that American neutrality legislation may stipulate a mandatory embargo to all belligerents of essential raw materials, as well as of arms and munitions.

In that case Britain's war preparations would have to envisage the necessity of providing the kingdom with an uninterrupted flow of essential commodities from outside the United States. Under the circumstances it would be pointless for Great Britain to sign any kind of reciprocal trade agreement with this Nation.

In this connection it is interesting to note that present British defense plans, as revealed by Sir Thomas Inskip, minister of defense co-ordination, calls, among other things, for the creation of a "committee of industrial intelligence."

That committee's functions will be to report on stocks of raw material in foreign countries so that the British authorities will constantly be in a position to know where and in what quantities essential supplies can be had. The next step may be and inevitably would be, if drastic mandatory neutrality legislation is approved by Congress, to develop in British areas or in areas to which Great Britain would continue to have access in time of war as in time of peace, those products which Great Britain now buys from the United States.

The effect of such action on those elements of our population depending on export could easily be disastrous.

A Philosopher

By William Lyon Phelps

Gerald S. Lee.

There is a vast difference between a natural philosopher and natural philosophy. Books on natural philosophy might and probably do belong to the field of science. Thus natural philosophy deals with facts, but a natural philosopher deals with ideas. Ideas have always interested me more than facts, possibly because they are more inclusive. For while not every fact is an idea, every idea is a fact.

"Such an one is a natural philosopher," said Touchstone in Shakespeare's play; and while he spoke the words ironically, with the pun so beloved by the greatest of all poets, he implied that the fault was not with the title but with the particular representative. The highest of all professions does not mean that every one of its representatives is greater than other men.

• • • •

The peculiar greatness of Thoreau is that he was not only a naturalist but a natural philosopher. But a man can be a natural philosopher without being a naturalist.

Among American living natural philosophers I place very high Gerald Stanley Lee. I counsel my readers to buy almost any of his books; or, if they are without money, to go to the nearest public library and read any book that he has written. There will always be in it something refreshing and stimulating. Read "Crowds" or anything else. I have just seen an extract from something he has written with the challenging title "The Lost Art of Reading." In this he describes a house. And you see at once that what he prizes is individuality as opposed to machine-made things. Here are a few sentences:

• • • •

"I know of a country house which reminds me of the kind of mind I would like to have. In the first place, it is a house that grew. It could not possibly have been thought of all at once . . . Many people do not care for it very much. They would wonder that I should like a mind like it. It is a wandering-around kind of a house, has seventeen outside doors. If one doesn't like it, it is easy to get out (which is just what I like in a mind). Stairways almost anywhere, only one or two places in the whole building where there is not a piazza, and every inch of piazza has steps down to the grass and there are no walks. A great central fireplace, big as a room, little groups of rooms that keep coming on one like surprises, and little groups of houses around outside that have sprung up out of the ground themselves. A flower garden that thought of itself and looks as if it took care of itself (but doesn't). Everything exuberant and hospitable and free on every side and full of play—a high stillness and seriousness over all."

Maine's New "Varmint"

News from Maine has it that the State includes among the wild things of the forest and the field a new "varmint." Guides have brought out of the woods tales of the arrival of coyotes, thought to have crossed the Canadian border to reach the State. The Governor and council have promptly authorized a bounty of $25 a head for the invaders.

Whether or not the animals seen in Maine are coyotes that have wandered far beyond the limits of their supposed habitat should soon be determined. The $25 bounty will do much to settle the question. Whatever the "critters" may be, it is probably the part of wisdom to kill them off and the bounty may speak as loudly to the hunters as the wail of the barking wolf.

Abstract of Wheeler's Speech

'Clamor' of People Shows Disfavor, He Asserts.

Condensed text of speech by Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, last night opposing President Roosevelt's suggestions for revision of the judiciary:

On February 5 of this year the President of the United States sent a message to Congress recommending what he designated as a re-organization of the Federal judiciary. At the same time he followed the unusual procedure of sending to the Congress of the United States a bill, which I understand was prepared by the Attorney General of the United States, to carry out his proposed suggestions.

On last Sunday evening the Attorney General, speaking with the pride of authorship, presented to the country the Administration's arguments for the proposal.

He told us that in the nine short days since the President sent his recommendations to Congress "unfriendly voices have filled the air with lamentations." This indicates that there were limits to their confidence! He goes on—they "have vexed our ears with insensate clamor." So they vexed the Attorney General. What a pity to vex him! And he calls the voice of America's millions "insensate clamor." We differ with him and therefore he says we are unfriendly. Are we to understand that only those who agree are to be called friends?

Shakespeare Quoted.

What an attitude, my countrymen, that is, to the exercise of the constitutional right of petition by Americans! What unrealized arrogance that reveals. "On what hath this, our Caesar, fed, that he hath grown so great!"

You people will remember with what great satisfaction the announcement that Thomas J. Walsh had consented to serve as Attorney General was received throughout the United States. And you will recall with what dismay the news of his untimely death was received throughout the country. All knew that he would prove a great Attorney General.

He was a great lawyer, a great liberal, a great progressive, a great Democrat. And I cannot but believe that had Thomas J. Walsh lived, I would not be addressing you tonight. I would not be replying to the Attorney General of the United States. Walsh was a true progressive, not a political progressive. He was a real liberal, not an official liberal. He was a great lawyer. He respected the judicial system of his country. He respected the Constitution. He was intellectually honest. He recognized the facts. He evaded no issues. He made no appeals to prejudice.

A Great Loss.

If he had been Attorney General, the present deplorable controversy would never have occurred. Loyal and true, he would have been candid with his President and as brave as he was loyal. He would never have advised his President to pack the Supreme Court. And if his President had advised Congress to do so, he would have had to look for a new Attorney General.

We sorrowed when he died, but we did not then realize how great was our loss.

I speak to you tonight as a life-long liberal. I was the candidate of the great Progressive Party in 1924 for Vice President, having the honor to be on the ticket with that greatest of all liberals, that Progressive who blazed the way in America at great sacrifice—the late Robert M. La Follette. I was with him when the Attorney General of the United States was lined up with that great liberal Liberty Leaguer—John W. Davis.

The liberals of America welcome the old as well as the young. We exclude no one on arbitrary grounds, whether of age, class, creed, race or condition. We proscribe no one. A liberal cause was never won by stacking a deck of cards, nor by stuffing a ballot box, nor by packing a court. The trail of true progressivism is long, but it is right.

I am of the opinion that a Supreme Court of 15 members could not act as expeditiously as a court of nine members. In this opinion I am fortified by the considered judgment of one of the closest students of the work of the Supreme Court over a long period of years. I refer to Prof. Felix Frankfurter, of Harvard Law School, charged by some with being the close adviser of the President.

The President intimated in his message to Congress that the Supreme Court had improperly declined to consider 717 cases in the past term. The Solicitor General of the United States, charged with the conduct of the review of the work of the Supreme Court, has expressed his opinion that no fault is to be found with the Supreme Court in the disposition of these cases.

Vacancies Cited.

And as for the lower courts, I question whether the Attorney General's concern with their delay can be so great when it appears that for many months there have been nine Federal judgeships that have remained unfilled.

Why put up a case about congested dockets and the laws delays when the records showed that they did not exist in any degree in the Supreme Court and only to a comparatively small degree in the lower courts? Did the Attorney General think the Congress and the people would not look up the records and read his own report? We have not carried our rubber-stamping that far!

And what about new blood and liberalism, or young blood and liberalism? The oldest man in the Supreme Court is the greatest living liberal—Mr. Justice Brandeis, aged 80 years and going strong. He was leading the van when the Attorney General could not be found. There is not a man in America young enough or old enough to substitute for Mr. Justice Brandeis.

And next to Mr. Justice Brandeis, which justice was the greatest liberal of our time on the court? Do I have to call the name of Oliver Wendell Holmes, jr., whose opinions stand as the epitome of liberal thought in the history of the Supreme Court? He served on the court in his ninetieth year and his mind was as resilient as it was when he was 50.

Look at Senator George Norris, of Nebraska—the great liberal of the Senate.

That there is need for social legislation in the interests of the masses of the people of this country if our Government is to be preserved, thinking people all agree. That the Supreme Court stands as a bar to such legislation cannot be questioned upon the record of the past 20 years. That the courts have at times usurped the legislative power of the Congress no one can deny.

What assurance have the laboring men and the farmers of this country that these six new men will decide the issues in their favor? What assurance can they have unless promises are exacted from them in advance, and if promises can be exacted from them in advance they would be unfit to act as judges. If promises were exacted, it would form a structure upon which dictatorship might be reared.

Usurpation Opposed.

I am opposed to the executive branch of the Government usurping the powers either of the legislative branch of the Government or of the judicial branch of the Government—and the proposal of the Administration has for its purpose only that.

There was a time in Europe when democracy and liberalism were synonymous. Today in most countries in Europe, liberalism means fidelity to despotism and dictatorship. Believers in democracy are executed as reactionaries and yet Hitler and Stalin talk of their democracies. Every despot has usurped the power of the legislative and judicial branches of the government in the name of the necessity for haste to promote the general welfare of the masses and then proceeded to reduce them to servitude. I do not believe that President Roosevelt has any such thing in mind but such has been the course of events throughout the world.

While the Administration's proposal has the specious plausibility of achieving great ends with ease and dispatch, there can be no assurance that it will do any of these things and in effect it stands as a bar to real reform.

I am weary of ill-advised and poorly conceived expedients. If this Administration seriously desires reform, let us face the problem now.

Senator Bone and I have introduced an amendment to the Constitution of the United States providing that in the event the Supreme Court declared a law unconstitutional that after an intervening election, if the Congress re-passed the act by a two-thirds majority, it would then become a valid law. This is an amendment that was suggested by Madison. Its enactment was urged by the late Robert M. La Follette, by Theodore Roosevelt, and by numerous other liberals down through the years. Its purpose is to place the political power of the Government in the Congress, the representatives of the people.

Hasty Action Not Needed.

Under this amendment, there would be no hasty action. There would be time for considered judgment. And unquestionably the Congress would give more careful consideration in the repassage of an act declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court than it would in overriding the veto of the President of the United States.

Administration spokesmen claim that this process would take too long and that it is necessary for them to act quickly and usurp the powers of the court. Such claims are not borne out by the great majority of our other constitutional amendments. The nineteenth amendment repealing the prohibition law was ratified in 14 months; the prohibition amendment in 13 months; the twentieth or Lame Duck amendment in 11 months, and such has been the case where public opinion has crystallized and the amendment has been vigorously supported.

In closing let me repeat what I said to the press a few days ago—that every labor leader, every farmer and every progressive-minded citizen in the United States would have been shocked and protested from the housetops if President Harding, President Coolidge or President Hoover had even intimated that they wanted to increase the Supreme Court so as to make it subservient to their wishes. The progressives would have said, and rightly so, that it was fundamentally unsound, morally wrong and an attempt to set up a dictatorship in this country.

And I am for a liberal constitution. I recognize that that instrument is the fundamental expression of the people's will. I know something of the modern complexities. But I do not think the creation of a political court will solve them. I am ready for amendment to the constitution, and I believe the people of this country are ready for such an amendment, but I want it to be amended by the people in the way they have provided and not by packing the court to make it subservient to anyone's desires. There is no relief in that. We must do right things in the right way. This is no strategy of delay: It is the strategy of the right, of permanence, of real and abiding relief.

The Attorney General of the United States tells us we should trust the President. So we should. And I will tell him the President should trust the people—especially when it comes to changing the document which is theirs. They can attend to their job. I am not afraid to trust them. They have the blood, the youth, the age and the wisdom to keep the Constitution and the law alive.

If there must be a dictator in America, I nominate the American people for dictator.

U. S., Salvador Sign Reciprocal Trade Treaty

Agreement Sixteenth Made by State Department; Imports Gaining.

The State Department announced last night conclusion of the sixteenth reciprocal trade agreement in its program, after signatures were affixed to the document by representatives of El Salvador and of the United States, in San Salvador.

The treaty, ninth with a Latin-American country, provides for the usual unconditional most-favored nation treatment. It will be in force 30 days after its proclamation by the governments of both countries.

The population of El Salvador is but 1,500,000, and it is by no means a major foreign market, but State Department officials pointed out yesterday that in pre-depression days United States exports to El Salvador averaged over $8,000,000 annually, hitting a peak of about $9,500,000 in 1926.

The 1930-1934 average declined to about $3,000,000, with a low point of $2,300,000 in 1932. Exports to El Salvador last year were about $2,770,000.

Imports by the United States from El Salvador have gradually risen from about $2,000,000 yearly to $5,012,000 last year caused chiefly by the heavy sale of Salvadorean coffee to the unrestricted, duty-free United States market.

Principal American exports to El Salvador are cotton and manufactured goods, automobiles, trucks, flour, machinery, drugs, petroleum products, wheat and radios. Principal imports therefrom are coffee (98 per cent), balsam, reptile skins, sisal, cabinet woods in the log, tortoise shell, cacao, deerskins and honey.

On Capitol Hill, the Senate finance committee stamped its approval today on the Administration's proposal to extend the reciprocal tariff act three years, rejecting seven proposed amendments.

Extension of the present law, which expires June 12, already had been approved by the House.

Leaders said they planned to bring up the issue on the Senate floor Tuesday, if possible. Sharp controversy appeared likely then over a proposal made yesterday by Senator Lewis, (Democrat), Illinois, to prohibit reciprocal trade agreements with debt-defaulting nations.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, also made ready for a floor battle over his three proposed amendments, rejected by the finance committee.

3 Long-Term Convicts Flee Michigan Prison

Boston Prelate Called 'Boss' Of Legislators

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Feb. 19.—A charge that William Cardinal O'Connell, Catholic archbishop of Boston, "cracked the whip" over the Massachusetts Legislature, enlivened a meeting on Boston common late today of persons favoring this State's ratification of the Federal child labor amendment.

Michael C. Flaherty, secretary of the Boston Painters' Union, speaking in defense of the measure, discussed the objections voiced by Cardinal O'Connell, not only at current legislative hearings on the amendment but on many previous occasions.

"The Cardinal cracks the whip," he told an audience that had gathered to protest conduct of a hearing at the State house yesterday, "and the legislators do his bidding."

Two years ago the Legislature killed a State lottery bill after the Cardinal offered objections.

Last year the child labor amendment was voted down in Massachusetts after the Cardinal sent a representative to voice his objections. This year the Rev. Michael J. Ahern, S. J., again brought the Cardinal's opposition.

Fewer than 1,000 persons, police estimated, attended the outdoor session, although sponsors claimed 30,000 would attend.

Flaherty questioned the manner of investing Catholic church funds under the Cardinal's charge and asked if the church's opposition was caused by a desire to protect funds invested in "sweatshops."

Lindberghs Visit Town On Coast of Arabian Sea

Karachi, India, Feb. 19 (AP).—The Charles A. Lindberghs paused tonight at one of the least-visited spots on the globe in their air tour of the Near and Middle East.

Flying early today from Bushire, Iran, the famous couple landed at Gwadur, on the northern coast of the Arabian Sea about 300 miles west of Karachi. Col. Lindbergh said he would continue the flight as early as possible tomorrow, Karachi is the next stopping place.

STORMY WEATHER and heavy seas kept two lighthouse keepers prisoners in the Eddystone light off Devon coast, England, for three weeks after they were scheduled to leave. Meanwhile, they subsisted on hardtack and tinned meat. After numerous attempts, they were lowered by ropes to small lifeboat (photo at right), which finally succeeded in removing them.

Recent Bride, Bride-to-Be Entertained

Mrs. Edwin Simmons Gives Tea for Her Daughter-in-Law.

Mrs. Walter White Hostess at Party for Miss Alice Graeme.

Parties for a recent bride and bride-to-be were given between the hours of 5 and 7 o'clock yesterday when Mrs. Edwin Simmons was hostess at a tea for her daughter-in-law, Mrs. John Farr Simmons, and Mrs. Walter White entertained for Miss Alice Graeme, whose marriage to Baron Serge Korff will take place a week from today.

Mrs. Simmons is chief of the visa division of the State Department and many members of our foreign service were present. Mrs. Simmons entertained in her apartment at Stoneleigh Court and received with her son and daughter-in-law, the former Caroline Huston Thompson.

Among the guests were Mrs. William Castle, wife of the former Undersecretary of State, who wore a black cloth coat with a mink scarf; the Assistant to the Secretary of State and Mrs. Harry McBride, she also in black, trimmed with caracul, and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Alling, of the State Department, who are sailing March 31 for six weeks in Montreux, Switzerland, where Mr. Alling will attend an international conference.

Also there were Mrs. Theodore Achilles, in a grey cloth frock with a rust-colored hat; Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes, with her daughter, Miss Olivia Stokes; Mme. Jarnefelt, wife of the Minister of Finland, who wore a simple black silk frock, with a matching beret and sable scarf; Mr. and Mrs. Merle Myers and Mr. Maynard Barnes, all of "the department."

The other tea was given at the opposite end of Washington, Mrs. White's home on O street, in Georgetown. The guests gathered in the dining room, decorated with charming early American murals. The long table was set with a silver tea service and centerpiece of spring flowers.

Baroness Korff was present, as were Miss Jane Watson, who lives with Miss Graeme; the Commercial Secretary of the British Embassy and Mrs. Henry Frank Heywood, Miss Rosalind Wright, who arrived with her sister, Miss Barbara Wright; Miss Laura Tuckerman, Mr. William Brewster, Mr. Judd Thompson, Miss Mary Cowles, Miss Betty Hardie, Mr. William Moore, Mrs. Patterson Roberts, Mr. William McComb and Mr. and Mrs. Philip Bourne.

Federal Bar Unit Honors Patriot

The seventeenth reception and dinner of the Federal Bar Association will be held at the Mayflower Hotel at 7 p. m., Washington's Birthday, with special tables reserved for the assistant attorneys general, the general counsel and other chief law officers of the various department and independent establishments.

Among those who will be seated at these tables are Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Robert Jackson, Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. James Morris, the General Counsel of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and Mrs. Horace Russell, Mr. Fred W. Catlett, of the Home Owners' Loan Board and Mrs. Catlett; the General Counsel of the Social Security Board and Mrs. Thomas H. Eliot, the General Counsel of the Farm Credit Administration and Mrs. Peyton Evans, Col. O. R. McGuire, counsel to the Comptroller General of the United States.

Mrs. Baird Visits Her Parents Here

Will Be Joined by Husband for Week-End.

Mrs. Nathaniel Baird has arrived from New York to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Blinn, at Cathedral Mansions, and will be joined today by her husband who will spend the holiday week-end here.

Mr. and Mrs. Baird have been living in New York City since their marriage last May, but are now moving to Geneva, N. Y., as Mr. Baird has been appointed land and tax agent for the Lehigh Valley Railway.

Mrs. Baird's mother is the well-known author, Ethel Hueston, who last Sunday celebrated the publication of her twenty-third novel, "A Roof Over Their Heads," with a small tea at which she and Mr. Blinn entertaind. Her books have not only been popular in this country ever since she began writing, but also have been translated into other languages and ar widely read in Europe.

Mrs. Mary Pierce, 69, Rites to Be Held Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary McAvoy Pierce, 69, who died of pneumonia Wednesday at her home in Woodside, Md., will be held today at 9:30 a. m. from St. Michael's Catholic Church, Silver Spring, Md. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

She is survived by her husband, William A. Pierce, who for many years conducted the William A. Pierce lumber business in Washington; a stepdaughter, Mrs. S. Wreen Howard, of Washington; a nephew, B. R. Gannon, of Silver Spring, and three nieces, the Misses Mary and Catherine Butler, who made their home with Mrs. Pierce, and Mrs. A. T. Clark, of Fort Sam Houston, also survive.

Capital Friends Greet Lomens

Couple on Annual Visit From Home in Alaska; Take Studio.

Friends in the Capital welcomed the arrival a short time ago of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Lomen, who are here for their annual stay of two or three months from their home in Nome, Alaska. They made the trip from Nome to Seattle by boat and came East by train. They have a studio apartment at 1612 Twentieth street.

Mrs. Lomen, the former Miss Laura Volstead, attended school in Washington in her girlhood, when her father, former Representative Andrew J. Volstead, was a member of Congress. She is also a graduate of the law school of George Washington University.

Mr. Lomen, who is interested in the development of the reindeer industry in Alaska, is the owner of nearly a quarter of a million deer.

Congress Club Tea Lures Crowd

Actress Entertains Women; Matinee Bridge Set for Monday.

Approximately 150 members of the Congressional Club and their guests were present at the Friday tea. The program was presented by Miss Margaret Payson Blish, actress, who portrayed several White House women in early history.

Mrs. Daniel C. Reed, club president, received, wearing a raisin-colored costume, the dress braided on the vest and revers, and the hat of soft felt. Alternating at the tea table, where the centerpiece was of pink and white carnations and snapdragons, were Mrs. Orville Zimmerman, Mrs. Leonard A. Allen, Mrs. Arthur W. Aleshire, Mrs. Roy D. Woodruff, Miss Margaretta Campbell and Miss Louise Blanton.

Miss Eckman Will Be Wed Today in N. Y.

Mr. Mason's Best Man and Three Ushers Are From Capital.

Forest Hills Is the Scene of Marriage This Afternoon.

A wedding of interest in Washington will be that at 4 o'clock today in Church-in-the-Gardens, Forest Hills, N. Y., of Miss Alice Mary Eckman, daughter of Mrs. Samuel Whiley Eckman, of Greenway Terrace, Forest Hills Gardens, Long Island, and the late Mr. Eckman, to Mr. Richard Dean Mason, of Chicago.

Mr. Mason, a son of Mr and Mrs. Hall A. Mason, of Lawton, Okla., was formerly of Washington, and will have as his best man another former Washingtonian, Mr. M. Hudson Rathburn, of Chicago, and among his ushers, three Washington residents.

The bride will wear a princess gown of ivory satin and chantilly lace with a wide train and stand-up collar of lace and sleeves with lace puffs at the top and tight satin cuffs. Her long tulle veil will be caught at the sides of her head with orange blossoms and she will carry a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and white sweet peas.

She will be attended by Miss Grace A. Eckman, her sister, as maid of honor and by the Misses Kathryn B. Dutton, of Wakefield, Mass.; Priscilla C. Parks, of Amherst, Mass.; Natalie J. Green and Mona Hasselries, of Forest Hills, as bridesmaids. The maid of honor will wear a princess gown with short, puffed sleeves, caught at the shoulders with velvet flowers, and carry a bouquet of peach gladioli and sweet peas. The bridesmaids are to be in similar dresses of turquoise blue chiffon and carry bouquets of peach colored African daisies and gladioli.

The ushers from Washington are Mr. John Lee, Mr. Frank Foote and Mr. F. Gerald Toye, and the fourth is Dr. Earl Chesher, of New York City.

The bride was graduated from Abbot Academy and, in 1934, from Smith College. The bridegroom was graduated from the University of Oklahoma, the Massachusetts Institue of Technology and later received his law degree from George Washington University Law School. He is a patent attorney with Davis, Lindsey, Smith & Shontz, in Chicago, where he and his bride will reside. He is a member of the West Side Tennis Club, in Forest Hills, and Phi Kappa Psi Fraternity.

The Washington Scene

By the Poe Sisters.

Mrs. McCook Knox, chairman of the Portrait Committee of the United States Constitutional Sesquicentennial, will return to Washington this week from a trip in Georgia in connection with the project. Mrs. Knox has organized a distinguished committee with representatives in many States to assist her in what might be called a treasure hunt for portraits, miniatures, papers, and signatures related to the period in which the Constitution was adopted. Mrs. Knox and her committee will arrange the exhibition in the Corcoran Gallery of Art at the time of the Sesquicentennial celebration.

Among those on the committee are Gov. Richard C. McMullen, Mrs. Eugene du Pont and Mr. Henry Ridgeley, of Delaware; Gov. George H. Earle, Mr. Mantel Fielding and former Senator David A. Reed, of Pennsylvania; Gov. Harold Hoffman, former Senator Joseph F. Frelinghuysen and Erskine Hewitt, of New Jersey; Gov. E. D. Rivers, G. Arthur Gordon and Mrs. James Rucher Lamar, of Georgia; Gov. Wilbur L. Cross, Mrs. John H. Gibbons and Mr. Everett V. Meeks, dean of the School of Fine Arts of Yale University; Gov. Clyde R. Hoey, John J. Blair and Mrs. Marion Butler, of North Carolina; Gov. Robert E. Quinn, John Nicholas Brown and William David Miller, of Rhode Island; Gov. Francis P. Murphy, Judge Elwin L. Page and Craig S. Wiley, of New Hampshire; Gov. George C. Peery, Robert W. Daniel and Mrs. James Gordon Smith, of Virginia; Gov. Herbert Lehman, Dixon R. Fox and John H. Morgan, of New York; Gov. Charles F. Hurley, Edward Jackson Holmes, trustee of the Boston Art Museum, and Francis H. Taylor, director of the Worcester Art Museum; Gov. Harry Nice, J. Hall Pleasants and Miles White, jr., of Maryland; Gov. Olin A. Johnston, Mrs. Benjamin R. Kittredge and Robert M. Whitelaw, director of the South Carolina Art Association of South Carolina.

Mrs. McCook Knox has a historic background, appropriate as an added qualification for the task, she comes from a celebrated American family known as the "fighting McCooks" who have been prominent in national affairs since Revolutionary times. In the Civil War there were nine sons of Daniel McCook, of Ohio, who were officers in the Union Army, including Mrs. McCook Knox's father, Gen. Anson G. McCook, afterward Representative in Congress from 1877 to 1883. Besides Mrs. Knox's eight uncles, officers in the Civil War, there were five cousins who were also officers in the same conflict.

Diplomatic and other friends of Lady Juliet Duff rejoice at the news that she plans to come to Washington during her present American visit. Just now, after visiting New York and Chicago, she is on her way for a stay in Hollywood. Lady Duff, who is a close friend of Queen Mother Mary, is accompanied by her son, Sir Michael Duff Asheton Smith. When he was in Washington three years ago he was simply Sir Michael Duff but enlarged his name since then in accordance with the terms of a will under which he inherited a considerable fortune. The third member of Lady Duff's party is Charlie Birkin.

Mrs. Thomas R. Holcombe, wife of the Major General Commandant of the United States Marine Corps, will be joined in Washington this spring by her sister, Miss Eudora M. Clover, who lives in Paris but who will arrive in the United States in March.

Miss Clover will go directly to California to look after her interests there. She gave up her ranch some time ago in that State. After a visit in the West she will come to Washington for a stay.

Society Girls to Usher For Regatta Cup Dance

Groups of society girls interested in the activities of the President's Cup Regatta Association will appear as ushers and program girls at the Gold Cup Costume Ball to be held by the association March 12 at the Willard. The ball will open officially at 10 o'clock and will close at 1, with a program at 11.

The demand for boxes already is satisfying the committee in charge. Prominent among those who will have box parties are Mr. and Mrs. John A. Remon, Mr. and Mrs. George Wenzel, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Councilor, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew A. Cranford, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Lodge, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Monaghan, Mr. and Mrs. William C. Shelton, Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Ben E. Talbott, jr., Mr. and Mrs. William W. Wheeler, Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Whitman.

Senator Clark's Wife To Arrange Style Show

Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark is chairman of arrangements for a spring fashion show the Woman's National Democratic Club will hold at the clubhouse, March 1.

Mrs. Clark will be assisted by Mrs. Harlee Branch, Mrs. Garland Ferguson, Mrs. J. Fred Essary and Mrs. Emil Hurjea.

Town Hall to Hear Abbe Ernest Dimnet

Abbe Ernest Dimnet, canon of Cambray Cathedral and noted scholar and lecturer, will address the Town Hall tomorrow night at the Shoreham on "Internal Conditions in France."

His panel will include Dr. Herbert Wright, professor of International Law at Catholic University; Mr. Leifur Magnusson, director of the International Labor Office, and Dr. Kemper Hudson, economist.

Joint Meeting of Three D. C. Units Is Conducted by Democratic Women

Group to Give First of Series of Sunday Teas Tomorrow.

Democratic Women of the District of Columbia gathered for the joint meeting of three units of the Democratic Women's National Council at the council headquarters last night.

One meeting was featured by a talk by Mrs. Clara Wright Smith on "National Representation." Mrs. Dan Heffernan, chairman of the reporter plan group, spoke on "Government Reorganization." Mrs. S. J. Asbury, chairman of the absentee voters group, explained the election of 1937.

Tomorrow the first of a series of Sunday teas will be given at the new club rooms, 1325 New Hampshire avenue northwest. Mrs. Arthur D. Condon, president of the council, will be hostess. Next Sunday Mrs. Katie Vickers will be hostess.

The Cercle des Precieuses Ridicules will meet this evening at the Grafton Hotel. The hostesses will be Mme. Arthur M. Chichester and Mme. Pierre de Chauny.

The president, M. William J. Wallis, will preside. The secretary, M. Charles H. Probert, will read the minutes. Mme. Anne Yago McGuffy will sing "Obstination," by Fontenailles, and "Habanera," from the opera "Carmen," by Bizet, accompanied by Mme. Izant Couch. M. Henri Lazard will relate anecdotes. Mme. Pierre de Chauny and M. E. L. Burtis will give a program of piano duets, including "Andante in C Major," from the second Symphony of Schubert, and "Minuet," from the "Symphony of Jupiter," by Mozart.

Mme. Arthur M. Chichester, Mme. Camille Hindmarsh and Mme. Pierre de Chauny will present charades.

The League of American Penwomen will feature the work of a new member, Alma Winningham, at the art tea tomorrow afternoon at the studio in the Hotel Grafton from 3 to 6 p. m. Members of the executive board, the art chairman, Hazel C. Menk and the reception chairman, Dorothy Gatchell, will assist in receiving. Guest privileges.

On Washington's birthday, the regular business meeting is scheduled. Following a brief business session, a colonial program will be given in honor of the day. A sextette from the Lovette Choral Club will present, in costume, a program of old-time music and pantomime, interpreting "A Mount Vernon Phantasy," by Bess Heath Olmstead. Members are requested to come with guests and if convenient to wear colonial costume—but costume is entirely optional.

The weekly rendezvous and tea will be temporarily discontinued until the first Wednesday in March.

Representative Caroline O'Day will speak at a meeting of the District of Columbia League of Women Voters sponsored by Mrs. Henry Chalmers' department of government and foreign policy Tuesday at 8 p. m. at 2111 Florida avenue northwest. Mrs. O'Day will tell of her trip, made by airplane, to the Buenos Aires Inter-American Peace Conference last December. Members of the department will summarize their studies of the reciprocal trade agreements and present arguments for and against continuance of the trade agreement program. The program will be followed by a social hour.

Night and vacation schools will be discussed by Mrs. H. E. Chynoweth at the meeting of the government and education section at the Women's City Club on Wednesday, February 24, at 12:15 p. m. Mrs. Edward Chapin is chairman.

Mrs. Pearl B. Klein's department of government and the legal status of women will hold a round table discussion of the "Women's Charter" in Room 215 of the District Building Tuesday at 4:45 p.m.

Miss Marguerite Wells, president of the National League of Women Voters, and Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle were guests of the executive board of the District league at the meeting on February 19. Mrs. Doyle gave a brief account of the "Child Survey," which is being planned for the District of Columbia under the direction of the Council of Social Agencies.

Mrs. John Allen Morgan's department of Government and economic welfare held the first of a series of meetings to study problems connected with domestic employment as they affect both the employer and the employe Monday. Since the establishment of the training course for household employes by the WPA, increasing interest has been shown in this subject. Mrs. Morgan's group will meet at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets northwest, on the first and third Mondays of each month at 11 a. m.

Mrs. Roosevelt has accepted an invitation from the District of Columbia League of Women Voters to a luncheon to be given in her honor on March 3.

The cast of the play includes Anne Ives, Maud Howell Smith, Arthur Rhodes, Mabel Owen Wilcox and Murray Sheehan, of Washington, and Helen Shields and Harry Schonrank, of New York. It is directed by S. Wesley McKee, and stage sets are by Hugo Inden.

The Theta Sigma Phi committee in charge of the Friday evening events is Mrs. Velma Carson, of Alexandria, and Catherine Redmond, Neota Silvers, Alice Keith, Mary McCanany, Mrs. Donald A. Young and Ruth Barnard Powell, of Washington, all of whom previously belonged to college chapters in various parts of the United States and are now engaged in journalistic activities in Washington.

The Kappa Sigma Chapter, Delphian Society, will hold its regular meeting at the Mount Pleasant branch of the public library Tuesday at 10:15 a. m. Subject: "The Umbrian School and Vatican Treasures." Leader, Mrs. Clifton Housley. Topics for presentation: "The Umbrian School," Mrs. Fletcher Cannon; "Fabriano," Miss Georgia Stark; "Perugino," Mrs. J. G. Hefty; "Raphael," Mrs. F. S. Gettle; "Blashfield's Estimate," Mrs. Ira Gabrielson; "Symond's Estimate," Mrs. Lewis Thompson. Art treasures of the Vatican: general character, Mrs. T. R. Hall; the Sistine Chapel, Mrs. W. C. Welburn; Raphael's Loggia and Stanza, Mrs. J. P. O'Connell. Pictures: examples of the Umbrian School, Mrs. James Hoffman; Michael Angelo's work in the Sistine Chapel, Mrs. M. C. James; Chirlandajo's masterpiece and Raphael's School of Athens, Mrs. W. J. Greenleaf. General discussion.

YOUR POST CARRIER

DESERVES YOUR SUPPORT

Washington, Lincoln, and so many other great figures in the Nations' history rose to prominence, through extreme hardship and adversity.

Just as surely, the great men of tomorrow are rising from the ranks of our newspaper boys of today—Your Post carrier is an ambitious neighborhood boy, who is starting at the bottom, in the traditional American manner. Buying and selling his papers, he is a young independent merchant—making good use of his spare time, learning business methods, earning and saving money for school and college expenses, and acquiring valuable habits of thrift and self-reliance.

Who knows what the future holds for YOUR POST CARRIER BOY. One thing is certain! Bryn Mawr Unit Begins Capital Session Feb. 25

Alumnae Council Members to Be Entertained at House Parties of Washington Group; Many Social Functions Planned.

Social functions will accompany business meetings next week when distinguished members of the Bryn Mawr Alumnae Council gather in Washington for their annual session, February 25 to February 27. Beside the general entertaining for the visitors, there will be smaller parties given by some of the Washington alumnae, who will have house guests during the conference.

Dean Helen Taft Manning, of the college, will be the guest of her mother, Mrs. William Howard Taft. President Marion Edwards Park, of Bryn Mawr, will be entertained by Dr. Ethel Dunham, of the United States Children's Bureau, and Mrs. G. Potter Darrow, of Chestnut Hill, president of the Alumnae Association, will be the guest of Mrs. Henry L. Grant, who will give a dinner for members of the scholarship committee of the council the first night of the meeting.

Mrs. Norman Murray Smith, wife of Rear Admiral Smith, will have as her guests Mrs. George B. Myers, of Sewanee, Tenn.; Miss Alice Hawkins, secretary of the Alumnae Association; Mrs. Talbot Aldrich, of Boston, and Mrs. Farwell Hill, of Ross, Calif. Friday's business session will be held at her home, 2400 Wyoming avenue, with a luncheon for members of the Council at which she will entertain.

To Entertain Mrs. Streeter.

Mrs. Alexander Zabriskie, of Alexandria, will have as her guest Mrs. Thomas W. Streeter, only woman member of the New Jersey State Relief Administration. Miss Hilda W. Smith, director of Workers Education, FERA, will entertain Miss Margaret Brusstar, of Bryn Mawr, and Mrs. J. Austin Stone will be hostess to Mrs. Russell Wilson, Wilson, wife of the mayor of Cincinnati; Miss Olivia Fountain to Miss Eloise Requa, of Chicago, founder and director of the Library of International Relations.

Miss Elizabeth Morrison and Miss Sara Jenkins Smith will have as their guests Mrs. Thomlin Horsley, of Richmond, and Miss Mary Tausig, of St. Louis. With Mrs. Michael Straus will be Dr. Mary Morgan Lee, Chicago psychologist and physician; Miss Dorothy Sollers, at the home of Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock will entertain Miss Adelaide Neall, associate editor of the Saturday Evening Post; Mrs. Donald Blaisdell will have as her guest Mrs. Philip C. Jessup, assistant headmistress of Brearly School; Mrs. Francis Pickens Miller, of Fairfax, will have Miss Mary Sweeney, of Bryn Mawr and Mrs. Alvin Barber of Bethesda; Mrs. Dushane Penniman, of Baltimore.

Luncheon Is Slated.

A luncheon at which Baroness Serge Korff will entertain at the Washington Club Thursday for members of the council, will open the sessions of the Bryn Mawr Alumnae. A tea for members of the group, given by Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House, will follow, and Mrs. Grant's dinner for the Scholarship Committee takes place that evening.

On Friday following the business meeting and luncheon at the home of Mrs. Smith, there will be a tea in honor of President Park for council members and Washington friends of Bryn Mawr, given by Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes and Miss Olivia Stokes. A dinner in her honor will be given at the Sulgrave Club Friday night by the Washington Bryn Mawr Club. President Park will address the guests in the evening on "1937 and What Lies Ahead for Bryn Mawr."

Mrs. Howell Moorhead will be hostess at the closing session of the council on Saturday and will entertain the members at luncheon at her home, 2220 R street.

Wife of Envoy Will Be Hostess

Mrs. MacWhite to Serve at Exhibition of Art Today.

Mrs. MacWhite, distinguished artist and wife of the Minister of the Irish Free State, will be one of the hostesses at the exhibition of the Society of Washington Artists at the Corcoran Gallery of Art this afternoon. She is a member of the society and also an exhibitor, her painting, "Piedra Lumbre, New Mexico," being one of the most interesting in the show this year.

Receiving with Mrs. MacWhite will be Mrs. Charles G. Abbot, one of the patronesses of the exhibition; Garnet W. Jex, whose landscape won the society's bronze medal in that class, and Mrs. Gladys Nelson Smith, whose picture, "Two Tempests," has won considerable notice from critics.

Tomorrow afternoon, Minor Jameson, former president of the society, and Rowland Lyon, an exhibitor, will be hosts.

The exhibition, which opened January 31, closes Monday. Mr. C. Powell Minnigerode, director of the Corcoran Gallery of Art; Mr. Charles Bittinger, president of the society, and Mr. Clifford Berryman comprise the committee which will count the votes which visitors to the exhibition have been casting for the painting or piece of sculpture they consider the best. Announcement of the winning artist or sculptor will be made at the close of the show.

Optimists to Hold 10th Book Shower

Washington Optimist Club members will hold their annual book shower for benefit of the library at the Washington Boys Club tonight.

This is the tenth annual book shower conducted by the optomists and will be featured by a supper and dance beginning at 9 p. m. at the boys club, Third and C streets northwest. Ten years ago the Washington optimists inaugurated what is known as the "Optimist Club Williams Memorial Library" at the Washington Boys Club, and through the showers have built up a library of over 2,500 volumes.

mist clubtaoimfwyhrvge4ose-doeta

For the past ten years the Optimist Club of Washington has supported this library and provided the services of a trained librarian who is fitted to assist the boys in their school work.

Arrangements have been made for this shower through Miss Helen J. Patterson, librarian, who has selected the books to be donated, based on the needs of the boys and the required reading of the Washington public schools. In order that there may be no duplication, each Optimist is assigned a particular bookthat he will donate.

Wife of Turkish Envoy Holds Second At Home

Mme. Ertegun Receives in Large Drawing Room of Embassy; Mme. Schlatter and Ambassador Aid Hostess.

By Lynda Reeve.

Mme. Ertegun, wife of the Turkish Ambassador, entertained at her second at home of the season yesterday afternoon. Receiving in the spacious drawing room, she chose for her costume a cheery frock of dark blue crepe printed with gay flowers. She was assisted by Mme. Schlatter, the former Senorita Zoe Patterson, who saw that the guests found their way to the tea table in the large reception hall and were served. She was wearing a chic costume, her black frock and little pillbox hat trimmed with touches of white.

The Ambassador moved from group to group about the tea table, while the two members of the embassy staff, Mr. Resid Anamur and Mr. Ibrahim Seyfullah, made the guests welcome.

The embassy with its rooms handsomely paneled and softly lighted, with occasional brighter lights on the fine old paintings, formed a gracious setting for the occasion.

Among the guests were Col. and Mrs. John A. Crane, who, before coming to Fort Myer for duty last summer, were stationed at the U. S. Legation in Turkey, and are old friends of the Ambassador and his wife. Others seen were the Ambassador of Germany, Herr Hans Luther; Mrs. Fred Biermann, in black, with a small lace veil on her shallow-crowned brimless hat, who was accompanied by her house guest, Mrs. E. J. Fueline; Lady Lister Kaye, attired in emerald green brocade crepe with a cluster of orchids at the neck; Mme. Bilmanis, wife of the Minister of Latvia, who had on a black broadcloth frock with a small matching hat and an elbow length cape of sable.

Others were Mrs. Sol Bloom and her daughter, Miss Vera Bloom; Mr. and Mrs. J. Clinton Tribby, the latter in Navy blue with touches of white around the crown of her saucer hat and the neck of her frock; Mrs. Robert E. Lee, whose gown of black satin was made on simple lines; Mme. Alfaro, wife of the former president of Panama, attired in dark brown with a wide-brimmed hat of the same shade, and Mme. Espaillet wearing an ensemble of gunmetal mesh with a felt hat of the same color.

Mme. Troyanovsky, wife of the ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, who is again out and attending parties after her recent illness, wore black with a handsome coat of nubianseal. She was accompanied by Mme. Oumansky, wife of the Counselor of embassy, whose frock was of a bright shade of blue, and Mme. Grigoriev, costumed in a smart Oxford gray knitted ensemble.

Other guests were Miss Ida Guffey and Miss Pauletta Guffey, sisters of the Senator from Pennsylvania; Mme. van Haersma de With, wife of the Minister of the Netherlands, wearing chic black; Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, who arrived together; Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, in royal blue velvet with matching accessories; Mrs. Thomas Burke, in a black and white printed crepe; Signora Livia Coppola Viola, wife of the Air Attache of the Italian Embassy, in all black, her smart tricorne of soft straw; Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol, Mrs. Cabot Stevens, the Rev. Meade Bolton MacBryde, the Minister of Yugoslavia and Mme. Fotitch, Mme. Recinos, wife of the Minister of Guatemala; Mrs. Fred A. Britten, Maj. and Mrs. Parker West, Mrs. Emerson Howe, and the Financial Counselor of the Rumanian Legation, Mr. George Boncesco.

THE MERRY WHIRL by MARYLYN

Of all the pictures on which Mrs. Roosevelt bid, at the recent benefit show given by Washington artists for the flood sufferers, she won but one—a woodcut of Provincetown Lane—the work of Rowland Lyon, who was born here and has lived here ever since—which isn't so many years after all, as he is a young artist.

The Provincetown scene, is very true to life up there and is steeped in the atmosphere which appeals to members of the art colony. Where the creator of the woodcut has spent his past eight summers.

Even though completely outnumbered by feminine members of the society, Mr. Sam E. Woods and Dr. Alenander V. Dye admirably held up their ends of the table at the luncheon given yesterday by Mr. Woods at the Washington Hotel; while former Representative Hubert Stephens and Mr. George Neville, held the fort on either side of the long table.

The other guests were all—every last one of them—ladies. Mrs. Woods had remained in Prague, where her husband is stationed as our Commercial Attache, but while the career man has been in town he has been dined and wined to the utmost. Being one of those nice persons who promptly repay their social obligations, he had quite properly taken all of his hosts to prize fights, and stag dinners. The fact that his wife did not accompany him here on this trip did not at all cramp his style in remembering his hostesses. Hence the luncheon yesterday.

The guests included Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Mrs. Joseph T. Robinson, Mrs. Pat Harrison, Mrs. Thomas S. McMillan, Mrs. Alexander V. Dye, Mrs. Randolph Blinn, Mrs. Ethel Miller Banks, Mrs. Oscar Ryder, Mrs. Russell A. Amory, Mrs. William E. Dunn, Mrs. Nathaniel H. Engle, Mrs. Lacey C. Zapf, Mrs. Claudius T. Murchison, Mrs. Tracey Copp, Mrs. Connie Bonslagel, Mrs. Katherine Harrison, Mrs. Jack McFall, Mrs. Nina May Partridge, Mrs. William Slattery and Mrs. Leslie Biffle.

Remember "A Little Bit Independent," "Midnight Blues" and "Treasure Island?" They were all written by Edgar Leslie, of New York, no doubt inspired and helped by his attractive wife. She will be here next week visiting Helen and Abner Drury, who have already sent out invitations for a cocktail party Tuesday when she will share honors with Mrs. Ralph Case.

It is hoped that Abner will be quite recovered by then from his attack of flu which has kept him out of the Lenten social swing.

A party being very much anticipated these days is the buffet supper which the Tomas Cajigases are giving Wednesday evening in their home for the Andres Segovias, who are again paying Washington a visit.

The Minister of Yugoslavia, Mr. Constantin Fotitch, is another person who enjoys walking. Saw him the other day just as the sun was sinking down over the horizon, striding along Sixteenth street, deep in conversation with his gentleman companion.

Jane Pope, slender blonde girl, has arrived in town and with her father, John Russell Pope, the architect of Mr. Andrew Mellon's art museum, has taken a very large and comfortable home out near Rock Creek Park. They will be here for about three months.

Four Named to Assist At Club's Tea Today

Mrs. William F. Koehan, chairman of hospitality for the Political Study Club, has designated to assist Mrs. Tilman Bacon Parks at the meeting of the club today, Mrs. William E. Borah, Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., Mrs. James J. Davis and Mrs. William Fitch Kelly.

Presiding at the tea tables will be Mrs. William N. Doak, Mrs. Frank Mondell, Mrs. Nathaniel Dial and Mrs. Herbert Corey.

Owen Young to Marry.

Mrs. Louise Clark, of New York, and Owen D. Young, chairman of the Board of General Electric Company, will be married in St. Augustine, Fla., today, persons close to the couple said last night.

A formal announcement of the wedding, it was said, will be made public in advance of the ceremony.

Mrs. Clark is at the winter home of her mother, Mrs. Walter Van Rensellaer Powis. Mr. Young has been in St. Augustine for more than a week.

A reception was given in his honor earlier this week by Mrs. Powis. The wedding will be at her home, it was said.

Mississippi Society Dances Thursday

Wardman Park to Be Scene of Midwinter Event.

The Mississippi State Society will hold its midwinter reception and dance on Thursday evening in the Continental room of the Wardman Park Hotel from 9 till 1 o'clock.

Tables have been arranged for those wishing to play cards. Members of the society will be admitted on their membership cards and guest cards may be obtained at the door or from Miss Katherine Crutcher, 1410 H street northwest, or the secretary.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Mory, of Denver, Colo., are staying at the Carlton during their visit in the East.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Grosner have left for Miami, Fla., for a fortnight.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Should Girl Whose Opportunities for Meeting Men Are Limited Marry First Man Who Asks Her?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 23 years old and am considering marrying a man of 30, who is 4 inches shorter than I. He has good health, an attractive personality and a sound, stable character, and his interests are similar to mine—the most important of which is the mutual desire for a home and children. I am not deeply in love with him, perhaps because I was terribly disappointed in love once before, but I have decided that real love for him may come to me after marriage.

• • • •

I feel sure we would be congenial. However, I am suspicious of the fact that he is not a high school graduate and that his English is far from flawless. He would be classified as a laborer, and his income at present is exactly the same as mine, although I believe he has the ability to manage money, and with the proper incentive would get ahead.

• • • •

I have practically promised to marry him next summer. I do not feel that I might meet anyone else who would cause me to change my mind, since in my profession, which is that of maternity nurse, opportunities for meeting men are limited. And yet I am overtaken at times with a great indecision about the whole matter, and I am hoping you may be able to help me clarify my mind once and for all. I feel I should give him a definite answer and begin at once to plan accordingly. And still I hesitate. What do you think about it? I am anxiously awaiting your reply.

B. E.

Don't Get Panicky.

DEAR B. E.: I believe you are evaluating your freedom too cheaply and that if you were to marry this man whom you regard as your "last chance" without love and with some misgiving as to his social presentability, you might find your last state considerably worse than your first. When a girl ventures to marry without love, she should at least see to it that the man she marries is a man she can be proud of, if she expects love to follow in the wake of her vows.

• • • •

Any girl of 23 is entirely too young to get panicky about her matrimonial chances, and she is gambling in a spendthrift manner with her chances of happiness in marrying the first man who asks her at that age. There might be more logic in your attempts to reason yourself into accepting the man's proposal if you were a middle-aged spinster and the man the same age.

• • • •

What the whole thing amounts to, of course, is that you haven't enough beaux and good times to occupy your leisure time and what should be your recreational hours. Also, you may be on the verge of making one of those dubious rebound marriages, which almost never result in happiness or contentment. Perhaps you think marriage is a permanent escape from boredom. When married to the right man, it is; but I assure you that the boredom of single blessedness is infinitely to be preferred to the nerve-exhausting wretchedness of living with a man you don't love or deeply admire.

• • • •

I advise you to listen to the dictates of your subconscious mind, which is stubbornly resisting all efforts of your conscious mind to present in attractive dress the presumable advantages of this union you contemplate. In your heart you know the engagement has very little to recommend it, and what you want is marriage; but not marriage to this man.

M. H.

Young Wife's Problem.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been reading your wonderful column daily and get great help from it. I wrote you once before (in September, I believe) about my husband's drinking and acting so mean. And now my problem is a variation of the same theme: When he is drunk he is always so quarrelsome and accuses me of being unfaithful to him. He is even jealous of his foster-father, who lives with us and with whom I am left alone in the home one day each week, as his foster-mother works.

• • • •

We have been married five years and I have never been unfaithful to him nor thought of such a thing. We have two sons, one 4 years old and the other 13 months of age. There is no nicer man in the world than my husband when he is sober, but he drinks too much. Sometimes I would like nothing better than to leave him forever. But if I should leave I wouldn't know where to go. And if he ever found me I know he would kill me.

• • • •

Do you know of any place I might go and take my two children and find a job? I am 23 years old and a good and willing worker. I am easy to get along with, and ask very little. Please answer through your column this week, and tell me if you know of any place I might go. If only I could get my husband to drink less we could be so happy together.

ANXIOUS MOTHER.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR ANXIOUS MOTHER: Unless you have parents or brothers and sisters who would be willing to take you in and champion your cause it seems to me you will have to stay right where you are and work the problem through to some remedial conclusion. Tell your husband's foster-parents of his nagging accusations of infidelity and ask their advice and co-operation in dealing with the situation. It is probably just a mean-minded gag, designed to put you on the defensive so that you will forget to take the offensive against his drinking. If not that, it must be interpreted as the delirious product of a drink-disordered mind, and it is time for his foster-father to suggest to him that his drinking seems to be threatening his mental balance. Such accusations should be dealt with sharply and aggressively, with righteous anger and indignation by the parties unjustly accused. An apology and retraction should be demanded of your rusband. You are conceding too much if you attempt to meet his accusatoins with detailed explanations of your actions and meek protestations of innocence.

• • • •

If you can't find some sort of a job now which you might hold by placing the children in a day nursery while you work, you may have to wait until both are of school age before attempting to direct your life into a steadier channel. Time, patience and courage may be your only allies in this difficult situation.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Women's Aim in Dress Should Be Smartness Instead of Prettiness, Style Authority Advises

By Ethel Ehlen,
The Post Fashion Editor.

"THERE is a vast difference between loving clothes and being well groomed. Some of the smartest women in the world are those who do not spend a lot of thought on clothes, but who have an innate style sense."

Mrs. Ethel Holland Little, who is not only a fashion authority, but also is noted for her chic grooming, made this statement in a recent interview in New York. As a guidepost to wise buying, Mrs. Little suggested this rule:

"Do not select things that will be dated, but clothes that are conservatively fashion correct, according to current trends."

"Short skirts," she commented, "are smart and generally becoming, but never wear a skirt that is so short it is out of line with the silhouette or unbecoming to your figure. If you are long-waisted, you should not be short-skirted. The individual figure should influence the length of the costume." For a woman who must adhere to a budget, or when traveling, a black frock of good lines, with several accessory changes (to change the character of the basic frock) is the best investment you can make, according to Mrs. Little.

Strive for Chic.

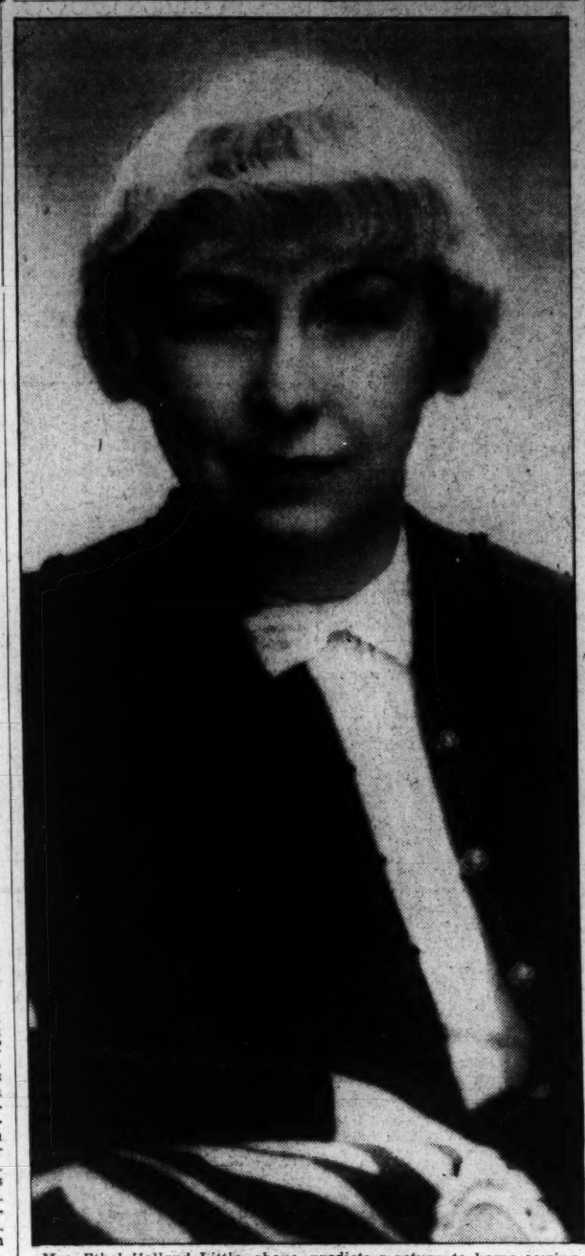
"Women should aim to be smart rather than pretty," Mrs. Little advise. "but clothes should be smartly becoming or the effect is lost." Monotone costumes are delightful as well as chic, this fashion expert decrees. When color is added for accent, have it all in one spot, such as gloves and handbag, jewelry at the throat or wrists. "The one-color costumes sponsored by many of the designers for spring are a grand change from the multi-colored affairs of other seasons," Mrs. Little said, "as women have grown weary trying to match up silks with leathers, felts with silks and the like."

Any woman can wear a print, Mrs. Little insists, but the short person should choose one of small pattern and the tall woman, a printed design that is large, as in skirt lengths proportion in design, harmonious with the figure, is a requisite in printed materials. For evening, however, a woman of any stature may wear one of the bold, splashy prints. One of the smartest innovations in this season of prints, Mrs. Little believes, is the introduction of the casual shirtwaist frock. Previously, prints have been styled in rather dressy versions.

Sewing at Home.

Whether or not it is the feminine trend in clothes, or the influence of the custom-made frock, women are taking an active interest in sewing, Mrs. Little reported. A recent survey disclosed that home-sewing is again a part of the American design for living, and the day of the visiting dressmaker is to be revived to a certain extent. Because of the efficiency of modern patterns, clothes can be made with a professional appearance without the terrible home-made touch, Mrs. Litle pointed out. The vast array of modern materials, too, give a woman an excellent chance to choose colors and designs which are exclusive.

While this fashion authority decrees that black is the smartest color for any occasion, particularly for the business woman, she also regards gray and navy blue, as practical and smart. "With gray, black accessories are especially chic," Mrs. Little said, "and with navy, the new carnelian tone is very effective." She has a fondness for blues and says that she has a feeling of elation when she wears blue in any of its hues and tints. The day she was interviewed, she was wearing a very smart suit-frock of medium blue trimmed with black Persian lamb; the blue matching her eyes and off-setting her attractively coiffed gray hair.



Mrs. Ethel Holland Little, above, predicts a return to home sewing, as a means of bringing individuality of line and color theme into the wardrobe. The simplicity of modern patterns and the great variety in fabrics are an incentive, she claims.

Week-end Visit Raises Question Of Invitations

Should Come From 'Lady of House' and Be Promptly Acknowledged.

By Margaret Wallace.

SHOULD a young man visit a young woman at the home of her parents for a week-end without an invitation from the parents?

This question is raised by a mother who writes that her son has been invited by a young woman in his office to visit her for the week-end. She says:

"My son is very fond of this young woman and there is to be another young girl and young man in the party. The girl has asked all the guests, but there has been no invitation from her mother. I have always taught my son that the invitations of this kind must come from the lady of the house, the hostess which in this case is the young girl's mother. My son is very eager to go, of course."

Of course it is not proper for the young man to visit anybody's home without an invitation from the lady of the house. It would be quite proper if the young girl conveyed an invitation from her mother verbally, although a written invitation is better form under the circumstances. It is never proper for a young man to accept such an invitation without sending his prospective hostess a note of acceptance expressing appreciation of the invitation.

Under the circumstances the young man should ask the young woman who has invited him if the invitation comes from her parents as well as herself. In this rather casual age a girl may simply inform her mother that she is bringing friends home for the week-end and the mother may take this as a matter or course. This does not release the young man from his social obligation of sending his note to his hostess in advance. Of course he should write his "thank you letter" immediately after the visit.

The other side of the picture is revealed in a letter from a mother of a young girl. She writes:

Dear Miss Wallace—My daughter has invited a young man whom she met at a summer resort last summer to be a guest at our house. I do not approve of this young man and refused to write him a note of invitation. She wrote to him at his home in another city and asked him to spend the week-end at our home. He accepted and said that he could stay a week. My daughter showed me the letter. The young man did not mention me, who would be his hostess, but accepted the invitation of my daughter. I do not want this young man in my house. Do you think it would be proper to write to him and tell him so. Even my daughter does not want him now since he seemed to take it for granted that he could stay at our house a week when she had only invited him for a week-end. I am fond of the family of this young man and do not want to do anything to offend them if I can help it."

This young man has been guilty of unforgivable rudeness. It was not well bred of him to suggest staying a week when he was only invited for a week-end. He also made a mistake in accepting an invitation which did not come from the lady of the house. A well-bred young man would have written to the mother of the girl who invited him and mention that her daughter had asked him to be a guest, express his pleasure at the invitation and say he would like to accept if it would be convenient for the hostess to have him as a guest in her house.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Feb. 19.

I AWAKE this morning, rub my poor old clothes-worn eyes, and suddenly realize that there are but eight more days in this faintly ridiculous month. Then it will be March, roaring in like a Nubian lion, and the first faint hints of spring will come walking up the Avenue, wiping the frowns from the wintry faces of the girls and putting a bit of heat in the frozen sunshine.

ALICE HUGHES.

I know and love many of the world capitals—Paris and Berlin and London are old sweethearts of mine—but I know no street that is more thrilling than Fifth avenue in spring's earliest days. I thrill to it now as I did when I was a school girl of never-you-mind, just down from New Hampshire with pink red cheeks, an armful of books and my strange way to make in the big town. That makes me a bog softy, no doubt, and if so, I plead guilty!

New York girls in business seem to be noted for their sophistication, and I always thought that one of the leading exponents of that point of view was Margaret Fiskback, the Washington Blonde who is now an ace copy writer for our biggest store and has been a writer of light verse of considerable horsepower.

But love came into Marne's life a couple of years ago, and I had no idea, I'm afraid, as to what the tender passion could do with us. I lunched with the girl at Mr. Rockefeller's cloud-hung eating house the day she sailed for Europe to rejoin her handsome Tony, and I give you my word the girl was gelatinous with excitement. This satirist and wit confessed to me, over the clear soup, that when she heard Tony's voice over the ocean phone from Rome, she cried like a baby and then couldn't sleep all night. Sophistication—bah! Just let love get in its lovely work—and see how long sophistication lasts. Or am I a miserable cynic?

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Still one of the leading beaux-about-our-town is the handsome and dapper dramatic critic, George Jean Nathan, for many years our leading bachelor. Now in his mid-fifties, pleasantly gray, he still gets about to first nights and hot spots without romance ever throwing him for a serious loss. I saw him at "21" a few nights ago, enjoying himself in his quiet way. His "romance" with Lillian Gish lasted for years, yet never approached the altar, and this season he has been seen quite often at premieres with the charming Mei-Mei Tze, daughter of the Chinese Ambassador. Yet he seems to go on his quiet way heartwhole—much to the anguish and dismay, no doubt, of scores of the local belles to whom every good-looking and eligible single man is a constant challenge!! . . .

It begins to look as though lovely Ina Claire is going to be seen next in a big musical show confected by those musical hit-writers, Rodgers and Hart. Its name is not settled, quite, but Clifton Webb, the dancing comedian, is being mentioned for the role opposite the fair and ageless Ina . . .

And Libby Holman is turning play producer, with the piece a foreign import called "Porphyry." Though Libby has been studying drama with a view to giving up the warbling of torch songs, it appears she will not act herself, the lead being given to her long-time friend, Blanche Yurka . . .

Local society gossipers love to import and hint at London scandals, and the latest I hear is a report that Alfred Duff Cooper, British war secretary, and his former-actress wife, Lady Diana Duff-Cooper, are on the point of separating. This is a love match of long standing and a bust-up would certainly cause a heavy storm on the Atlantic. Lady Diana was one who played "The Nun" in Reinhardt's "Miracle" on this side—the traditional British blonde of song and story. Oh, well; how much are potatoes today?

Speaking of London, the latest color to alight on the local style scene is one called "London Fog." It's a soft shade, and said to be a bit easier and more flattering than the ubuquitous black. I've seen a great deal of it in suits, as well as in the accompanying accessories. Truly, it is a very handsome and interesting shade. Just you step into your shop and ask to see a "regular pea-souper."

Clothes Designer Says White Gown Fetches Proposal

"Wear a white evening gown," said Adrian, whose fashions have clothed such stars as Joan Crawford, Greta Garbo, Norma Shearer and Jean Harlow.

"A woman always looks more helpless in white than she does in color," he explained. "That helpless air is what makes men weaken their resolution to remain bachelors.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Nature of Pneumonia.

A reader asks me to describe penumonia so that the layman can have an intelligent idea of its nature. There are two or three different kinds of penumonia, all caused by some kind of germ which lights on the tissue of the lung and causes an inflammatory exudate to form.

Broncho-penumonia probably follows an infection in the bronchial tubes out into a number of small lung endings all over both lungs. Lobar pneumonia, on the contrary, is a mass infection of all the air cells in one lobe of the lung. What is generally called double penumonia is involvement of more than one lobe.

Ten Pneumonia Germs.

There are no fewer than ten different kinds of germs capable of producing penumonia. Lobar pneumonia is usually caused by some form of the pneumococcus. These small paired germs have been divided into four types, as follows:

Type	Per-Cent Frequency	Per Cent Mortality
I	40	25
II	25	50
III	15	60
IV	20	10
	100	36 (average)

Broncho-penumonia follows such infectious diseases as measles, and may be caused by the same germ which causes influenza or the same germ that causes streptococcic sore throat.

Penumonia usually comes on suddenly with a chill, pain in the side of the chest, fever, followed shortly by the coughing of rusty sputum which looks as if it contained brick dust. It has been called "brick dust sputum." This appearance is due to the red blood cells coming up into the sputum from the exudate. There is no other disease except malaria which is so frequently ushered in with a chill.

Need Rest and Physician.

In this kind of weather, any of these symptoms, but especially the onset of a chill, should indicate immediate bed rest and the services of your family physician. In treatment, this rest is all-important. Fresh air, sensibly applied, is the next most important consideration. I say "sensibly applied," because frequently in severe weather the physician finds the penumonia patient in bed with all the windows open, with so much air that he frequently is more shocked than benefited. However, it is a great advance to have air over the old days when a patient was shut up in a stuffy room, the oxygen of which was used by a stove or fireplace.

Dr. Northrup in New York, who started the open air treatment of penumonia, used to say, "Why make the patient take five breaths when three will do the work?"

Pneumonia is a short, self-limited disease, and neither drugs nor diet are of paramount importance.

In serum, it has been found that Types I and II will respond to a serum, and these constitute, as you see in the table, 65 per cent of the cases.

Typing can now be done rapidly and accurately.

The use of an oxygen tent or an oxygen chamber has been found by many physicians to be beneficial.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a 3-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instruction for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

New Linen Patterns.

Paris, (AP).—Linens promise to be one of the most popular materials. Heavier linens that simulate woolen, tweed and herringbone weaves will be shown for town wear and traveling. They are woven from a springy sort of thread that seldom crushes or musses.

How to Dress Well

She is sure to turn up in an ill-matched, unsuitable costume. Brown-on-beige print, too large for good taste, too light for the season. Fussy details that kill all beauty of line. Picture hat suitable for midsummer only. Bag and shoes of black—which goes beautifully with almost anything but brown.

Natlie, for her in-between seasons print, chose a gay but tastefully small design on a black ground. Her black winter accessories and pearls harmonize with this graceful dress.

Any man would be proud to be seen with Natalie in this smart outfit at luncheon or the movies. He's sure, too, that if he takes her to a basketball game, formal dinner, or dance, her costume will be appropriate.

By her clever choice of "foundation" dresses, which she varies with colorful accessories to suit the occasion, Natalie makes her wardrobe seem larger than it is.

Our 40-page booklet, "Secrets of Being Well Dressed," gives facts about style, line, color, fabric to suit your particular type. How to conceal your defects, bring out your best points. Have a well-rounded wardrobe.

Send 15c for our booklet, "Secrets of being Well Dressed," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Fatties Take Care! Stripes Are 'Must' For Summer Wear

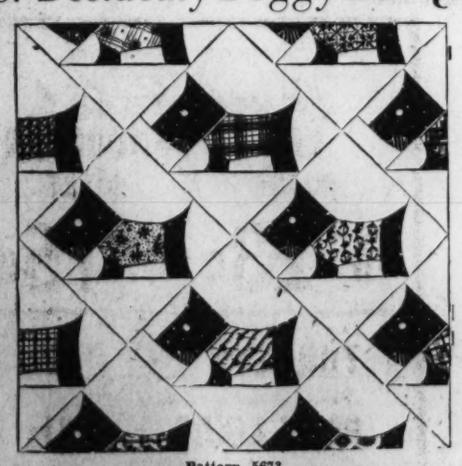
Paris (U.P.).—It's going to be a bad summer this season for the fat girls.

Paris designers have decreed stripes—big, broad stripes. And many of them go 'round and 'round, a design never helpful to the woman with some extra pounds she would like to conceal.

Multi-colored stripes, usually set off by black, Navy blue or white, are used for beach wear and simple country or resort dresses.

The greater part of the spring tweed suits are in multi-colored plaids, used in conjunction with solid color or in striped flannel with lines running one way on the jacket and the other way on the skirt. Most colorful of the striped prints are in silks for cocktail parties, dinner or evening wear.

Scotties Furnish Inspiration For Decidedly Doggy Bed Quilt



Pattern 5673.

By Alice Brooks.

HOOT MON! See the Scotties—dozens of them—and each one part of this gloriously "doggy" quilt! True, they look alike, but their blankets may be varied by using colorful scraps. The 10-inch blocks are fun to piece, and would be just as appropriate for a patchwork pillow. For smart, uniform effect, be sure to keep Scottie's squarish form in the same material. In pattern 5673 you will find the block chart, an illustration for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram to quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Dept., 259 W. Fourteenth street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

THE ONLY SAFE and certain way of eliminating the maelstrom of the under-the-stairs' closet is to eliminate it: Almost every woman who does much entertaining longs for a powder room on the first floor of her home, and that old, dark, catch-all closet under the stairs is a rather obvious place to use for this purpose.

First, of course, the family must be mollified for being deprived of a general dumping place. Then clean out the closet and have a painter and decorator in if you're feeling flush. (Otherwise do the job yourself . . . it's not hard work.) Since not much paper is required you can afford to be extravagant and use one of those grand hand-made papers . . . any paper hanger will be sure to do an extra-special job because he's using such elegant material. The color range in these papers is wide and interesting . . . we liked a powder room in a paper of deep mulberry with silver that Agnes Weigh has just finished at her house.

A shelf was built at the "straight" end of the closet—that is the end opposite the slanting ceiling made by the stairs. The shelf was dressing table height with a good mirror on it. At the top of the mirror Agnes improvised a small silver crown with mulberry satin draped from it in the best royal fashion. Then she draped the shelf in mulberry satin with silver thread appliqued crowns . . . she bought the satin and did the little crowns herself. The paper was silver with a thin mulberry stripe.

Good lighting for make-up was provided by recessing a group of lights in oblong niches on either side of the mirror, the lights covered with frosted glass and the niche edged with chromium frames. A mulberry satin hassock with silver fringe made an attractive seat for the dressing table, and on party days Agnes brought down her best silver dresser set as decoration for the table.

A royal corner for a royal welcome!

Eastern Shore Recipes Given For Seafoods

Ways of Making Southern Fried Chicken, Biscuits Also Are Listed.

By Rebekah Blake.

HAVE YOU ever tried the luscious Southern fried chicken that melts under your fork, or Maryland beaten biscuits with their pleasing flakiness? If you haven't, you have missed some really fine samples of food.

It is true that the South has good cooks, but the colored mammies aren't the only ones who know the time tested culinary arts. Mrs. Howard Kinnamon, of Easton, a native of the Eastern Shore of Maryland, shares the recipes that have been in her family for unaccountable years.

The Eastern Shore may be small in size, but it has a large number of excellent recipes that are handed down from mother to daughter, and each generation makes improvements. So it isn't any wonder that they are so interesting and successful.

The beaten biscuit is especially a Maryland food. Mrs. Kinnamon's recipe for these biscuits was originated by her grandmother. During that time bread was made by this recipe and was worked by hand until it was light and cracked with the working. Later, in the next generation, people had learned that by beating the dough with a heavy object, as a hammer or an axe, it would get light and ready for baking. Now the dough is often put through a food chopper several times, then placed in the refrigerator for seveal hours so it will get light.

Seafoods Traditional.

The seafoods are traditional with the Eastern Shore, due to its location between the Atlantic Ocean and Chesapeake Bay. People have learned to get the most out of this food by using it in many ways. Some natives live entirely by and on the supplies from the water. Quite a social event is made of turtle supper. Turtle soup is the main course of the meal. Soft shell crabs are a substantial delicacy that are eaten with relish throughout the crab season. Salt markeral is a popular dish for Sunday breakfast. It is not a purely "Sho" food, but one that is used many places.

Maryland fried chicken may be eaten throughout the State, but in other places it doesn't quite live up to Eastern Shore style.

Maryland Beaten Biscuits.

2 pounds sifted flour
4½ ounces lard
Salt
Water

Mix the flour, lard and a little salt with enough water to make a stiff dough. Beat 20 minutes for each pound of dough. Bake in a hot oven until done.

Maryland Fried Chicken.

Cut up a young chicken, about 2 pounds; lay in cold water about 20 minutes, drain. Beat one egg, pour over the chicken. Combine salt, pepper and half-cup flour. Mix well with the hands. Roll the chicken in the flour mixture. Fry the chicken slowly until brown in hot greased pan, using sufficient grease to keep the chicken from burning. Turn the fowl and brown the other side. When it is nicely browned on both sides set on the back of the stove and steam for a short time.

Gravy.

After removing the chicken, add flour to the drippings, let brown, add cold water, a little salt and pepper. Cook to the consistency of good gravy.

Oyster Pie.

Line the sides and bottom of a pudding dish or pan with pastry and cook in the oven. Combine one quart of oysters, salt, pepper, butter the size of a walnut and a small handful of flour and one of cornmeal. Cook until the oysters are done. Pour the oyster mixture into the pan containing the pastry shell, and a top crust and bake until done.

Soft Shell Crabs.

To clean soft shell crabs, remove the apron on the under side. Lift each end of shell on top, take out the dead men's fingers, cut off the eyes, mouth, etc. Pull out the sand bag in back of the mouth. Sprinkle a little salt over the crabs until time to cook. Add a little more salt and pepper. Cook slowly in hot fryer with grease enough to prevent burning. Cook until well done and brown.

Turtle Soup.

To prepare the turtle, cut off head and hang up to bleed half an hour. Put in hot water for ten minutes. Take out and scrape off all brown skin from legs and neck and scales from back and breast shells. Remove entrails. Put shells and meat in kettle and boil until meat leaves bones.

Soup.

Pick meat from all large bones, put in kettle, add salt, pepper, mustard and a large piece of butter. Add some water from the first cooking and white potatoes cut in cubes. Cook for one-half hour. Have several hard-boiled eggs, chop into a soup when done. Drop dumplings can be added.

Vegetable Dish Replaces Meat in Menu

Cheese has come into its own and is now more than a decoration in meals. Here it is combined with spinach to form the main course of a Lenten meal. Mashed potatoes are used to fill the center of the ring and tiny red beets are placed around the spinach-cheese ring to add more color to the dish and another vegetable to the meal.

Spinach-Cheese Ring Is Tasty Lenten Substitute for Meat

Heaping Mound of Whipped Potatoes, Buttered and Faintly Browned, and Scalloping of Beets Add to Green Dish.

TIME WAS when cheese was something you ate with a piece of pie, or in a sandwich. But that was back in the dim ages of American cookery when the national per capita consumption of cheese was comparatively small.

Now meal planners have learned to include cheese in the daily menu as one of the most important of main dish standbys, an ever-present aid to the family budget and a worthy all for virtually any meal.

Cheese with its high protein value has been one of the most familiar of the Lenten staples throughout Christendom since the fourth century A. D., when the season was first observed as a religious fast period. Today it plays a more important role than ever before. It is no longer an occasional or luxury item in the meals of Americans. Cheese demonstrates its value and goodness every day as the inspiration for the main dish of a meal. One reason for the universal popularity of cheese as a Lenten staple is its agreeable nature in combination with other foods—eggs, fish, vegetables, rice and almost any other food you can mention. Cheese adds not only high food value to these combinations, but provides a touch of inspiration, too, for even the most everyday dishes.

Cheese is an appropriate dress up for spinach. The homely virtues of this distinctly garden variety vegetable are so enhanced by the generous addition of grated American cheese that spinach is very apt to lead the list of family favorites.

One of the most decorative, economical and inviting of whole-meal fasting dishes has as its basis a spinach and cheese ring. This colorful delicacy comes to the table with the two other familiar allies in fancy dress. As a centerpiece for the ring, try a heaping mound of whipped potatoes, buttery and faintly browned. Surround the ring with a scalloping of hot buttered beets. Here is a meal whose dietetic virtues entitle it to be described as wholesome, but whose appearance is so handsome as to make it appear the most frivolous of party dishes.

Using spinach-cheese ring as your main course, serve tomato juice cocktail, spinach-cheese ring, shrimp salad, hot rolls and butter, coffee and cherry pie or peach upside-down cake for dinner tonight.

Spinach-Cheese Ring.

3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
½ pound American cheese, grated
3 eggs, beaten
1 cup finely chopped cooked spinach
1½ cups soft bread crumbs
Salt and pepper
Hot mashed potatoes
Buttered beets

Make a sauce with the butter, flour and milk. When thickened and smooth add the grated cheese. Remove from fire and stir until cheese is melted. Add the eggs, thoroughly drained spinach crumbs, and seasonings to taste. Pour into a buttered ring mold and bake in a moderate over, 350 F. for 40 to 50 minutes. Unmold on a serving plate. Fill the center with hot mashed potatoes and garnish the plate with tiny beets.

Spinach Souffle.

Melt 1 tablespoon butter, add 1 tablespoon flour and when blended add ¼ cup milk, stir until the sauce boils, add 1 cup cooked spinach chopped fine, 2 tablespoons grated cheese, 2 tablespoons chopped onion, 2 egg yolks, well beaten, ¾ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, few grains cayenne and a few grains nutmeg. Fold in 2 egg whites beaten stiff and bake 25 minutes in a greased casserole dish at 350 F. Serve with tomato sauce if desired.

Bridge Table Suggestion.

Just as glossy ripe olives and bright red radishes supply a sparkling note of interest and color contrast for the luncheon or dinner table, so an arrangement of chocolate covered raisins, salted nuts and hard candy is a perfect combination for the bridge table.

Use Dried-Fruit Juices.

In view of the outstanding high vitamin and mineral values in dried fruits, all of the juice from these stewed fruits should be carefully used. In gelatin desserts, sauces and frozen dishes these juices may be used to good advantage.

Blue Becomes Popular Again For Kitchens

Delphinium Shade Reigns for Pots, Pans and Other Gadgets.

HOUSEWARES merchandisers always on the alert for new sensational selling ideas have quickly taken up delphinium blue as a new kitchen color. It has been chosen to reign supreme over bright reds, blues and greens that have been sharing the kitchen honors during previous years.

This deeper-than-powder-blue is a soft color that promises to wear well. The homemaker may select pots and pans in this solid color or white utensils trimmed in blue and may furnish her entire kitchen in this ensemble for every conceivable brush and gadget boasts delphinium blue. Dust pans and soap-box containers are trimmed with it, water bottles have dephinium tops and even electric mixers and kitchen window shades feature this new shade.

This new blue ensemble is made up of a number of items by 25 different manufacturers. They all agreed on the shade and have joined forces to create the collection of matched kitchen furnishings.

This means an astonishing revival of blue in the home. This color has not been popular for many years. The new blue is not the shade of former years but a new, vital, pastel blue of the larkspur. And from the first sample pieces displayed it has been received with enthusiasm by the housewife.

In discovering delphinium blue, artists found that it had a tendency to swing away from the solid heavy colors as red and green and even ivory. Manufacturers were making kitchen wares in black and white and needed a color to relieve the white effect. They decided on blue. But the old shades of blue were sickly and anaemic—most of them completely lacking in feminine appeal.

Window displays and department displays were started in various stores. The consumer response was immediate.

China is also blue. And it may be had in a wide line including teapots, coffee pots, bowls, casseroles, bean pots, sugar and cream containers, condiment jars, juice extractors, ramekins, shirred egg and soup dishes are all designed with graceful lines and are fireproof. With two graceful sprays of delphinium decorating the wall of the plate, new dinnerware pattern is an attractive addition to the delphinium blue line. And stainless table and kitchen cutlery is brought out with bakelite handles in blue.

Modern gas ranges and refrigerators are designed to match the fashionable blue kitchens. The handles and trimmings of the appliances are colored. These will be made up for special orders. Kitchen furniture and oilcloths are blue featuring this new shade as are sweepers and brooms.

Art of Reading Is Unknown to Many Children

College Students Found Who Must Devote Years to Learning Subject.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

A GREAT NUMBER of boys and girls, one might almost say the majority of those who enter college, do not know how to read. This does not mean that they are unable to read print. They can tell one word from another, can make sense out of what is on the page. They can spell, can write, can even punctuate, but still they do not know how to read.

Why should they? Except for the texbooks which they use in school they have never read anything which required concentration and thought. They are fed on the pap of literature from infancy up, and their mental digestions are unable to assimilate a harsher diet.

Mrs. X upbraided Mrs. Y for not permitting her children to read unlimited trash. Mrs. Y insisted on a certain proportion of the classics in her children's mental pabulum, and as the youngsters grew older even added history and science to their required reading. Mrs. X's children, meanwhile, were permitted to indulge exclusively in "children's books" from which, without any transition period, they jumped to modern novels.

When the group went on to college the X children found themselves unable to grasp the meaning of the lectures they heard and the reading they were required to do. Most of the freshman and part of the sophomore year was wasted learning how to read.

For knowing how to read does not consist merely in the ability to follow a story. Many a halfwit is able to do as much. Knowing how to read means reading with judgment and discrimination, and being able and willing to work for the meaning sometimes not immediately on the surface.

For this purpose a literary background is essential, and this can best be acquired in youth. Without this background a real education and culture cannot be achieved.

To preserve left-over egg yolks for future use, place them in a small bowl and cover with salad oil. When kept in the safe, uniform temperature of a modern air-conditioned ice refrigerator, the egg yolks will remain soft and fresh.

Post Announces Egg Dish Recipe Contest for Lent

Egg dishes are the subject for this week's recipe contest. These foods, rich in protein, are especially appropriate this season because they may serve as substitutes for meat during the Lenten season. And eggs are plentiful and low in price just now in spite of the weather.

If you have an especially interesting dish recipe, enter it in The Post Recipe Contest. You may win one of the cash prizes. These are $3 for first prize; $2 for second prize and $1 for each of the remaining three prizes.

Egg dishes may be ever so different and unusual and you may serve a different one every day without tiring of them. You may serve goldenrod eggs, egg ring with creamed mushrooms, stuffed egg salad, eggs a la Benedict, eggs baked in green peppers, baked stuffed eggs with mushroom sauce, French omelet, cheese omelet, baked hash with eggs or eggs in tomatoes. Or you may prepare shirred eggs with chicken livers, eggs with spinach, egg chowder or any number of other dishes.

Copy your recipe clearly and send to Rebekah Blake, The Post Food Editor, in time for it to reach her not later than Saturday noon.

Only one recipe will be accepted from each contestant.

Cooking Hints

Before starting out on a dress-buying tour, slip a "water wave" net cap into your purse. Don it before plunging into the "pulling-on-and-off" ordeal and—miracle of miracles—you will leave the shop quite as neatly groomed as when you left home.

Keep a three-minute egg-timing glass by your telephone to time long distance toll calls.

To quickly dry children's sweater suits that are constantly in use, baste them on a towel and then hang the towel on the clothes line. You will find that the suits dry much quicker when the wind can blow through them.

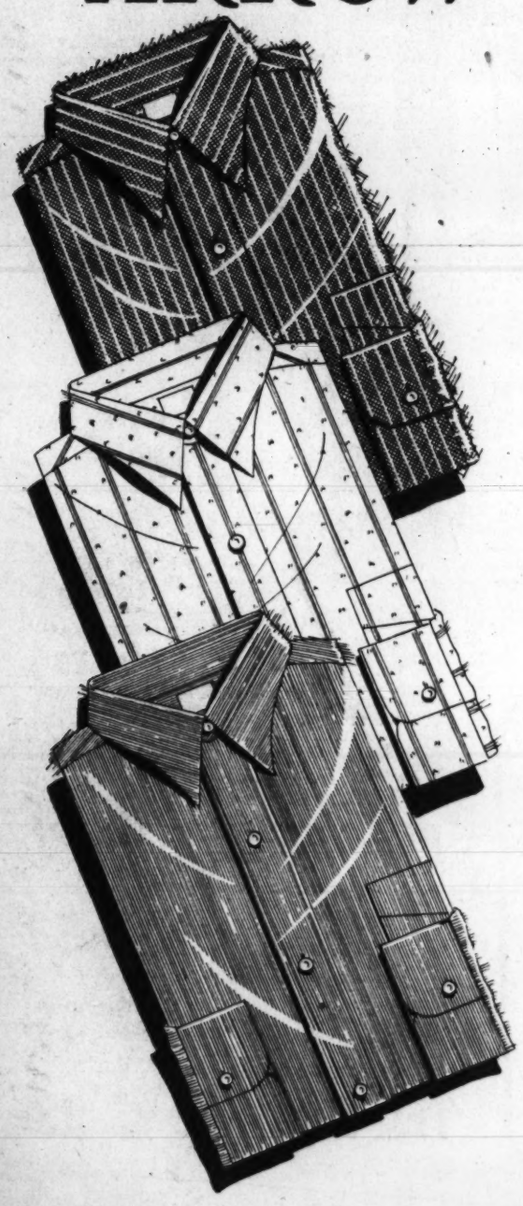
ARROW SHIRTS

with the Arrowset starchless collars

$2.00



START out in the morning in an Arrow Shirt, with the collar that manages to look immaculately starched without the use of a single drop of starch . . . and continue to look that way through the longest day's wear! The Mitoga-shaped body sees to it that your shirt fits well, so it won't wrinkle round your middle.

THE NEW PATTERNS are highly colored, new as a spring day! The patterns, of course, are neat as Arrows. Plenty of plain colored broadcloth, too, in white, blue, tan or grey. Oxfords in blue, white and fancy colors. All are blessed with Arrow's own sanforizing process that guarantees them against shrinkage.

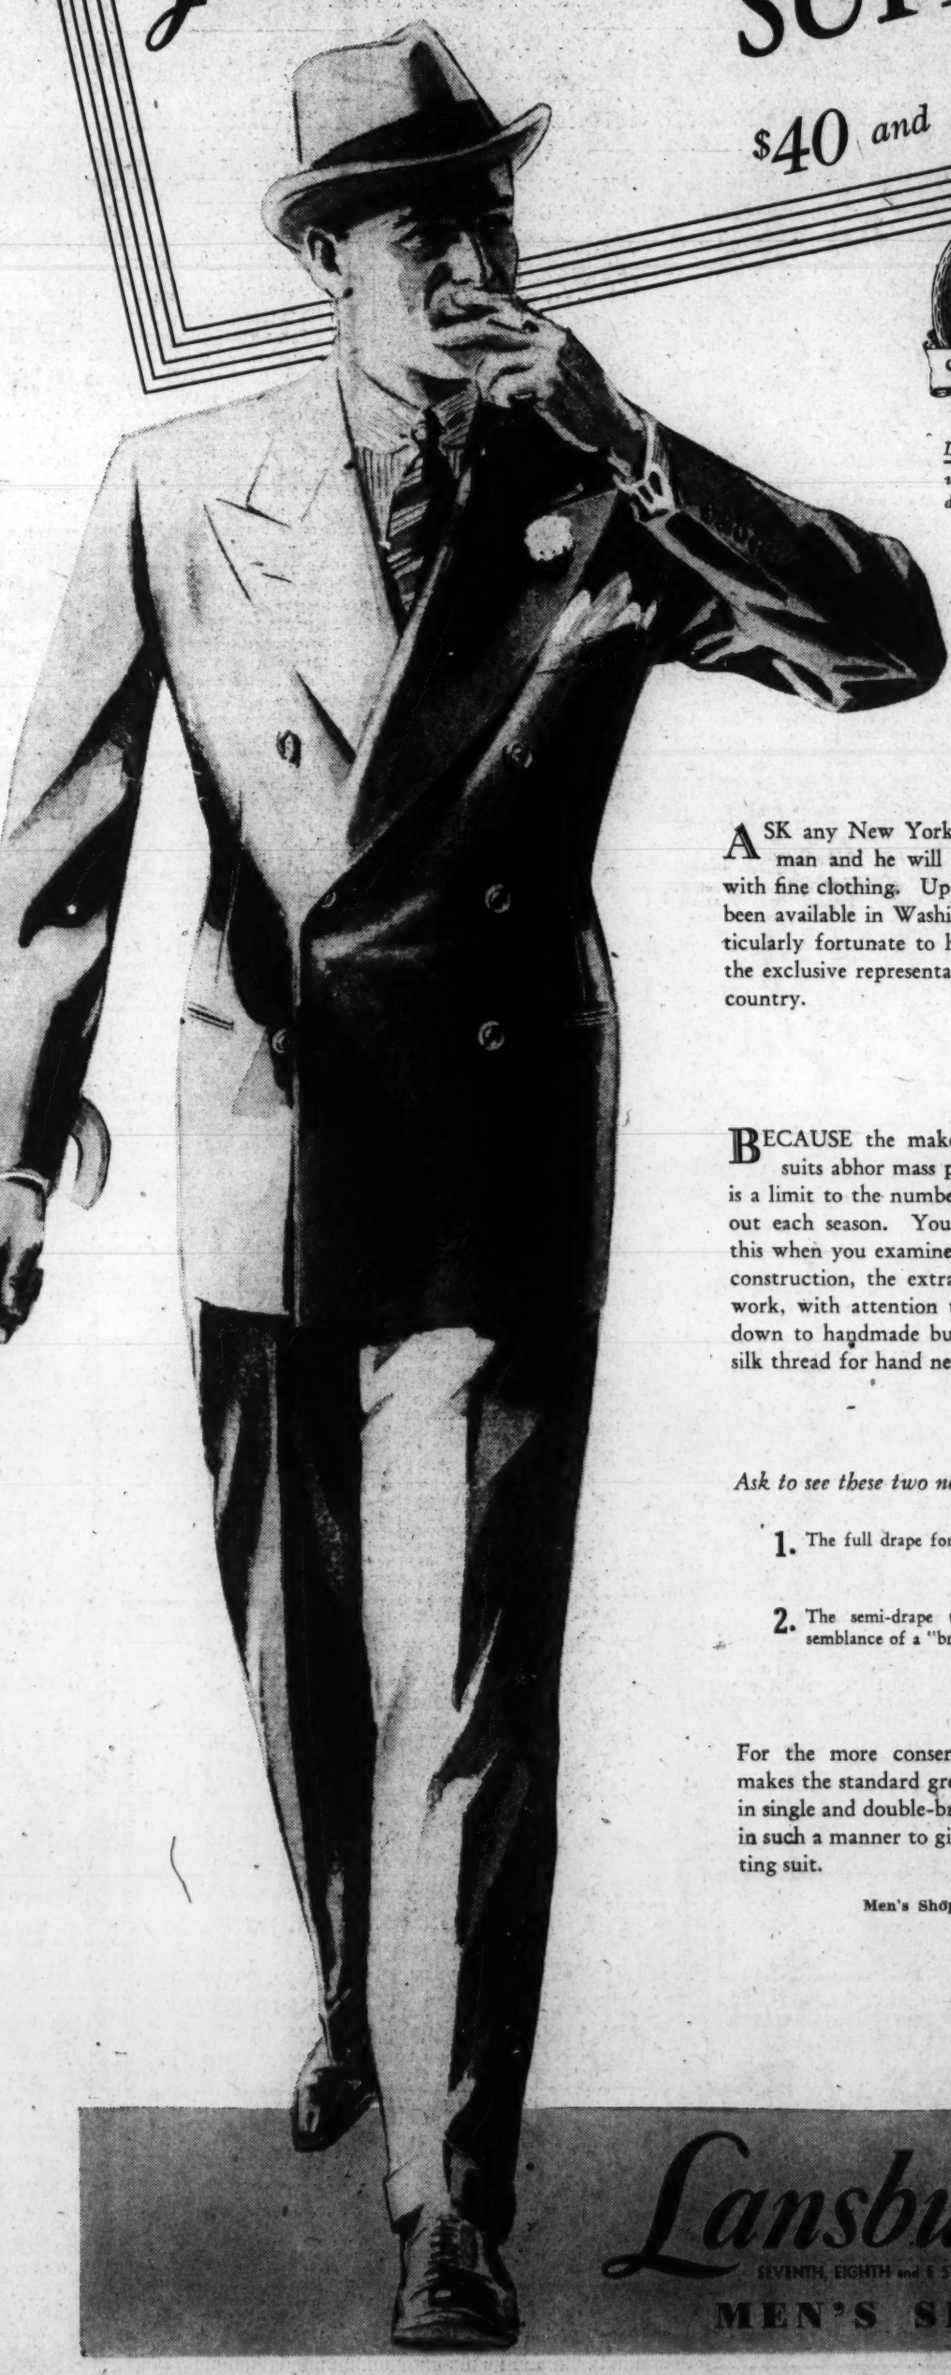
Simon Ackerman SUITS

$40 and $45



Look for this label when you see truly distinctive tailoring.

ASK any New Yorker about Simon Ackerman and he will immediately associate it with fine clothing. Up to now this line has not been available in Washington, and we feel particularly fortunate to have been able to secure the exclusive representation for this part of the country.

BECAUSE the makers of Simon Ackerman suits abhor mass production methods there is a limit to the number of garments they turn out each season. You will readily understand this when you examine the vital details of their construction, the extravagant amount of hand work, with attention to every fine detail even down to handmade buttonholes and the use of silk thread for hand needling.

Ask to see these two new 1937 models

1. The full drape for the high-style minded.

2. The semi-drape that gives just the slightest semblance of a "break" over the chest.

For the more conservative Simon Ackerman makes the standard greys, blue, tans and browns in single and double-breasted models but tailored in such a manner to give you a softer, better fitting suit.

Stout Fellows!

The other day someone wanted a live Indian for exhibition purposes and sent us errandward . . . But we found neither hide, hair nor feather of a live Indian . . . And the reason of our failure may be in the nature of live Indians who, we subsequently learned, want no traffic with crowded places . . . For example . . .

Meet Tom Wilson and his wife, who is a daughter of Hungry Dog Bill . . . An Indian Affairs publication presents Tom, especially, and his views on crowds, somewhat as follows:

With three children and three nieces the couple live in Death Valley . . . They are Shoshones . . . Tom occasionally acts as trapper and guide; his wife sells baskets . . . "But Tom likes independence and plenty of space, so he camps in as far off an area as he can find, at least 20 miles from the nearest dwelling" . . . Last winter was tough, and Tom's family lived largely on jerked wild burro meat and Mesquite beans . . . Tom's only comment: "There are too many people around."

The resignation of John S. Wynne, chief of the airport, marking and mapping section, Bureau of Air Commerce, will become effective March 1. A member of the bureau staff since December, 1933, Wynne is leaving government service to practice law in the District. Eugene L. Vidal, director, air commerce, says: "With deep regret, we have accepted his resignation as tendered, for although we would like to retain him . . . we recognize that he must give consideration to hs own future career."

"I'll Take My Stand"

"We are in favor of a Federal service 100 per cent on a merit basis, with the exception of those positions which are definitely of a policy-making nature"—Luther C. Steward, president, N. F. F. E.

"Legislation plays it part and is important, of course, but union organization gives strength and practical wisdom to the formation and enforcement of legislative programs"—Frances Perkins.

"Of all the many useful public facilities built under our program, I consider that schools and hospitals represent the soundest possible investment of Federal funds"—Harold L. Ickes.

Journey Reflections

H. L. Westover, of Agriculture's Bureau of Plant Industry—he's a tall stout man who smokes a pipe as if he likes it—reflects on his recent scientific sojourn in Asiatic Turkey, something after this manner:

"The Turks aren't unspeakable people . . . I've never met nicer people, and never travelled in any country where property was more safe . . . More plants of interest in Turkestan than I've ever seen elsewhere . . . And I've sought out the plants of Argentina, Chile, Russia, Spain and North Africa . . . Lost 40 pounds on that last trip, but I could spare it . . . Besides, less weight stood me well when there was mountain climbing and the going was tough . . . One comfort always: Bugs, bed bugs and bugs like that, never bother me . . . Recall that on one trip my companion had to sit up all night; but the bugs just don't get on me . . . When I'm out there in the field I sometimes think it will be the last trip . . . But when I'm back here I want to be going again . . . That's natural, I suppose . . . Women with veils on in Turkey? You don't see them except in the interior . . . And no men with fezzes on . . .

"I imagine a lot of people would want to go out on these scientific journeys . . . But they, most of them, anyhow, wouldn't last a week in the field . . . The hardships sometimes are unbelievable . . . Getting permission from the authorities to move freely is about as aggravating as any other part . . . I recall how squash and eggplant were favorite vegetables among the Turkish peoples . . . And camel's milk isn't bad drinking . . . I'll write a book, maybe, on the things I found; the notes already are in shape . . .

It cost Mrs. Emory only 36 cents to r e n t two rooms

Last week, Mrs. Jennie Emory, of 2003 Eye street northwest, had two vacant rooms. Now those vacancies are paying Mrs. Emory a handsome weekly income, simply because Mrs. Emory advertised her vacant rooms in The Post's Rooms-For-Rent column instead of depending on a sign in her window.

If Mrs. Emory had depended on a sign in her window, she would probably have lost a week's rent. But instead she called The Post and inserted this inexpensive ad where persons interested in a room would see it:

Senate Picks 5 Conferees On Red Rider

Group May Meet Three Representatives Early Next Week.

Proponents of Outright Repeal Sees Cause Strengthened.

Five conferees were appointed by the Senate yesterday to meet three managers for the House on the question of whether the "red rider" should be repealed or amended.

The Senate conferees are Senator Black, of Alabama, chairman of the committee on education and labor; Senator Copeland (Democrat), of New York; Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts; Senator Borah (Republican), of Wisconsin, and Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin.

House managers are Chairman Mary T. Norton, of the House District committee, and Representatives Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, and Short (Republican), of Missouri.

Parley Seen Next Week.

Senator Black said that a conference probably will be called early next week. Asked his opinion of the outcome, he smiled and said:

"Well, I've heard all sorts of suggestions as to what might be done if the House won't accept outright repeal.

"The proposal has been made that the rider be broadened to prohibit the teaching or advocacy of anything anybody is against.

"It also has been suggested that it might be applied to all schools over the country, both public and private, and to all officials paid with public money."

Prospects for House acceptance of the Senate repeal measure are better now, according to supporters of repeal, than when the House adopted the "pink rider" last District day.

McCormack Plans Fight.

Many members have stated their willingness to vote for repeal if the House conferees return with the recommendation that the House recede and concur.

Representative McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, author of the amendment, on the other hand, is preparing to fight for retention of the "pink rider."

Educational associations over the week-end were planning to telegraph appeals to members who voted for the McCormack amendment to vote for the Senate repeal measure if the opportunity arises.

In view of the Senate action in twice approving the repeal bill, its managers are not expected to yield to the House in conference.

Outright repeal of the Red Rider was sought by the Takoma Park Citizens' Association last night.

Frank Acton Gets Maximum Term In Mursch Death

Justice Oscar R. Luhring in District Court yesterday sentenced Frank H. Acton to an indeterminate term of from 3 to 15 years in prison following his conviction several weeks ago of manslaughter for the slaying of Donald E. Mursch, 29, at Eleventh and F streets southwest.

Before he pronounced sentence, Justice Luhring told Acton "You have set yourself against society ever since you were 16 years old. Most of your life since then has been spent in prison. I can understand that you feel bitter and that it is hard for you to go straight. But the jury accorded you all reasonable leniency when it found you guilty of manslaughter rather than first or second degree murder."

Acton, who admitted shooting Mursch, pleaded for a light sentence because his previous record will make it almost impossible for him to secure parole until he has served most of his sentence. The term given him was the maximum.

The shooting occurred when Mursch told Acton he was going to take a gun and ram it down Acton's throat. There was ill feeling between the two, it was shown, because Mursch had taken some money from Acton a few days prior to the shooting.

Science Builds a Bungalow in a Day

600 Attending Jewish Youth District Parley

More than 600 delegates, representing 50,000 Jewish young people throughout the country, arrived in Washington yesterday to attend the thirteenth annual convention of the Young Peoples' League of the United Synagogue of America. The convention opened formally last night with services at Adas Israel Synagogue, Sixth and I streets northwest.

Louis J. Ottenberg of Washington, praised the Young Peoples' League as a force against "present-day cynicism." He said that only faith and brotherhood could fight materialism and achieve a universality of mankind.

Lester Levy, local chairman of the group, presided at the meeting. Rabbi Solomon Metz officiated at the religious services.

The opening exercises were followed by a forum discussion led by Mitchell Dvoret, of the B'nai Israel Young Peoples' League.

Headquarters of the group are at the Willard Hotel. Meetings will be held there and at various local synagogues. The convention will continue through Monday.

Concrete House Is Built in Day By New History-Making Plan

Air Forced From Material After It Is Poured Results in Quick Drying; First Demonstration in Bethesda.

A house was built in a day out in Bethesda yesterday—as though a number of genii had popped from a case of King Solomon's fabulous bottles, fresh from the pages of "Arabian Nights."

The genie, however, was a product of modern science at its best. It was, in fact, the system of Karl P. Billner, of No. 30 Rockefeller plaza, New York, of treating freshly poured concrete by a vacuum process, which eliminates surplus moisture and causes the material to harden in less than 20 minutes.

Demonstration of the construction of the complete house, with the exception of the plumbing and other jobs the contractor does not undertake, was witnessed by a group of Federal officials at the corner of McKinley and Jefferson streets. It followed several preliminary tests made at Yale, Columbia and McGill universities during the past year.

Process Is Practical.

Having emerged from the laboratory stage to the maturity of the practical world, the process has become highly interesting to various Government officials and architectural engineers.

These tests were performed under the supervision and direction of Professors Duff A. Abrams and Theodore Crane, of Yale University. It next was demonstrated that the new sort of concrete was much stronger than the current type. The system involves putting atmospheric pressure to work so that it squeezes excess water out of the concrete mixture and transforms the cement to its original rocklike structure.

Molds were set up in Bethesda yesterday morning. Then the framework was poured in, and yesterday afternoon it was pronounced sufficiently strong and rigid to permit the work of exterior and interior finishing to begin.

How Method Operates.

Here is the Billner method. After the concrete is poured in the customary fashion into the molds, a vacuum pump is started and an atmospheric pressure to the extent of 1,500 pounds, or more, per square foot forces the mixture out and through the vacuum lines beyond that needed for turning the cement into its rigidity.

While it is still in a plastic state, the vacuum pressure squeezes the concrete so that solid concrete composition is forced into all spaces from which the water is withdrawn. Quick hardening follows.

Billner said his vacuum type of construction will raise the height limit to which a concrete structure may be built to 25 floors.

So it was that a bungalow, without trimmings, stood where none had stood before in Bethesda that day—first time in history such a method had been used.

And so it is that through the process streets and towns and parts of cities may spring in a single day in sections of the flood-devastated areas where homes were washed away.

This, at least, is Billner's dream—a practical dream, which through his great process, is not too costly to realize.

W. W. Schwartz Dies in Missouri

Word was received here yesterday of the death, in Lexington, Mo., of William Warner Schwartz, 43, formerly a resident of Washington.

For the past 17 years Schwartz, who was the son of Mrs. Herbert Schwartz and brother of Mrs. Edna B. Smith, both of 1315 Columbia road, had practiced law in Lexington. He was a graduate of Eastern High School and Georgetown University.

Boy Critically Hurt In Traffic Crash

Twelve-year-old Timothy Hobson, of 1245 Thirtieth street northwest, was critically injured last night when the bicycle he was riding collided with an automobile at Twenty-seventh and P streets northwest.

Physicians at Georgetown Hospital, where the child was taken, said he had suffered a fracture of his right leg and possible concussion of the brain.

State Park in N. Y. Leads U. S. In Visitors, Dr. Bryant Reveals

Ten million people seek recreation annually in the 25 national parks in the United States, Dr. H. C. Bryant, assistant director of the National Park Service told members of the National Geographic Society last night at Constitution Hall. He described and illustrated with motion pictures how each year improvements in the National Park system are luring greater numbers of visitors.

In 1930 about 3,000,000 persons visited the parks, and while 300 per cent more now get back to nature in these Government-owned and Government-directed areas. State parks also are showing great popularity. Bear Mountain Park, a New York State park on the Hudson River, had 12,000,000 visitors last year.

Dr. Bryant was scheduled to speak on "Our Eastern Playgrounds," but he did not confine himself to the playgrounds of any one section. He described Shenandoah and Great Smoky Mountains National Parks as among the wilderness areas of the Appalachian system that are becoming increasingly popular with millions of motorists, hikers, and horseback riders who are taking to the highways and trails in winter as well as summer.

In the summer it is not uncommon for as many as 3,000 automobiles to enter the Skyline Drive of Shenandoah National Park in an afternoon. Blossom time in the spring, and autumn coloring, probably unexcelled in the East, are the chief lures of the Great Smokies. While nature lovers scan the Smoky's heights for color, 600 miles of clear streams teeming with trout, and nearly as many miles of trails test the skill of the fisherman and the leg muscles of hikers. The Appalachian Trail, the 2,000-mile path from New England to Georgia, rambles along the crest of the mountains in both the Shenandoah and Great Smoky Parks.

The Everglades Park in Florida and the Acadia Park in Maine also were described.

Glimpses of Gettysburg, Fort Jefferson on the Dry Tortugas, where was imprisoned Dr. Mudd, who was charged with giving medical aid to Booth, the assassin of Lincoln, and of Fort Marion at St. Augustine, Fla., which was built in 1672 by the Spaniards, were shown as well as areas in the Presidential Range of New Hampshire.

Well, I'll Tell You . . . . . By Bob Burns

Just two hours ago, by the clock, I sat down here with pencil in hand to write an article on how silly it is for people to worry. And it just struck me that I've been sittin' here ever since worryin' my head off about ho wto start this article.

If you've got your mind made up that you just have to worry about somethin', it's a good idea to pick out somethin' close at hand because if you pick out somethin' too far ahead to worry about, the chances are you'll never get to it. About ninety-per cent of the things you worry about never happen anyhow.

It's like the time they was hangin' two horse thieves down home and they picked out a tree that hung out over the river. Well Sir, the first guy they hung swung out and the rope broke and he fell into the river and finally swam out and made his escape. When they started to hang the second fella, he says "Boys, be sure to pick out a good strong rope for me because I can't swim a lick."

Social Group Wants Dole, Hopkins Says

Relief Plans Assailed as Being 'Chaotic' and 'Crazy-Quilt.'

An exchange of epithets between Harry Hopkins and the American Association of Social Workers, in convention here 400-strong, highlighted the opening day's session at the Mayflower yesterday.

First the Social Workers in a formal report characterized Hopkins' relief plans in WPA as being "chaotic" and "crazy-quilt methods." Hopkins, director of the vast Federal relief program retaliated that the Social Workers seek a dole system instead of work-relief, which means "pantry snoopers and grocery orders and baskets of food." (Hopkins is a former president of the organization).

Late yesterday the Social Workers, who claim 10,000 dues-paying members, came back again with this statement from Linton B. Swift, president of the association:

WPA Dropping Assailed.

"Apparently Mr. Hopkins was not personally familiar with the contents of the survey report or newspaper articles describing that report. The position of the American Association of Social Workers is and has been, not only in favor of continuing the Federal works program, but strengthening it and rounding it out. The association has protested any arbitrary demobilization of WPA which would throw people on direct relief."

Speakers yesterday criticized the Government's failure to set up long-range relief provisions for America's destitute. William Hodson, New York City commissioner of public welfare, declared:

"The strategy of the attack on the problem of unemployment must be revised if this knotty problem is to be solved. There is no end to relief needs unless there is at the time constructive efforts to deal with the problem of unemployment itself."

4-Point Plan Outlined.

A system of employment exchanges throughout the country to register study, and analyze industrial problems should be the spearhead of the attack on unemployment, Mr. Hodson said. He outlined a four-point program to follow: (1.) vocational training for young people, (2.) retraining of old workers with obsolete skills, (3.) organization of the casual labor market, and (4.) rehabilitative measures for those unable to work.

Linton Swift in his address said: "We are in a transition period. The problems of unemployment, relief and security are among the most important problems facing the nation today. During the past six years we have experimented . . . the time is at hand when we should concentrate on long range plans for preventing a recurrence of the misery experienced by many during the past six years."

The association is a national professional organization begun in 1922, with membership limited to active social workers.

A Philadelphia delegation related the story of an investigation of 502 applicants for relief who were rejected. It showed that the vast majority of rejections are against people who have small incomes of their own which disqualified them for relief, although in almost every instance the incomes were insufficient to sustain life, averaging about $10 a week per family. It told of scores of such families evicted from homes because of inability to pay rent.

Survey Findings Revealed.

Another survey from 28 selected areas with a population of 49,500,000 indicated the following situations prevail:

1. State and local governments are finding it increasingly difficult to finance direct relief programs.

2. Larger numbers of able-bodied family heads in need of relief are not being absorbed by the Federal Works program.

3. These families are being denied all relief on the grounds they are "a Federal responsibility."

4. Terror of eviction pursues relief families in wide areas.

5. Maximum relief allowances of $7.96 a month per family prevail in some Southern States. Malnutrition is common in these States, clinics report.

6. Stoppage of relief for a week or a month at a time is frequent.

7. WPA wages are inadequate for minimum subsistence.

8. Able-bodied men in a Western State, denied direct relief as "employable" and unable to secure WPA replacement, are deserting their wives and children, in efforts to have their families certified as "unemployable."

9. In many areas, no matter how small the income, anyone with any income is automatically barred from relief.

10. Non-residents are inadequately cared for in many States. In three they get no aid.

The conference will continue through today and tomorrow, closing at 4:30 tomorrow afternoon. Leading social work figures from all over the United States are scheduled to speak today and tomorrow.

Sen. Reynolds to Speak.

Senator Robert R. Reynolds will be the guest speaker at a luncheon sponsored by the Democratic League of the District, to be held at the Grafton this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock.

Police Seize Gang Suspect At His Home

Police learned where he was when Clyde C. Phelps, father of the hunted man, called Maghan, an acquaintance, and said he had heard from his son, and thought he would hear from him again in the evening.

Maghan went to the family residence, 59 Randolph place northwest, and while he was there the boy walked in. He offered no resistance.

After Phelps had dined with his parents, Maghan took him to the Second Precinct station and then to headquarters, where he was being questioned late last night.

Police said they learned Phelps after his escape Monday night, when he leaped from the second-floor porch, had gone to Florida. He arrived there with a little more than $4, and hitch-hiked home.

In the youth's room, police said, when they first went to arrest him, they found five rifles, two automatic pistols, two revolvers and a gun of foreign make.

Closeted by detectives with the other suspects, Richard Parks and Slyvio Daneri, Phelps corroborated their confessions.

The three seemed on good terms, police said, and Phelps even nodded when he saw them beneath the floodlights.

Bridges Assails Relief Waste; Urges Changes

Senator Wants Opportunities to Be Kept Open for Youth.

In an attack on the Roosevelt recovery program, Senator H. Styles Bridges (Republican), New Hampshire, last night said that so far as attaining permanent results was concerned, money spent for relief "might just as well have been dumped into the Atlantic Ocean."

Speaking at the American University Founders' Day dinner, held at the Hotel Hamilton, the New Hampshire Senator said that only a radical program change could permanently solve the unemployment problem.

Saying that the unemployment problem could never be permanently solved if opportunity were limited, Bridges expressed his dislike for controlling production, and "penalizing progress and thrift." "The doors of opportunity must be kept open to youth," he declared.

Bridges stressed the part which education should play in making youth aware of opportunity.

The Founders' Day dinner was given in honor of three trustees of the university who all participated in its organization 45 years ago. The three men are Dr. Charles W. Baldwin, 93, of Baltimore, former pastor of the Ryland Methodist Episcopal Church and the Wesley Episcopal Church here; Albert Osborne, 87, of Washington Grove, Md., and Hosea B. Moulton, 93, retired Washington lawyer. Dr. Baldwin, who is the second oldest living alumnus of Yale University, spoke briefly at the meeting, urging that the university maintain its original ideals.

Other speakers were Dr. Arthur C. Christie, president of the university board of trustees, and Dr. Joseph M. M. Gray, university chancellor. Dr. Gray presided.

It was announced at the dinner that Sidney Sachs and William Powell, of the American University debating team, will represent the National Student Federation on a debate tour of the British Isles in May. The team yesterday defeated Denison University, of Grandville, Ohio, in a debate here.

Senate Group Approves Art Gift Measure

Austin Amends Bill to Permit Exhibits in Gallery.

National Distribution of Mellon Collection Suggested.

The Senate Committee on Public Buidings and Grounds yesterday voted to report favorably, with an amendment, the bill authorizing acceptance of Andrew W. Mellon's $50,000,000 art collection and a $10,000,000 National Art Gallery to be constructed on the Mall.

An amendment, proposed by Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, and accepted without objection, will permit the National Gallery, to display paintings from time to time, although they do not meet the high standards set for the permanent collection.

Senator Austin explained he thought the gallery should be able to hold temporary exhibtions without imposing the rigid requirements demanded by Mellon for additions to his donation.

No Objection Made.

Donald P. Shepard and David E. Finley, architects representing Mellon, made no objection to the amendment.

Senator Connally, chairman, read, but dismissed without comment or insertion, in the record a letter from Alexander Woollcott, radio raconteur, suggesting that the Mellon art works be distributed over the country.

Woollcott expressed regret the pictures will be "herded together in a single building in a single city—and that city not even central."

"Every great picture was painted by the artist with the idea that it should hang alone," he said. "Both the artist and the community are best served when we keep faith with that idea.

"National Possession."

"The Mellon collection would become a national possession of true national benefit if the nine millions contemplated for a gallery could be used instead as an administration fund by which the pictures could be circulated throughout America, each one hanging for a year or so at some strategic point as the National Cathedral in Washington, the Pennsylvania Station in New York, one of the university buildings in Chicago, the ferry-house in San Francisco.

"There is no valid objection to this proposal beyond the fact that it's never been done. That's never a good objection. Such pictures have always been huddled in museums. That was never a good idea."

Charles Moore, chairman of the Fine Arts Commission; Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, and others who testified at the House hearing, reiterated their indorsement of the bill.

The measure is now on the calendars of both the Senate and the House.

League Formed By 7 Townships In Montgomery

Officials of seven Montgomery County incorporated townships last night formed a permanent organization—the Municipal League of Montgomery County—at a meeting in the National Guard Armory at Kensington. Edward R. Saunders, mayor of Kensington, was elected president of the new group.

The league voted to oppose any diversion of the gasoline tax funds from use in construction and maintenance of highways. It also indorsed a bill which provides that the State roads commission pay lateral-road taxes directly to townships.

Other officers of the league are: Vice President, Councilman Edgar Reed, of Rockville; secretary-treasurer, W. Mesriam, town clerk of Kensington. Townships represented in the league are Glen Echo, Takoma Park, Rockville, Gaithersburg, Garrett Park, Kensington and Somerset.

Lively Comedy Is Feature of Bill at Capitol

Excellent Cast Has Fun in Frivolous Film; Girl Revue on Stage.

"LOVE IS NEWS." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by William Lipman and Frederick Stephani, adapted to the screen by Harry Tugend and Jack Yellen, featuring Loretta Young, Tyrone Power and Don Ameche, with "Slim" Summerville, Walter Catlett, Dudley Digges, George Sanders, Stepin Fetchit, Elisha Cook, jr., Pauline Moore, Frank Conroy, Julius Tanner, Carol Tevis and Ed Deering, directed by Tay Garnett. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris.

Deserving of headlines of sorts is this "Love Is News." In making it, Hollywood seems to have used one of those high-speed mixing gadgets to whip together gags, absurdities, lovemaking and assorted whatnots and do-jiggers into creditable and ingratiating entertainment.

Tyrone Power, acclaimed as the new celluloid gift to gals, gives a handsome and pleasant performance. But the astounding feature of the show to faithful moviegoers will be the transformation of the erstwhile almost mushily gentle Don Ameche into a free-spitting city editor. You who remember Senor Ameche as a gentle Indian and a bashful young doctor, will not be able to believe your eyes. His Latin idea of a gringo editor ought to make real city editors envious—except that a real city editor that full of fireworks would have to carry a couple of bodyguards and wear a bullet-proof jacket. But laurels to Ameche, just the same, for an exciting and gingery performance.

A Feathery Light Comedy.

The story is thinner than a 10-cent balloon blown to the bursting point. But, by the same token it is lighter than a feather and soars on a constant gale of fun. The estimable Earl Carroll is a co-producer of the show and his Manhattan hand shows in its handling.

The "richest girl in the world," played nonchalantly and playfully by Loretta Young, is peeved at being outsmarted by a reporter (Tyrone Power). Being a smart, as well as a rich girl, she gives the reporter a frightful bolus of his own medicine. She tells all the other reporters that she is engaged to Tyrone, thus losing the poor guy his job and putting his paper in the position of being scooped by every other rag in town.

From then on it's game of seeing who can be the meanest meanie, until, well, you guessed it—love conquers all. Or was marrying each other just the culmination of low-down tricks?

"Slim" Is Funny.

Funniest shots are those taken in a country jail, with Slim Summerville as the village constable and justice of the peace. Anyway, he both jails and fines the young folks, in intervals of the time he devotes to experimenting with some slot machines he has confiscated. Slim has gotten older, but also more comical. The same goes for Walter Catlett, who has one of the fastest and most ribald lines granted to the movies. Yesterday's audience didn't seem to get it.

This week's newsreel shows a life guard's beauty contest in Florida, highly diverting. Also those equine beauties who will run in the Santa Anita Derby, with the midnight black Mr. Bones showing up as the handsomest thing in horseflesh. A comedy short with Tom Patricola and Buster West took a fall out of both the movies and the little theaters.

The Major's Gals.

Maj. Bowes goes feministic with his all-girl revue. With rather mingled but, on the whole, happy results.

The "only all-girl swing band in the world" (Where does Ina Ray Hutton come in?) is directed by Jean Rose, whose chassis resembles that of the aforesaid Miss Hutton.

Among the more shining starlets of the revue are Violinist Clara Wellman, chubby Torch Singer Marie Woods and Coloratura Singer Florence Winston, who should have given the audience another encore. Best of all was Jean Clark, a delightful middle-aged woman whose imitations of bird calls were only equaled by the sharp insight of her take-offs of traffic whistles in different cities. You'll think your at Fourteenth and F streets when she does her Washington bit.

Rita Frucht offered some rather commendable imitations of the greater dramatic stars, including Garbo, Bergner and Hepburn. Her impression of Hepburn will delight those folks who don't like Hepburn.

Columbia.

"THE PLAINSMAN." Cecil B. De Mille's picturization of a screen play for Paramount compiled by Jeanie MacPherson from novels by Courtney Ryley Cooper and Frank J. Wilstach with screen play by Waldemar Young, featuring Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur and James Ellison, with Charles Bickford, Helen Burgess, Porter Hall, Fred Kohler, Paul Harvey, Victor Marconi, John Miljan, Frank McGlynn, sr., Frank Albertson, Charles Judels, Purnell Pratt, Francis MacDonald and Fuzzy Knight. Directed by Mr. De Mille. Reviewed, repeat engagement, Friday afternoon by Sally Stroud.

Cecil B. de Mille forsakes his famous bathtubs for panoramic frontiers in "The Plainsman" and presents characters garbed in buckskins instead of evening clothes and biblical draperies, as was his wont.

The result is a heartening mixture of romance and adventure which has spectators sitting on the edge of their seats at least half the time.

Gary Cooper, as Wild Bill Hickok, is more than adequate, being the gunman, horseman and hardy frontiersman, which tradition has made that character.

James Ellison is "Buffalo Bill, who almost forsakes scouting for domesticity. Jean Arthur is Calamity Jane, who doggedly adores Wild Bill. But Bill only admits caring for her when they are both caught in a trap by murderously belligerent Indians.

The story contains an assortment of authentic happenings and thrilling legends which are given credulity by expert dialogue and smoothly written continuity. The actors are all excellent, though several are less forceful than Wild Bill, who is truly a "strong, silent man" of the old West.

The shorts "Sun-Kissed Stars" and "Gilding the Lily" are presented in conjunction with the feature. The former is concerned with the cavorting of movie favorites on the beach at Palm Springs. The latter is a snicker-enduring Pete Smith short. "News of the Day" contains current headline names, faces and events.

Nelson B. Bell About The Show Shops

"Green Light," on the Earle Screen, Is a Film Play of Compelling Power

Errol Flynn Does His Best Work for Screen, Ably Aided by Walter Abel.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"GREEN LIGHT." Warner Brothers' picturization of the novel by Lloyd C. Douglas, adapted to the screen by Milton Krims, featuring Errol Flynn, Anita Louise and Margaret Lindsay, with Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Walter Abel, Henry O'Neill, Spring Byington, Erin O'Brien-Moore, Henry Kolker, Pierre Watkin, Granville Bates, Russell Simpson and Myrtle Stedman. Directed by Frank Borzage. Reviewed at the Earle Theater Friday afternoon.

Falling into the same classification of thoughtfully designed and skillfully executed film plays as "Arrowsmith" and "The Story of Louis Pasteur," this subject possesses qualities of merit that are too seldom encountered on the screen.

BELL

"Green Light" is a camera drama that may be a little too philosophical and a little too profound to be an overwhelming box-office success, but, at least, it will have marked another step forward in the cinema's steady approach to an ultimate artistry that is inevitable.

This is another drama of the sacrifices, triumphs and romantic interludes that punctuate the pursuit of the medical profession. A young surgeon, in an effort to save a life, is made the victim of the ethics of the medical fraternity which will not permit him to disclose that his superior at Baytree Hospital interrupted his work half way through and himself made the blunder that resulted in the death on the operating table of the wealthy and humanitarian Mrs. Dexter.

With an associate bacteriologist, young Dr. Paige undertakes the task of evolving an antitoxin for the spotted fever plague spread by a vicious tick in the western mountain country. He inoculates himself in an endeavor to determine whether or not he is on the right track to a definitely effective serum to prevent the fatal fever.

Cleric Expounds Beliefs.

Interwoven with this central theme are numerous threads of narrative and profound discussion in which an important part is played by Dean Harcourt, a high church cleric, turned philosopher through the fight he has waged against a physical deformity. A great deal of this deeply religious and profoundly analytical text of the play is a pretty stiff order for the casual amusement seeker, although yesterday afternoon's capacity audience applauded the picture vigorously upon its conclusion.

There are romantic episodes sprinkled through the action of the play and occasionally a flash of humor obtrudes itself, but in the main "Green Light" is for the serious and the thoughtful theatergoers. It is acted, directed and photographed with impeccable taste and skill. It deals intelligently and dramatically with a theme of importance and violates none of the demands of a strict and relentless logic. It is a sound, substantial and important picture.

In the principal role of Dr. Newell Paige, Errol Flynn has a part a little different from the swashbuckling things he did in "Captain Blood" and "The Charge of the Light Brigade." His performance is easily comparable to the similar portrayal contributed to "Arrowsmith" by Ronald Colman. Mr. Flynn plays with restraint, fine intelligence and convincing naturalness. No less may be said of the interpretation which Walter Abel brings to the role of John Stafford, the young bacteriologist with whom Paige casts his lot in the West. This, to me, is the finest thing Mr. Abel ever has done for the films—matching in every essential respect the splendid work he is doing opposite Katharine Cornell in "The Wingless Victory" on the stage.

Strong Supporting Cast.

Sir Cedric Hardwicke is another member of the cast who contributes an especially fine performance to an ensemble of unusual capability and merit. His Dean Harcourt is a flawless creation, dignified, compassionate and compelling. Others in the cast who are important to the development of the rather involved plot are Anita Louise, Margaret Lindsay, Spring Byington, Henry Kolker, Pierre Watkin and Henry O'Neill.

It is a diversified stage bill that is being shown at the Earle this week. Introduced by the radiant Miss Audrey Sieber, the first act on the program is termed a "Variety Gambol" and is participated in by seven Russians—four men and three buxom young women—who risk their necks in a wide variety of gymnastic gambles. The next spot on the bill is occupied by Robert Williams and "Red Dust," an amazing canine relaxationist that permits itself to be twisted into all manner of shapes and forms.

Roscoe Ates, that stuttering comic from the flickers, appears next, assisted by Marguerite Fety, a striking brunette. Mr. Ates is a funny fellow, who has as much fun ad-libbing as he does sticking to his act. He was a hit yesterday in a lot of inconsequential fol-de-rol that wound up with a violin solo that he played with accustomed finesse, although I doubt if he knows any other number than "The World Is Waiting for the Sunrise."

An Exceptional "Short."

The bill is closed by the "Song Writers on Parade," a familiar act in which Charlie Tobias, as master of ceremonies, and Murray Mencher, Al Sherman, Gerald Marks and Walter Samuels, at four grand pianos, run over a mess of the song hits they have written in recent years. This business always clicks.

An exceptional short-reel, Technicolor subject, "Under Southern Stars," constitutes the chief screen subsidiary. It deals with events leading up to, and immediately following, the Battle of Chancellorsville in the War Between the States and has as its central characters, Gen. Robert E. Lee and Gen. Stonewall Jackson. It was at Chancellorsville that Jackson was mortally wounded. A fine item, this.

The Paramount News, with close-ups of the testimonial dinner to James A. Farley, completes a program that is commended to those who do not demand frivolity as a vital element of their screen fare.

In Best Role on Earle Screen

Metropolitan

"PENROD AND SAM." First National picturization of the story by Booth Tarkington, with screen play by Lillie Hayward and Hugh Cummings, featuring Billy Mauch, Frank Craven, Spring Byington and Craig Reynolds, supported by Harry Watson, Jackie Morrow, Philip Hurlic, Charles Halton, Bernice Pilot, Kenneth Harlan, Allan Davis, Si Wills, Billy Lechner, Billy Wolfstone, Jerry Madden, Robert Homans, Mildred Gover, George Billings, Jerry Tucker, Jack Cunningham, Don Hulbert and John Pirrone. Directed by William McGann. Reviewed Friday matinee by W. A. Whitney.

Changing to the 1937 motif the nomenclature of Penrod Schofield's "gang," and thereby bringing up to the minute a long-loved story of a real boy, "Penrod and Sam," brings to the screen again the lad Booth Tarkington made famous.

Despite the modernization, the picture still reveals a boy's boy just as was manifest when the character was first conceived. Here Penrod—and it is all Penrod, despite the inclusion of Sam in the title—is "chief" of a group of G-Man emulators, which finally brings to justice a trio of bank robbers.

Is an Unadorned Play.

Told in words of one syllable—and filmed just as frankly and straightforwardly — "Penrod and Sam" is not a picture about which to write. It is one of those works to be seen, if one still recalls and is yet interested in the tales that thrilled him in his youth. No pretense, no magnificence, no spectacular scenes of munificence; rather here is a simple story told with that simplicity that naturally associates itself with the stories of Booth Tarkington and Penrod.

For Penrod there probably is not upon the Warner-First National lot a lad more fitted than Billy Mauch, and he is, indeed, everything that one could desire. He is Penrod, sincere, forthright, and possessing all those attributes naturally associating themselves with active healthy boyhood.

Frank Craven and Spring Byington are his parents, with Charles Halton as the banker whose son, played by Jackie Morrow in a manner somewhat reminiscent of Jackie Searle (but not so surly), is continually getting into schoolboy brawls with Penrod. The Sam of the title is Harry Watson, but he is scarcely more important than ten or so others of the "gang."

Support and Supplementaries.

As the mobster, Craig Reynolds is sufficient, supported by a trio of players as his aides. Not the least of the performers are Philip Hurlic, a colored boy who really knows his stuff; Bernice Pilot, as his mammy, and "Duke," Penrod's very knowing pooch.

Here is grand juvenile entertainment that even adults with memories can thoroughly enjoy. William McGann has directed with care and a manifest knowledge of boys and boys' traits and activities.

The supplementary program is decidedly varied. A vaudeville reel, featuring a group of sub-adolescent singers and dancers; a cartoon, "Whoops, I'm a Cowboy," with Betty Boop and Wiffle Piffle; "Whale! Ho!" an interesting commentary on whaling, and the day's news complement a program of satisfying proportions.

Palace

"LLOYDS OF LONDON." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by Curtis Kenyon, adapted by Ernest Pascal and Walter Ferris, featuring Freddie Bartholomew, Tyrone Power, Madeleine Carroll, Virginia Fields, Douglas Scott, C. Aubrey Smith, Sir Guy Standing and George Sanders. Directed by Henry King. Reviewed second week by Dorothea Lewis.

Of course "Lloyds of London" is remaining on F street for a second week. This is probably, and properly, just the beginning, for it is one of the best pictures of this or any other recent year.

There is a freshness, vitality and movement about this epic of England, insurance, loyalties and love that is too often lacking in costume and period pieces. Lace cuffs, knee britches and flounced petticoats occasion no stiffness or posturing among the members of the excellent cast assembled, and so Lloyds becomes real and intensely interesting.

Two little boys, Jonathan Blake and Horatio Nelson, are friends. Years later these two, men now, one a power at Lloyds, the other admiral of the British Imperial navy, remember that friendship and save England.

Within this framework, there is adventure, excitement and romance against the colorful and unusual background of Lloyd's coffee house, where waiters auction off ships and a tolling bell tells the good or bad fortune of ship-insuring syndicates. That bell by the way is used to excellent dramatic effect.

Heading the cast in a rather stirring debut as a major actor is young Tyrone Power, handsome, graceful and, most important, a true son of a distinguished acting family. Madeleine Carroll and Virginia Field add their blonde beauty and charm. Sir Guy Standing and C. Aubrey Smith are delightful, and Freddie Bartholomew and Douglas Scott tremendously appealing as the boys Blake and Nelson.

Just to make it a banner program, Walt Disney contributes his best cartoon of many months, the familiar story of the country mouse who comes to the city, told in a brand new and hilarious fashion. Hick Mousey with the hiccups is a very charming little guy indeed, gifted with wonderful facial expression.

Contract Bridge

Two Birds in the Bush.

There is at least one adage to which Bridge players should pay absolutely no attention, and that is "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush." Nothing could be further from the truth at the Contract table, but because inexperienced players are subconsciously affected by this sophistry they lose countless tricks and games. In today's hand the apparent surrender of a trick paid handsome dividends.

South, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
2 N T	Pass	3 N T	Pass
Pass	Pass

It should be noted that both partners bid their four-card suits before they mentioned their five-card suits, and in this way they managed to express their respective holdings without risking a high contract. The partnership reached three notrump, it is true, but this was a voluntary action—they were not forced to it by the sheer momentum of showing all their suits.

West made the correct opening of the diamond King, and declarer let him hold the trick. West felt sure that declarer had something in spades and did not wish to lead through East; therefore, faced with the necessity for a shift, boldly laid down the heart Queen. Dummy covered and East put up the Ace.

At this point South abandoned the "bird in hand," viz: the heart Jack, for the future development of tricks. He saw that dummy had only one sure entry—the spade Ace—and to keep the heart Jack in his hand would prevent the establishment and cashing of dummy's heart tricks, so he dropped the heart Jack on East's Ace. The diamond seven was returned, and declarer, to prevent East from possibly holding the lead, covered with the eight. West won with the nine, and now, not being certain that declarer had another heart, shifted to a low spade. Dummy played low, and East shrewdly refused to put up the Queen. Declarer won with the ten, and led the heart eight. West, seeing that it was hopeless to hold off, won with the ten, and foolishly continued with a heart. (A spade would have spiked South's guns.)

On the fourth round of hearts East discarded a diamond, and on the fifth round a club. Declarer, meanwhile, had reduced to the blank King of spades, the Ace of diamonds and the Ace-King and a low club. A club to the Ace and the cashing of the diamond Ace, dummy discarding a spade, squeezed East. He could not let go a club without establishing declarer's low card in the suit, and a spade would permit the cashing of dummy's Ace and Jack.

The real crux of the hand, however, had been the declarer's correct play to establish the heart suit. The squeeze that resulted was no more than a well deserved outcome.

Chiang Urges Chinese Unity In Radio Plea

Leader Breaks Precedent in Plea for Program; Wife Speaks.

By the Associated Press.

Nanking, China, Feb. 19.—Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek, backed by a new government vote of confidence, and his American-educated wife broke Chinese precedent tonight with a joint radio appeal to the nation in behalf of the "New Life" program for regeneration of China.

Mme. Chiang told the nation the "New Life" movement, launched by the Chinese three years ago to transform the ethics and modes of living of China's millions, is gathering currents of patriotism from all over China into a flood of national unity.

Corruption, banditry and lawlessness still exist in China and will continue until people have enough to eat," she said.

"There have been some failures because some leaders have not realized the truth of the Biblican saying 'You cannot serve God and mammon,'" declared Mme. Chiang, who was reared as a Christian.

Chiang himself spoke 45 minutes, reviewing the aims and accomplishments of the movement that hopes to stamp out narcotics addiction, gambling, drunkenness and other vices.

Complete and peaceful settlement of the Sianfu coup, with Chiang and the Nanking government restored to full authority, apparently was effected meantime as conferences between Nanking officials and the "Tiger General" Yang Hu-Chen ended.

At Nanking, chieftains of the government Kuomintang gave Chiang Kai-Shek a unanimous vote of confidence and rejected his offer to resign all his positions as "head of China's ship of state."

70 Drug Addicts Warned.

Shanghai, Feb. 19 (AP).—"Be cured or die" sentences were clapped on 70 convicted habitual users of narcotics today and 2,000 subjects were jammed into jails and temples of Nantung, 75 miles northwest of Shanghai. The government anti-narcotic drive cracked down on Nantung following up similar raids in Peiping and Tientsin.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Washington Composers' Club presents a program of original works at the Arts Club of Washington, assisted by National String Quartet (Henri Sokolov, Leo Krakov, Samuel Feldman and Alden Finckel), Justin Lawrie, La Vergne Fairchild, Lily Garrett, David Manley, Arthur Tabbutt, Norma Simonson, Katherine Warren, Ione Hoffmann, Frederick Deniston, Dolph Atherton and Philip Charles.

When the members of the Washington Composers' Club invite their friends to an occasional exhibit such as this, the rewards of attendance are always pleasant. One has the feeling of being a privileged auditor in the laboratory of talent, for the concert is virtually a test of the viability of the compositions which have been criticized and assayed at private sessions. And one is certain to hear interesting music as varied in style as the individual temperaments constituting this amicable group.

Through the services of the National String Quartet, one enjoyed a considerable amount of ensemble music of excellent quality: a quartet by Alden Finckel, the first movement of a quartet in D minor by Siegfried Scharbau, a quartet by Mary Howe, two emotionally contrasted pieces, "Tears" and "Smiles," by LaSalle Spier; Edward Potter's effective setting of Browning's "Prospice" for voice, piano and strings, and Dorothy Radde Emery's setting of Psalm XIII for vocal sextet, piano and strings.

Added to these were R. Deane Shure's "Butterfly Orchid," an interesting study in blending overtones on the piano by use of the damper pedal; his "Silent Hills" setting of a poem by Dr. C. D. Blachley for mixed quartet, and four piano pieces by Henry Gregor: "Marche Guignol," "Ranz des Vaches," a rondo in C major, and "A Study in Surrealism."

One's impressions of the program may be condensed into the affirmation that the Washington Composers' Club is an invaluable asset in the community. The association of these men and women in creative work is not only a stimulation to themselves but also a center of energy from which radiates an aesthetic influence of unpredictable extent. Such a focus of talent cannot but have its kindling effect upon the social environment.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, Feb. 19.

FEATURE STORY: Jimmy, the greeter at Jack and Charlie's, is always on the alert for whatever rare flowers can be purchased in New York. When he learns of these floral rarities Jimmy immediately contacts a number of men-about-town. These gentlemen never fail to order the flowers bought and delivered to their companion of the evening . . . Jimmy was told of a New York florist who that day had secured a rarity of rarities—five pure white orchids on a single stem. He phoned Buddy Adler, who was elated at the news and who ordered special preparations made. He'd bring the young lady to "21" for dinner and the orchid corsage was to be presented to her just before their departure . . . At the propitious moment the presentation was made. The young lady oohed and aahed, pinned the corsage to her dress and departed for the theater with Mr. Adler in a taxi. Within 10 minutes—because of the gasoline odor coupled with the strange perfume the lady was using—the orchids shriveled.

BUSINESS DEPT.: Will Morrissey went to Cleveland in preparation for the new Great Lakes Exposition there. The officials showed him the Fair Grounds Building erected a few years ago to house the exhibits of that day . . . "This is such a big, modern building," the officials beamed, "we're sure it can be of service for the Great Lakes show" . . . "Oh, yes—of course," Morrissey yawned. "We plan to make use of your Fair Grounds Building. That'll be our ticket booth!"

POLITICS: Mrs. Jim Farley is wintering at the Roney-Plaza at Miami Beach. Sunday afternoon Jerry Kahler, the professional card trickster, was brought to Mrs. Farley's cabana and illustrated his card talents . . . He stacked a complete bridge deck and called off every card successfully. "That's amazing," said Mrs. Farley. "Amazing. What an uncanny sense of prediction. Is it a difficult trick?" . . . "Not as difficult," Kahler assured, "as calling the turn on Maine and Vermont."

DOG AND PET DEPT.: On Monday I reported that the Westminster Kennel Show barred the entry of a bull terrier belonging to Carman Barnes because Miss Barnes had named her dog "Mrs. Simpson" . . . Now comes to light another, and probably the most important reason for that ban . . . The officials had no serious objections to the author of "School Girl" naming her female terrier "Mrs. Simpson." The real objection was to the terrier's condition.

MOVIES: A Duluth newspaper sent its reporter to Hollywood for a series of interviews. The reporter made an appointment to interview the Marx Brothers and appeared at the hour scheduled . . . He addressed himself to Groucho—who replied by shaking his head strangely. From Chico, too, he could get no response. In desperation he turned to Harpo, who—by signs—indicated that he and his brothers were deaf mutes . . . The reporter turned on his heels, departed and wrote his office: "Tried but couldn't interview the Marx Brothers!"

THEATER DEPT.: Irene Winston, who appeared in "Boy Meets Girl," was offered two theatrical jobs recently. The first was as understudy in "You Can't Take It With You." The second was in Arthur Kober's "Having Wonderful Time." Miss Winston accepted the second because Producer Marc Connelly had told her he wished to employ her in the play for decorative purposes . . . If you've seen "Having Wonderful Time" Miss Winston is the one who's onstage at the curtain rise. The "decorative purpose" she serves is to reveal curlers in her hair, a pink, sunburned back—all while she's engaged in pedicure work for herself.

RADIO DEPT.: Clark Andrews is director of the C. B. S. program known as "Aunt Jeanie's Real Life Stories" . . . Garson Kanin, who appears on that program, read a news report in the papers and thought it suitable for dramatization on that program. He brought the clipping to Andrews and proffered his suggestion . . . "We can't use that, said the director of "Aunt Jennies Real Life Stories" . . . "Why not?" Kanin asked . . . "Because," Andrews explained, "because it's true."

MUSIC DEPT.: Mr. Abe Lyman, who barely missed his magna cum laude at Harvard, was challenged by a long-haired music lover . . . "Mr. Lyman," the challenger sneered, "I don't believe you can read music" . . . "Not only can I read it," was Abe's deft retort, "but I can spell it, too!"

WEATHER DEPT.: A pale Broadwayite arrived in Miami Beach yesterday morning. He was welcomed at the depot by news photographers as well as the publicity agent for Miami. The publicist stared at the paleface and then spoke up. "Tell me," he asked, "how did you enjoy your trip to California?"

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

Hollywood, Feb. 19.—Idol chatter: Does Dolores Del Rio have her beautiful feet because she runs around the house barefoot, or vice versa? The urge is almost uncontrollable to spell Myrna Loy with a "J" since her happy marriage. Sound alikes: Jean Arthur and Connie Boswell. Roscoe Karn's elegant crack: "I knew a star who has had her face lifted so often, she can't bend her knees!"

DOLORES DEL RIO.

Secret out of school: Ann Sothern holds her breath when she kisses Gene Raymond, she dislikes him so. If anyone coughs or sneezes on a Grace Moore set, out he goes (but if Grace coughs, to bed she goes). Add onomatopoetic names: Blondell. If you so much as snap on the living room lights, John Barrymore turns profile. When a set is drafty, Carole Lombard demands that a hot studio light be directed her way. Will the expected Jack Oakie heir's first greeting be: "Is that my father?"

Mrs. Temple refused a writer permission to quote Shirley because the same scribbler had done a neat piece on Jane Withers. Impressionistic, drawing of Nelson Eddy: Choir Boy singing at a beer bust to raise money for Foreign Missions. If we could cure Hollywood hams with hickory, there might be less bad taste. Not much more than a year ago, Bob Burns was fired by a local radio program because he was getting no laughs.

Ambling along Wilshire boulevard the other morning, I saw Clark Gable guide his long grey roadster into one of those ornate filling stations that look like world fairs. There were fewer than a dozen people in sight at the moment. The station attendant was busy, so Clark bent to the task of putting air in his tires.

Within three minutes (I will swear to this) there must have been 200 fans clustered around the star in a close-packed mass. While I watched and laughed at him from the safety of my own car, Gable sweated and signed autographs. "Some day," he barked at me, when at last he broke loose, "I'm going to see you in a den of lions—and it's going to be the funniest sight of my life!"

Dress extras (male) customarily receive $10 a day, but those fortunate enough to speak lines are paid $25. With this in mind, here is an anecdote that is amusing: Four such extras were called to a Fred MacMurray set. The scene was to show them taking Fred home from a party in a dilapidated phaeton. Before work commenced, the director turned to the extras and ordered: "You boys are supposed to be blotto, so yell and sing. All but you (he pointed to one extra). You are OUT!" At which the player, with visions of loss of his added fee for speaking a line, groaned, "Yeah—out fifteen smackers."

When director Harry Lachman stepped from the studio bootblack stand, the boy, anticipating a tip, gave him a good brushing over, then reached to remove a tiny red ribbon from the customer's button hole. A brother boot-black stopped him. "Don't take 'at string," he warned. "hit may been put there by Mist' Lachman's wife to remind him of something." The "colored string reminder" is the small, red ribbon of the Legion of Honor.

Mother and Daughter Die in Chicago Blaze

Chicago, Feb. 19 (AP).—A mother and child perished today in a fire which swept through a four-story South Side apartment building. More than 30 tenants, many carrying babies, fled to safety. Firemen estimated 20 others were carried down ladders. The victims, trapped in a fourth floor apartment, were identified by neighbors as Mrs. Wayne Short, 21, and her daughter, Mary, 2.

SPORTS The Washington Post SPORTS

* X WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 20, 1937 19

This Morning . . .

Without Shirley Povich

(While Shirley Povich is on vacation, this column will be written by other members of the sports department.)

By Loren Pope.

Once upon a time we asked, "Why do people read the sports pages anyway?" in a tone that was not merely inquisitive. For it had been assumed, on the occasion to which we refer, that they are the most read of any news pages.

POPE.

When the argument got around to personalities, the subject was dropped and hasn't been mentioned more than once a day since. But it's still a good question. Why, even the sports writers read 'em only because they want to:

1. See what wonders they have wrought.
2. See what wonders their confreres or rivals have wrecked.
3. Raise hell about what the copyreader has done to their wonders.

Motives of the sports page actors can be accounted for and dismissed with the same tabulation. Victims of misspent youths turn to the sports pages by force of habit, and others have an economic interest in the won-and-lost columns.

But the great breakfast-table regiment, whose participation is only vicarious, must have other reasons.

There aren't any statistics handy, but it's probably safe to estimate that the percentage of those who read the sports pages first and most thoroughly of any part of the paper would win a Hitler election.

The curiosity, therefore, that pokes its nose into our pages doesn't belong exclusively to any one class, and there must be a reason, whether it makes any difference or not.

That learned scholar, Robert Benchley, allows as how 91 per cent of his Harvard class can't juggle. Assuming this to be typical, you've never seen 91 per cent of the population of this or any other town cramming the theaters to watch one who can. Nor do they scream for headlines on the subject. So, that will let us eliminate the admiration motive. (Anyway, meeting a few of the boys you read about would cure that.)

A research committee sponsored by umteen of the country's leading sports departments has this week reported, after much delving, that it couldn't put its finger on any veil of mystery, any aura of glamour surrounding the sports page heroes. It did find a trace of glamour but when that trace was tested, it was heard to give off a distinctly tinny twang.

The real McCoy, and a yard wide, was reported found on page one. All of this was none of the committee's business, but the career of a politician or other public figure, 'twas concluded, has a lot of the old stuff—a technical term meaning that which stirs reader interest—which makes one wonder by what slick and secret putsches he may have accomplished his climb to the platform where he now sounds off. Definitely, the learned body pontificated, the page-one dramatis personae has a lot of the old stuff.

Our heroes, on the other hand, they said, are as drab in this respect as a harem eunuch. Everyone is well aware the sports page great makes the type flow down the column just because someone happened to discover he could take bigger steps faster. And people will pay to see that.

So, that left us, the committee decided, with only the dime-novel complex as the surging force in sports page interest.

The stories slowly unfolded in the page-one ring, said the scholars with somewhat of a sneer, are for the most part vastly superior in plot, drama, suspense, and general subject matter, to those that daily blossom and die like flies in ours. The drama editor in Chicago who recently quit that field to become a sports editor for want of some real drama and life, they said, was but a poor benighted soul, and was, after all, a drama critic.

The stories on our pages are just the opposite in every respect from their betters on page one. And this, was the conclusion, is the reason they are read to the last agate-type note on the box score, and why only the headlines on page one are skipped over once lightly.

The action is quick, sure, and decisive. When you've finished reading, you know exactly what has happened, and within a few days or a few months the whole life cycle of the event will have been told, from A to Z.

What little speculation you get is soon proven or disproven and you don't have to wallow in a sea of guess work for a year or three years until the blow the Administration struck today is finally proven the winning or a foul one.

And in the course of a year, while a few of the page-one tales are still slowly unraveling, the sports addict has digested so many complete life cycles that the problem of this week's contests, he is comfortable in knowing, won't tax him to think. It will soon be banged out in clear a-b-c fashion, and he can put down his paper without a mental hangover. And be able to say: "Boy, that WAS some game!"

Steele Defeats Risko on Points, Keeps Title

Titlist Gives Ring Lesson To Rival

Champion Has Foe on Verge of Knockout; Bell Saves Him.

By the United Press.

New York, Feb. 19.—Brown-haired Freddie Steele, of Tacoma, Wash., tonight retained his middleweight title by scoring a smashing 15-round decision victory over Eddie (Babe) Risko, of Syracuse, the former champion, in Madison Square Garden.

The young veteran from the Pacific Northwest won the unanimous decision of Referee Artie Donovan and two judges as he scored his third straight victory over the former bellhop and gob from whom he won the title last July.

The crowd, only 11,665 and far smaller than those which saw these men clash twice before in Seattle, was disappointed at the champion's first New York appearance.

Gives a Boxing Lesson.

For brown-haired Freddie, who started his professional ring career at the age of 15, did nothing more than give the stocky challenger a fine boxing lesson.

Only one—in the sixth round—did the champion's vaunted right, which had cut down 21 of his previous opponents, flash home. It staggered the Babe momentarily, but it came almost at the bell and Steele couldn't follow up.

Steele, according to the United Press score sheet, won nine rounds, Risko five, and one was even. Risko, despite the fact that he was sent spinning into the middle strand of rope in the sixth round, 30 seconds before the bell, won that session because Steele had clipped him earlier with a low right.

As a fight it wasn't much. Steele, hailed as the best middleweight since Stanley Ketchel, the Michigan Assassin, was unable to connect more than once with his slashing right because Risko, when in trouble, kept dancing back out of danger.

For the 26-year-old challenger, who dropped a ten-round non-title fight to Steele in November, 1935, and then lost the title to him less than a year later, it was a very unprofitabe evening. He had guaranteed Steele $25,000 for the shot at the title—the same as he demanded when he lost the 160-pound crown to Freddie.

But the crowd contributed a gross gate of only $17,802.23 tonight, so Risko will have to draw from his personal bank account to make up the difference.

It was Steele's darting left, delivered from all anges that won the fight for him. For Risko, one of the most unorthodox of middleweights, was unable to batter it down enough times to do any damage.

Round One.

Steele was first to score, registering two smart lefts to body. Risko replied with lefts and right to head. Risko was fighting cautiously and was allowing Steele to do the leading. Risko had much the better of a furious exchange in a neutral corner. Risko's round.

Round Two.

Risko swarmed all over Steele, scoring lefts and rights to body and drawing a mighty cheer. Steele was continually short with lefts to the face. Steele got over a nice left to the body. Steele slammed over a left to the face. Risko replied with two sharp lefts to head and body. Fighting in close. They traded light body blows at the bell. Steele's round.

Round Three.

Escobar—Salica Bout Draws Brisk Wagering

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Feb. 19 (U.P.).—Brisk wagering was reported today on Sunday's world bantamweight title fight between Sixto Escobar, of Puerto Rico, and Lou Salica, of New York.

A wealthy Puerto Rican planter bet $1,500 to $1,000 that Escobar would retain his title, while Hymie Caplin, of New York, was trying to get $1,000 down on Salica at the 3-2 odds being quoted.

Tense Scramble as Catholic Schools Fought to Finish

Action such as this was typical as St. John's battled Gonzaga to a 30-29 victory last night in Catholic U.'s gym before 2,500 fans. Note Jimmy Giebel, of St. John's (upper right), handcuffing Jimmy Boyle, of Gonzaga. In foreground, Jim Walsh, of Gonzaga, and Johnny Swagart, of St. John's, are about to pounce on a loose ball. Others in pictures: Bud O'Brien, of Gonzaga, left, and Jack Reges, of St. John's.

Fight Averted As Tilt Ends In Bedlam

Five Seconds Remain When Foul Occurs; Time Disputed.

By John R. Vosburgh.

In a tense, torrid finish which found St. John's fans heckling Coach Orrel Mitchell of Gonzaga as he remonstrated with the timekeeper, the Johnnies dealt a 30-29 defeat to the Mitchellmen last night before 2,500 screaming spectators in the Catholic U. gym. The game left the schools deadlocked for first place in the Catholic Prep School League and virtually assured a playoff in the near future.

St. John's had staved off a terrific homestretch drive by Gonzaga by the margin of a foul shot and five seconds remained to play when Mitchell attempted to insert a substitute. The timekeeper failed to blow his whistle, however, and the game ended in a bedlam of confusion with Mitchell red-facedly pounding the press table and claiming the game was not over.

While friends warded off sallies at the coach by St. John's fans, the officials, Hobie O'Meara and Bruce Kessler, took Mitchell and Coach Irving Holbrook of St. John's into an anteroom where a brief hearing was held and Mitchell was somewhat pacified.

Last-Minute Rally.

Gonzaga's rally, which would have made Gen. Custer's last stand look like a Maypole dance, had cut down a 29-16 lead to a 29-29 tie in less than five minutes of play. The count was 29-29 with a minute to go when Jimmy Boyle, Gonzaga star, fouled Johnny Swagart and Swagart made good the free shot which proved to be the winning margin.

Led by its stellar center, Jack (Ace) Reges, who rolled up 16 points, St. John's defending champions dominated the game by a wide margin until the last five minutes of play. Leading 10-4 at the end of the first period, 17-9 at the half and 26-14 going into the final period, the Johnnies suddenly were bewildered to find Gonzaga break out in an epidemic of baskets, after stretching their lead to 29-16.

Bud O'Brien and Tom Hanley dropped in two-pointers for Gonzaga at this juncture, but by this time only two minutes and 45 seconds remained to play. In the next 30 seconds, Hanley scored three points and Collins a basket and it was 29-27. Hanley was fouled by Francis Battiste and made good both free shots to tie the count with a minute to play.

Alumni Win, Too.

It was then, however, that Boyle fouled Swagart and the St. John's boy calmly sank his charity try. Only the verbal fireworks remained. Mitchell, Coach Irving Holbrook and St. John's officials all participated in the brief hearing held by the referees after the game. The coaches parted with a hnnd-shake.

In their first game, Gonzaga also pulled an "impossible" last-minute rally and finally won the game, 24-21, in an extra period. The defeat was Gonzaga's second in 15 games this season. In the preliminary, the St. John's Alumni defeated the Gonzaga grads, 28-27, in another thriller.

District Girl Is Beaten by Patty Berg

Helen Dettweiler Bows, 4 and 3, in Finals of Florida Golf.

By the Associated Press.

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 19.—Patty Berg, Minneapolis redhead, continued her triumphal swing through the winter golf tournaments today by annexing the annual event at the Palm Beach Country Club with a 4 and 3 victory over Helen Dettweiler, of Washington.

Miss Dettweiler, three years older than the 19-year-old Minneapolis miss, frequently outdrove her opponent but Patty's steadiness was reflected in her medal card of 67, only one over par, for the 15 holes.

After bogey fives halved the first hole the redhead took the lead on the second, where Helen's chip was too short, and never gave it up. Miss Dettweiler dropped the third with three putts and the short fourth with a poor tee shot which struck a boy in the gallery to the left of the green.

Ends On 15th Hole.

They split the fifth with par fives and Helen came back a hole on the sixth with a chip shot that left her six inches from the cup. They halved the seventh with pars and the eighth, a 198-yard par four, with birdies. Helen's niblick failed her on the ninth and cost her a six. That put Patty three up at the turn, with a par 38 medal score to her opponent's 41.

They halved the tenth with fives and Patty increased her margin with a birdie on the eleventh when Miss Dettweiler played into the water and dubbed another shot for an eight.

Patty three-putted on the thirteenth and lost the hole but got it back on the fourteenth with a birdie four. Helen was on the green in two but took too many putts.

The match ended when they halved the fifteenth. Both put their second shots out of bounds and finished with sixes.

Carnegie Tech Downs Hoya Cagers, 32 to 25

Georgetown's waning eastern conference championship hopes completely vanished last night under the magic spell of Carnegie Tech's clever guarding and unerring goal-tossing which sent the Hoyas down to defeat 32-25, at Tech High School. Some 1,500 fans saw the Plaid roll up a 22-11 lead on its host in the first half and coast through the second to an easy victory.

Georgetown sputtered and crackled like a damp firecracker, threatening to the very end, but its attack failed to click. The Hilltoppers' shots rebounded from the hoop as if expelled by some invisible spring, and others rolled over but failed to drop. They just couldn't make their shots count.

Carnegie assumed a 5-to-0 lead almost immediately after the initial tap-off and was never headed, although Georgetown clung doggedly to its foe throughout the earlier stages of the period. But when the Hoyas pressed too closely, coming within an ace of tying it up at 11-all, Si Felser, Charley Miksevices and "Hoot" Gibson engineered a drive that swept Tech away out in front and eventually into a 22-to-11 advantage at halftime.

Hoyas Blow Up.

Carnegie quickly prodded its advantage to 27 to 13 as the final period got under way before Murphy, Massin and Kurtyka swung into action, and with two field goals and as many fouls placed Georgetown back in the running. Slaminko sank a foul for Tech which Carroll Shore offset with his only goal of the evening, making it 28 to 21 with 6½ minutes to go.

In a fairly good position to catch their rivals, the Hoyas went haywire, rushing their plays, passing blindly and failing to follow its shots effectively. The result was two more buckets for the visitors that clinched matters.

The game was in the nature of a warm-up for Georgetown, which plays Maryland tonight at College Park in the upper half of a twin bill, but Carnegie made it a little too warm for the boys.

In a preliminary game Georgetown's freshmen defeated Delaware & Hudson, 42 to 35.

G. W. Defeats West Va., 39-33

Morgantown, W. Va., Feb. 19 (AP).—George Washington University's basketball team defeated the Mountaineers of West Virginia, 39-33, tonight in a spectacular game, the Colonials' fifteenth victory in 16 games.

The Mountaineers battled the visitors on fairly even terms for 37 of the 40 minutes, George Washington leading by one point—33-32—with less than four minutes to play.

Then Capt. Bob Keisel flipped in two field goals and Schonfield, guard, tossed in another to put the game on ice for the Colonials.

Texas Assembly Seeks to Rescind Bible's Contract

Austin, Tex., Feb. 19 (AP).—Senator L. J. Sulak introduced a resolution in the Legislature today requesting University of Texas regents to rescind a contract with Dana X. Bible, employed recently as head football coach for ten years at a reported salary of $15,000 annually.

Referred to committee without argument, the resolution further requested the regents to employ a football coach and athletic director at a salary "commensurate" with other salaries paid at the university.

It said Bible's reported salary was "nearly twice that paid the president of the university."

2 Terp Teams In Season's Best Show

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Honed to their finest fighting edge of the season and stimulated mentally by the realization that their performances will produce the city's biggest indoor sports show of the year, the Maryland and Catholic University mittenmen, and Georgetown and Maryland courtmen await the signal that will send them into action tonight at College Park in a twin-bill expected to surpass all of its predecessors in color and thrills.

A capacity attendance of 5,000 fans is expected. Tickets admitting the bearers to both attractions were completely sold out a week ago, but a few tickets for boxing only are still available. Doors of the coliseum will be closed promptly at 8 o'clock for basketball, and will not be reopened until 9:30 for the bouts.

Hoya Cagers Favored.

Georgetown's rejuvenated dribblers are a slight favorite over their hosts, but in boxing Maryland will have a distinct edge on its rival from neighboring Brookland. Odds in either instance mean virtually nothing, however, for the records show that upsets have marked the series between the three schools.

Chief interest centers around the fistic activities, for Maryland's undefeated team is conceded to be the best in its history, while Catholic University, always a potent factor in the sport, is up to par. Maryland goes into action with a half dozen consecutive victories behind it, all won by sizeable margins. Catholic has won three, lost to Army and has been tied by Duke in five meets.

It is the draw with Duke that bolstered the Cardinals' stock, for the Blue Devils are recognized as one of the outstanding contenders in the Southern Conference tournament opening next week. Maryland, incidentally, is favored to win the team championship.

A Grudge Affair.

Maryland has a double incentive for winning tonight. The intense rivalry between the schools was heightened by a series of events in their last match that almost caused a rupture in relations. The most important was Johnny Gormley's knockout by Fred Rogers, of Catholic, in the light-heavyweight bout, by a blow delivered over Referee Charley Reynold's shoulder. Other furiously debated points were "Sully" Greco's draw with Ivan Nedomatsky, of Maryland, and Fred Mix's decision over "Spike" Webb, also of Maryland.

The decisions rendered in these bouts were directly responsible for Catholic's 4½-3½ victory, a stun-

He had conducted a wholesale drygoods business in St. Paul, Minn.

Braddock to Flatten Louis Twice, Says N. Y. Ring Official

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 19.—If and when Joe Louis gets a shot at Jim Braddock's heavyweight crown the Brown Bomber will be in for the surprise of his life, his defeat by Max Schmeling notwithstanding.

New York State Athletic Commissioner D. Walker Wear is the authority for this forecast. He made it with the benefit of first-hand information after watching Louis knock out Natie Brown in four rounds at Kansas City Wednesday night.

"Jim Braddock will meet Louis not once, but twice, next summer and knock him out both times," said Commissioner Wear a few minutes after stepping off the train.

"They're going through with that fight in Chicago. Personally I never thought the Braddock-Schmeling fight would take place here as scheduled," asserted Wear. "Braddock will knock Louis out there, and then they'll be rematched a couple of months later to fight here and Braddock will knock him out again."

Wear wasn't impressed by Louis' victory over Brown. He said Louis weighed 210 pounds when he went into the ring—four more than he weighed at 11 a. m.—and expressed the belief that Louis is eating himself right out of any chance of winning the championship. To make any kind of a go of it against Braddock, a showing comparable to his performances against Primo Carnera and Max Bear, Louis will have to weigh under 200 pounds, he said.

"Joe's best weight is around 196 pounds. That's what he weighed against Carnera," said Wear. "He weighed fractionally under 200 against Baer, and those were just about his best fights.

"It's my hunch that Louis will go down with a thud after Braddock hits him half a dozen times with his right hand. Jim's in fine shape, only 4 pounds over fighting weight, and in better condition than when he won the title from Baer.

Jones Asks Assembly To Defend Goal Line

Lincoln, Nebr., Feb. 19 (AP).—Maj. Lawrence M. "Biff" Jones, new University of Nebraska head football coach and athletic director, asked the State's one-House legislature today to pass an act making it illegal for any team to cross Nebraska's goal line next fall.

Amos Thomas, of Omaha, National Guard general, introduced his legislative colleagues to the "Biffer," who said he wanted to follow custom and ask the lawmakers for something.

Yanks Sign Johnson, But Holdouts Still Firm

New York, Feb. 19 (AP).—The New York Yankees today signed Outfielder Roy Johnson, but the holdout siege in the ranks of the regulars continues.

At the end of a rather quiet week, Business Manager Ed Barrow conceded: "I thought we'd have more contracts by this time."

Counter-proposals to balking players have been in the mails since the first of the week but as yet the big five—Lou Gehrig, Joe DiMaggio, Red Ruffing, Jake Powell and Lefty Gomez—are still on the warpath.

Braddock, Louis Sign for Title Fight

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 19.—James J. Braddock and Bomber Joe Louis signed today for their heavyweight championship fight, making it official for Chicago next June unless legal blows threatened by Madison Square Garden knock it out before that time.

They signed contracts to fight 15 rounds in Comiskey Park, home of the White Sox, on the night of June 22 for Braddock's title and 67½ per cent of the receipts, estimated at $1,000,000.

Under terms of the contract, Braddock will receive 50 per cent of the receipts, or a guarantee of $500,000; 50 per cent of the motion picture rights and 50 per cent of the radio broadcasting charges. Louis, his Negro challenger, will get 17½ per cent of the receipts, but his share of the motion picture and broadcasting rights remain to be worked out.

Foley Is Promoter.

After signing it was announced by Joseph Triner, chairman of the Illinois Athletic Commission, that Joe Foley, a former sports editor, will be the promoter of the contest, Chicago's first heavyweight championship affair since the glamorous Dempsey-Tunney battle at Soldier Field ten years ago.

Chairman Triner said the Illinois Sporting Club, which was to have promoted the bout with Mike Jacobs, of New York, had withdrawn from active participation because the club's charter does not legally permit it to act as promoter of an athletic event. The club, however, of which Sheldon Clark, millionaire oil company executive, is president, promised its full support to make the contest a success. However, it will have no financial responsibility in the event.

Foley, now the sole promoter, originally had been named matchmaker, he promoted the Louis-Levinsky fight in the Sox Park two years ago. Jacobs, who holds a contract to Louis' services until 1940, probably will be associated with Foley in the bout's promotion, but in the role of a "silent partner."

When Braddock and his manager, Joe Gould, scratched their right hands over the contract, they had affixed their signatures to a pair of

Candlelight Defeated by 5 Lengths

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 19.—Tattered, a stretch-running son of Pennant-Untidy, today won the Clearwater purse of 1 mile in a manner to indicate that he will prove a worthy Flamingo Stakes candidate for Mrs. Payne Whitney. The bay colt, recently second to Sceneshifter in his local debut, literally ran away from a half dozen other 3-year-olds in the home lane and won under triple wraps by five lengths in 1:37 2-5. He carried 113 pounds and gave Jockey Wayne Wright his second straight victory.

C. L. Croan's Candlelight was second, a half length before J. C. Clark's Anglo Saxon. Harvesting, Abaddon, Phillips Pete and Coup de Grace brought up the rear. Tattered was a heavy choice, paying $3.70 for $2.

Other Flamingo nominees in the field were Coup de Grace and Abaddon, both unlikely starters in the February 27 fixture.

Tattered, while not asked to compete against the top flight 3-year-olds today, did all asked of him in scintillating fashion and appears on the improving side. The colt, as a juvenile, won one race in nine outings and collected a meager $675 in purse money. But his recent second to the impressive Sceneshifter at 6½ furlongs, when the Greentree colorbearer came from far out of it, was a highly-promising showing and his follow-up effort today earned for the long striding colt a host of admirers.

Anglo Saxon showed the way to Harvesting and Candlelight in the first six furlongs. Wright, moving up rapidly with Tattered around the bend leaving the far side, swung his mount into command after straightening out for home and Tattered drew off as if outclassing his rivals.

Mrs. William Ziegler's filly, Who Knows, gave some refutation to the theory that races for 2-year-old maidens are hard to beat when she rewarded favorite players in the opening dash, in which 15 non-winning juveniles met. Nick Wall, the blonde lightweight veteran who rides for the Zieglers, took the daughter of Polydor or Sumair right to the front and kept her there under a bristling drive throughout the three furlongs. Darby Delt, a long shot, raced forwardly from the start and was beaten a head while holding a length and a half advantage over Bestest, a paddock tip that was in the thick of the fight all the way. Who Knows paid $7.70.

Hubert Le Blanc, leading apprentice rider here, had to put up one of his strongest rides to shove Pepper Patch's nose first over the wire in the one mile second contest. Night Raven barely lost out while beating Count Rae a head for the place. Night Raven disposed of Bushmaster while setting the pace. Pepper Patch moved up to take a narrow lead in the stretch and in so doing, swerved over and blocked Peedeeque, the latter then falling out of contention. The winner returned $13.10. Bellum, the favorite, broke slowly and never was a factor.

Hal Price Headley's 4-year-old filly Pelerine, $5.50 favorite for the third event of six furlongs, drove to a length and a half triumph under Charlie Stevenson's capable guidance. Patsey Begone was hard ridden to hold the place position all the way, while Earl Porter, under a poor ride by Sammy Renick, missed the place by a half length. Pelerine took the track shortly after the start and never faltered. Earl Porter was allowed to lose considerable ground and his rider was of little help in the drive home.

The camera was used to separate the first four horses that came down to the wire in a bunch in the fourth, a 6-furlong test for shifty platers.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PEPPER PATCH, $13.10, $6.40, $4.20; NIGHT RAVEN, $11.20, $7.00; COUNT RAE, $4.90.

PEPPER PATCH, going in best form, began to move up around turn, swerved sharply in stretch interfering with PEEDEEQUE, then drew away, but was doing his best to win. NIGHT RAVEN got away to a good break, set pace, saved ground and held on gamely. COUNT RAE, on the outside, clearing interference, finished with good courage. CRYSTAL PRINCE had four bandages on. PEEDEEQUE was moving up stoutly when he was blocked by the winner.

$2.00 DAILY DOUBLE, FIRST AND SECOND RACES, PAID $52.70.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TATTERED, $3.70, $3.30, $2.50; CANDLELIGHT, $5.70, $3.10; ANGLO SAXON, $2.60.

TATTERED, much the best, was away well, but unable to keep up in early part, weaved his way through the field on turn, assumed lead in stretch and won going away. CANDLELIGHT broke fast, followed pace and made a game effort. ANGLO SAXON, away flying, displayed keen speed for entire route and held on well. HARVESTING showed good speed. ABADDON closed a big gap.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and a furlong. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good for all but Round Table. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:30. Off at 4:36½. Winner, Mrs. F. Rossiter's ch. g. (4), by Wise Counsellor—Willow Tit. Trained by R. Coppa. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:50 3-5.

TIME OUT! By Chet Smith

Ain't I told you before to cut your dolls out of the society section, Dopey? Your darned scissors has ruined half the results at Hialeah.

At the Post . . .

Dear Al. Selections at Hialeah.

Mary Hirsch, daughter of Max Hirsch who trained last year's Kentucky Derby winner, Bold Venture, hopes to be the first woman trainer ever to win a Derby. If we listen to horsemen here she has a good chance to saddle this year's winner. Her hope is No Sir, son of Sortie and Fib. Last year No Sir defeated Pompoon to end that colt's winning streak, and finished second to Col. E. R. Bradley's Brooklyn in the Walden Handicap at Pimlico. It is probable that Brooklyn will be installed the winter book favorite for the Derby. I say this with Pompoon in mind, too. No Sir has not been overworked. He is being pointed now for the $20,000 added Flamingo Stakes next Saturday and may win that race. After that Miss Hirsch will give him a rest before priming him for the Derby. She knows horses, having been raised with them. However, she looks like anything but a horse trainer. There is not the horsey appearance about her. She is distinctly feminine. However, she can do and does everything for a horse except saddle and shoe him. Campaigning with a small stable last year, she collected $18,575 in purse money. Oh, Mike. Can't you hear me calling you? BILL.

First race—Wise Mentor, a winner last out, needs only to run back to that race to take care of this company. The chief contention will come from the Denemark entry of Radio Charm and Busse Trumpet. Exhilaration may get a peep into the money circle.

Second race—Bain Marie was well meant in that recent race and something went amiss. I have reason to believe this one is better than rated. Four Eleven looms as the one to beat. Star Loom is too consistent to be placed far out of it.

Third race—Brown Feathers is in light and should do a lot of running in this mile event. Kurtsinger will do the riding and I'm going to string along. Chance Ray is speedy and is going to be a keen factor. Albania is a possibility.

Fourth race—No Sir picks up high weight in the field and under Westrope's handling, this colt should take the main part of the purse. Log and Eli Yale for the place and show awards.

Fifth race—White Cockade may upset the stars scheduled to start in the McLennan Memorial. The one has worked well and has that recent smashing race as a recommendation. The Denmark Army will be hard to crowd out of the money. Maeriel has been rounding into shape and is a possible surprise.

Sixth race—Lady Higloss has beaten the best of them and she probably will lead these excellent sprinters to the wire. Snark and Tintagel seem to have something on the others.

Seventh race—Maid of Arches probably can run all night with the light weight assignment. Drusus and The Singer for the place and show awards.

Best bet—No Sir.

By John R. Vosburgh.

A couple of minor incidents in the inter-high basketball series occurred yesterday in which Roosevelt climbed into second place by swamping Wilson, 49-9, and Central wrecked Tech's hopes of finishing near the top by mopping up the Maroon, 26-23. Both games were played at Tech.

Needing a victory in order to go into a tie for third place with Western, the Techmen set a warm pace for Central but wilted near the finish after tying the score, 21-21 with two minutes and a half to play, on a long shot by Jimmy Vermillion. The same Vermillion, however, paved the way for the defeat in the next breath by committing two fouls in a row.

The first was on Billy Vermillion, Central's midget captain, as he was shooting under the basket. The shot was good and so was the Central pilot's foul shot to send the count to 24-21. At this juncture, with a minute to play, Vermillion fouled Charlie Clark, of Central, as he was shooting but failed to block the shot.

With seconds to go, Dick Myers, Tech substitute, sank a two-pointer but that ended the scoring for the day.

Anybody's Ball Game.

It was anybody's ball game until the last three minutes when Vermillion and Clark found Tech's scattered defense vulnerable to fast dribbles to the basket and scored. The teams were tied at 5-5 at the end of the first period, 10-10 at the half and Central led, 16-14, going into the final period.

Vermillion, Myers and Walton Merchant were the sole scorers for Tech's well-balanced team, each sinking three baskets. The Techmen sadly missed the brainy floorwork of their injured blond captain, Dick See, the California emigrant.

Clark's 12 points set the pace for Central with Capt. Vermillion, one of the series' leading scorers, accounting for half a dozen. The individual duel between Vermillion and Johnny Williamson, Tech's little forward, brought a continual grappling involving these two football stars.

Roosevelt's win over Wilson was merely a formality in which big Ray Fridrich and Frank Bailey, of Roosevelt, ran up their scoring totals at the expense of the Green team. Fridrich, the former Ohio schoolboy star, accounted for 14 points and Bailey 12. Roosevelt led, 13-1 in the first quarter and 24-4 at the half, Wilson failing to score from the field in the first two periods.

Bob Haycock, grandson of the assistant superintendent of schools, again was Wilson's leading scorer, rolling up two-thirds of the Green's points.

Minneapolis Mistress of Mashie

Patty Berg came through in the final stretch of yesterday's finals in the Palm Beach Country Club women's tournament to defeat Helen Dettweiler, of Washington, 4 and 3. The title is the only women's crown that eluded Patty last year.

2 Sets Brothers Make D.&H., A.A.U. Threat

When you're speaking of strong contenders for the unlimited championship in The Post A. A. U. tournament starting March 1, do not omit Delaware and Hudson Coal Co. With five former college aces and three former Tech High standouts in the lineup, D. and H. is clearly a dangerous dark horse entry.

The coalmen boast the only double brother-act in the District. Two sets of brothers bedeck the D. and H. lineups; namely, Lawrence and Gordon Ball, and Ray and Don Garber. To basketball followers neither pair needs much introduction.

The Ball Brothers performed impressively for Washington and Lee University in past years, Lawrence is a center when not playing guard. Gordon, left handed and tall, like his brother, is considered by many observers the best defensive man in town. He is a guard.

All Capable Scorers.

Even more familiar to most court addicts are the Garbers. Both got off to brilliant starts at Western High and then Ray went to Swarthmore and Don to Duke, adding enviable collegiate records to their scholastic careers. In high school, incidentally, Ray led the inter-high series for two years in a row, 1923 and '24. The intervening years have only sharpened his scoring eye.

The three former Techmen, Henry Cohen, big George Beach and Henry Galotta have been earning impressive reputations for themselves in local court circles for years. Beach is a center, Galotta and Cohen, forwards.

Completing the cast is Maurice Long, a product of North Carolina U. All members of the squad are particularly capable at the art of basket making and are running a close race for high-scoring honors. Only one lament has Manager Don Garber, the loss of Ollie Mayfield, star center of last year's D. & H. lineup but the manager is already dickering with the Laurel Tricity League for a pivotman of the same caliber.

Entry Blanks at Post.

No teams can boast a more conscientious sponsor than President Joseph B. Murphy, of D. & H. Coal Co. An ardent follower of his club, President Murphy dotes on his players, taking them en masse on numerous occasions to wrestling matches and baseball games.

No newcomer to Washington hardwoods is D. & H., this marking its seventh straight year of competition. Since it started operation in 1930, the Coalmen have rolled up an impressive record of victories and are as proud of their past as they are of the fact that they are the oldest organized independent team in the city.

Thus, D. & H. is already aiming to succeed the George Washington Freshmen as unlimited champs of the city.

Not only in the unlimited class but in the 100-pound, 115-pound, 130 and 145-pound classes interest is keen. Entries are being secured in all classes at The Washington Post, various boys' clubs and Heurich gymnasium. They must be turned in at the Boys Club of Washington, 230 C street northwest, by midnight Wednesday.

Eagles Subdue Bridgewater By 38 to 30

Eagle met Eagle at American University last night with the local Eagles emerging victorious over the Bridgewater Eagles in a closely fought game, 38-30.

Intent upon saving his varsity for a tough contest with Randolph-Macon tonight, Paul Smith, the American University coach, started his second-string quintet only to see the visitors hold them even in the first half, 11-11, and step out to a 28-19 lead in the second period. At this point the American varsity took the court and scored 18 points to the visitors' 2.

Skippy Edwards, diminutive forward, and Dud Rogers, lanky center, stood out for the locals, while Lefty Huffman and General Scott were outstanding for the visitors.

The American varsity clicked well in its short performance and should be well warmed for its game with Frank Sumner's high-flying Randolph-Macon Yellow Jackets on their own court tonight.

Bolton Turns Plowboy in Effort To Bolster Chances With Nats

By the Associated Press.

Greensboro, N. C., Feb. 19.—Cliff Bolton, Washington's "bad boy" catcher, has gone behind the plow in an effort to rid himself of an attack of rheumatism in order that he may be able to continue his career as a professional baseball player.

In Farmer, a small community some 30 miles south of here, Bolton said today he was seriously preparing himself for the future. He is living on his 100-acre farm in isolated territory in order that he can plow, chop wood and do other hard work to get into shape.

"This rheumatism will come around with the plowing and wood chopping and sunshine," Bolton said. "I'm feeling better and know that I'll be able to play this year. At present I'm at playing weight and although I may not be able to report at the opening of training camp I know I'll play before the season has gotten very far under way."

Steele Is Given Verdict Over Babe Risko

Round Four.

Steele came out fast and caught the Babe with three quick lefts to the face. Fighting in a half crouch Steele smothered Risko with rights to head. Risko cracked over two smashing rights to body. They had abandoned caution for the time being and landed repeatedly. Steele backed Risko against the ropes and made him cover up. Steele kept getting over light left jabs to the face. It was Steele's round.

Round Five.

Risko chopped the champion with a right to the head. Freddie bore in, but failed to reach with a crushing right to the body. Risko backed Steele against the ropes, registering stunning body blows. Risko landed a pretty right to the jaw. Fighting from long range they tapped each other with light lefts to the head. Risko's round.

Round Six.

Round Seven.

Steele missed with two vicious rights to the head. Steele failed to reach Risko with a powerhouse right to body and spun himself into the ropes. Steele tagged Risko with a short right to belly. Fighting in a clinch Risko got in two nice rights to the head. Risko twice clubbed Steel with rights to the head. Round even.

Round Eight.

They sparred cautiously for a minute and a half. Risko tagged Steele with two rights to the head. Steele came back, smashing Babe with a looping right to head, and a short right to body. They traded light lefts from long range. Risko registered two rights to body and head. Risko's round by a slight margin.

Round Nine.

They mauled each other meaninglessly in a half clinch. Steele got over a nifty left to the face and followed with a right to the jaw. Risko replied with two lefts to face. Steele tagged Risko with two crushing rights to jaw and the Babe danced away backwards. Risko clubbed Steele with his right to the head. Each missed with rights to the head at the bell. It was Steele's round.

Round Ten.

While the points scored showed the boys virtually even, Steele seemed to have a better command of the situation. They flailed each other furiously in a wild exchange in a neutral corner. Steele was doing most of the leading. Steele tagged Risko with a left to belt which some of the fans thought was low but the referee made no signal. Risko forced Steele to cover with a double-barreled body attack. Risko was bleeding slightly from the nose. Steele's round.

Round Eleven.

Steele caught the Babe on the whiskers with a vicious left. Steele was going after that reddened nose. Risko drove over two rights to body but was forced to cover by a right to face. Steele snapped over two neat rights to the ribs. Risko got over a looping right to the body. Steele was continually catching the Babe's body blows with his elbows. Steele's round.

Round Twelve.

Risko came out fast and smashed over a left on the waistline. The crowd yelled and Donovan spoke to the Babe, apparently warning him for a low blow. They felt each other out with light lifts at long range. Steele got over a nifty right just below the heart. Risko twice tagged Steele with rights to head. Steele replied with lefts to the head. Risko then went into reverse and was booed for running backward. Risko flicked over two rights to the head at the bell. Referee Donovan notified the judges he had taken the round away from Risko for that low blow.

Round Thirteen.

The Babe opened up with light rights to the head. Steele carried the fight to Risko scoring with lefts to the head. Risko drove Steele into the ropes with two rights to the body. Risko missed with a left to body and took a right on the chin. Steele got over a great right to the jaw. They sparred cautiously in midring, just before the bell. It was Steele's round.

Round Fourteen.

They sparred cautiously during the first half of the round. Risko opened with a right to the body which missed and followed with a right to the head which went home. They went into a furious exchange against the ropes which ended when Steele registered a right to the head. Risko, dancing away, slipped and fell. Steele tagged Risko with a pair of lefts to the head. Steele followed up with lefts and rights to the head and body. Steele's round.

Round Fifteen.

Both came out fighting, but after trading lefts to the face they went into a clinch. They banged each other with rights in a clinch. Risko got over a nice right to body and followed with a left to head. Risko scored a right to head. Risko forced Steele to cover with two rights to the head. They traded lefts and rights to the body. Risko scored a right to face and Steele spit blood. Risko crashed over a beautiful right to head at the bell. Risko's round.

D. C. Pin Team Wins Battle at Willimantic

Willimantic, Conn., Feb. 19.—In one of the most thrilling duckpin matches ever witnessed in New England, O'Donnell's Sea Grill, of Washington, defeated the Connecticut Blue Ribbons here tonight by a margin of 11 points, finishing the five-game battle with a score of 3,149 to 3,138.

After losing the first three games the Capital maple busters came through with a charge in the fourth skirmish that carried them to the front.

Bill Krauss electrified a capacity gallery when he made everything from sliding No. 7 and 8 pins to a triple-header strike in the last box of his fourth game. His 685 set plus his sensational spare making was the outstanding feature of the match.

Many of the city's foremost pinwomen are pointing towards the fourth annual Lorraine Gulli duckpin classic, scheduled for Washington's birthday at the Convention Hall alleys, where they compete against a field of the nation's first ranking stars.

Preliminary events for free entry to the stakes are expected to attract a record entry list.

Esther Burton and Majorie Smith, of the Ladies Independent League were admitted to the free list last night at the Arcadia when they chalked up sets of 329 and 349, respectively.

Ed Sheehan, of Regulations No. 1 team featured the activities of the Maritime League with a high game of 140. Tom Hardy's 355 set contributed greatly towards Comptroller No. 1's team game and set of 559 and 1,602, respectively.

Mile Features Track Meet Tonight

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 19.—The classic mile, forced to the background last week by Don Lash's record-smashing 2-mile performance at Boston, moves back into the spotlight tomorrow night when stars of the board tracks renew their assault on the record book in the New York A. C. games at Madison Square Garden.

Except for the absence of Champion Jack Lovelock, the famous Baxter mile will be a duplicate of the Olympic 1,500-meter run with five of the finalists at Berlin slated to toe the mark.

Glenn Cunningham, world record holder and runner-up to Lovelock at Berlin, is favored to continue his current sweep of the boards. The addition of Luigi Beccali, Italy's 1932 Olympic titleholder, who ran third at Berlin, has brought out a new challenge to the burly Kansan's record of 4:08.4. Beccali, in this country studying road construction, will make his indoor debut in this race.

Completing the field will be Archie San Romani, Emporia (Kans.) Teachers, who finished fourth in the Olympics and then beat both Lovelock and Cunningham in the Princeton mile last fall; Gene Venzke, New York A. C. veteran, who has shadowed Cunningham all season, and Miklos Szabo, Hungarian 1,500-meter champion.

Eastern 'Y' Court Tourney Today

The third annual George Washington Birthday Basketball Tournament, open only to representative Y. M. C. A. teams, will be held on the local "Y" court today. This tournament is developing into a mythical Eastern District Y. M. C. A. championship.

Howard and Lincoln Boxers Fight to Draw

An even break was gained by Howard and Lincoln Universities in boxing contests held last night in the Howard gymnasium, the most colorful event, a 45-second clash between Asbury Kelley, 165, of Howard, and George Holton, of the Twelfth street "Y," being out of the regular schedule. Kelley belabored his opponent from the opening gong in such a fashion that referee Pete Sawyer lifted his glove in token of victory before a minute passed.

127-pound class—Palmer Hunt (Lincoln) decisioned Washington Moore (Howard).
187-pound class—Washington Gaines (Howard) decisioned Ray Williams (Lincoln).
135-pound class—Garfield Wilkinson (Howard) decisioned James Hall ("Y").

G. U. Prep Noses Out Charlotte Hall, 31-29

Georgetown Prep staged a homestretch finish yesterday to topple a stubborn Charlotte Hall Military Academy five, 31 to 29, on the Prep court, after trailing, 25 to 15 at the half. Billy Byrd, Prep forward, was highly responsible for the rally, piling in a dozen points. Goodwin, Charlotte Hall center, likewise scored 12 points.

Copper, Lead Zinc Prices At New Peaks

Export Copper at 14.8 Cents and Lead at Highest Since 1929.

New York, Feb. 19 (AP).—Prices of leading base metals soared to new high levels today under further urgent demand attributed to armament preparations. Copper, lead and zinc topped the rising movement. Duplicating its sharp rise on Thursday, the price of lead was today advanced $5 a ton by leading producers. The new levels are the highest since September, 1929.

Coincident with the soaring advance in lead, export copper shot up to 14.80 cents a pound or nearly one-half cent over yesterday's price. This was equivalent to more than 15 cents delivered abroad, or about a cent above the domestic price.

Zinc rose .20 of a cent to the best level in seven years. With the scramble for copper showing no abatement selling quarters were said to be advising clients to prepare for another raise in the domestic price, now 14 cents. Few domestic producers were willing to sell at that level it was said.

Metal circles again referred to Great Britain's $7,000,000,000 rearmament program as major influence in the huge demand for metals that has swept leading markets since the beginning of the week.

Tin and zinc futures also felt the broad buying wave and both metals were marked up sharply. Straits Settlement tin was held 1.65 to 1¾ of a cent above the previous closing. There were bids for March zinc futures at 7.10 cents a pound, up .20 of a cent as compared with yesterday's closing.

American Smelting & Refining Co. and St. Joseph Lead Co., leading lead producers, fixed the quotation at 6.50 cents a pound, New York, and the latter quoted on the basis of 6.35 cents, East St. Louis.

Cotton Belt Holders Plan Committee

One of the first applications to the Interstate Commerce Commission for authorization to represent railroad bondholders under Section 77 of the Bankruptcy Act, was announced yesterday with the filing by E. Stanley Glines of New York, W. Rodman Peabody of Boston and H. Hambelton Ober of Baltimore, of an application to constitute a protective committee to act in reorganization proceedings of St. Louis Southwestern Railway Company now pending in the District Court of the United States for the Eastern Judicial District of Missouri.

The committee is seeking authorization to act in the interests of holders of The First Terminal and Unifying Mortgage Bonds of the Railway Company, presently outstanding in the principal amount of $21,638,000, of which $8,063,000 is outstanding directly with the public.

Gen. Electric Raises Wages of 5,000

Schenectady, N. Y., Feb. 19—(AP)—E. D. Spicer, works manager of the Schenectady General Electric Company plant, announced today a blanket wage increase amounting to $420,000 annually for 5,000 shop employes in the plant.

The 5,000 shop employes who will benefit from the pay boost were described in the announcement as in the "salaried or day-working class."

Output of 1929 Is Surpassed By 6 Countries

Britain, Germany, Japan, Norway, Denmark and Chile.

New York, Feb. 19.—Six major countries, Japan, Denmark, Chile, Great Britain, Norway and Germany, experienced greater industrial activity and had a greater industrial output in 1936 than in 1929, according to the National Industrial Conference Board today.

Activity in Japan showed the greatest gain over 1929. The 1936 index of industrial production, on the basis of 100 for the average of 1929, was 151.0. Computed on the same basis, Denmark's production index reached 124.7 in 1936, Chile's, 124.5, Great Britain's, 114.1, Norway's, 113.9, and Germany's, 105.6.

Production in Canada and the United States in 1936 fell short of the 1929 average by an almost identical percentage. Canada's industrial production index averaged 88.6 for the year, and that of the United States 88.2. While the United States average for the year was 11.8 per cent below the corresponding figure for 1929, the adjusted index of production for this country in December, 1936, was slightly above the 1929 monthly average.

A number of the European countries have noticeably lagged behind in the general recovery movement. In Austria, the 1936 production index, as compared with the 1929 base of 100, stood at 82.9, in Czechoslovakia at 76.8, in Belgium at 75.8, in Poland at 71.4, in France at 70.4, and in the Netherlands at 68.7.

The Market

Rearmament Talk Sweeps Prices Into New High Ground in More Active Trading.

New York, Feb. 19.—Speculation received strong support from the Government today, and the recent warnings against excesses in the stock market were forgotten. On a turnover of 2,780,000 shares, the largest in a week, stocks moved forward strongly, especially in the steel and mining departments. Government bonds again were firm. May wheat closed an eighth of a cent higher at 136 cents a bushel.

By all odds the elixir for the speculative markets was the realization that, in addition to the forces that have been working for some time, such as ordinary Government deficits, increasing gold production, devaluation of currencies, and reviving business activity, new and powerful influences are being brought to bear upon the speculative position. Those influences are the huge armament programs of European and Asiatic nations, which presumably are going to be followed, in part at least, by the United States.

Most of the nations now scrapping their armament limitation agreements and striving to compete with one another are still far under water with regard to paying for the last war, and several of them are insolvent from almost any point of view. In any event, none of them can afford to deprive industry of either the credit or the raw materials needed for its recovery in order to build up navies, armies and fortifications.

Boom and Bust.

It frequently was said, by superficial people, that the only thing to pull the world out of the depression would be another war. By that was meant industry needed the stimulus of war orders. Industry, it appears, is going to have the orders; and the labor, money and material involved will become merely useless inventory for a while. Its destruction inevitably will follow. If the present trend is continued, the chances are good for an unhealthy boom in commodities and stocks, for credit and currency inflation, and for another and inevitable severe trade depression.

Naturally the steel and metal shares were the speculative favorites of those who see ahead another fete of the war babies. United States Steel gave the market its cue and after it had moved up several points to a new high price the other steel issues, the metal stocks and finally almost all classes of stocks joined the hunt of traders for quick and large profits. Even some stocks which seem to be out of sight and hearing of rearmament were strong. Radio, for example, the speculator's problem child of the past year or so, moved into thousand share trading lots and advanced a good fraction.

Steel Spurts.

Steel issues had a double incentive to advance. In addition to the intimidation of the Government that this country would keep its Navy abreast of that of Great Britain or other nations, even if it had to spend more than seven billions for the purpose, the Administration also indicated that it would buy its steel requirements from home mills, just as it has decided to buy its copper from the American producers. In other words, provisions of the Walsh-Healy act which would have meant shorter hours, higher wages and increased costs, will be waived.

Prices for the steels and metals ranged from 1 to 3 points higher.

Cincinnati Boom Jumps Clearings

Cincinnati, Feb. 19 (AP).—A post-flood business boom raised Cincinnati bank clearings for the first four days of this week to $52,249,743, nearly $20,000,000 above the corresponding four days last year.

Dennison Duble, manager of the Cincinnati Clearing House Association, said rehabilitation was largely responsible for the increase.

The better grade rails made some progress and the receivership rails continued into new high ground. Shares of rubber companies held a fair demand. Best prices in several years were paid for Steel, Anaconda, Kennecott, American Smelting, Bethlehem, National Steel and Crucible. Strength also was pronounced for Howe Sound, International Silver, Revere Brass, and St. Joseph Lead.

Shipbuilding shares were given a play. Telephone recovered a point or so. Celanese received good backing. Farm implements weakened, but mail orders were firm. Deere, Case and Harvester dropped 1 to 3 points.

Steel Tip.

Stock market speculators were thankful to the Government for its little tip on the steel stocks. An Assistant Secretary of the Navy had has name on the front pages of the newspapers with a warning that, if this country doesn't watch out, foreigners will buy up all our steel production and the United States Navy will be left in the cold. His suggestion carried with it the hint that steel mills might be let off the onerous exactions of compliance with the Walsh-Healy act in bidding on Navy construction. Mostly the picture painted of vast expenditures for steel inspired demand for steel shares. United States Steel opened with 6,000 shares at 108⅞, then crossed 110, for a gain of 3 points, and in the late trading climbed further to around 113.

Bank Failures.

Although the Comptroller of the Currency wrote triumphantly over the absence of national bank failures in the last fiscal year of his department the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation has plenty of failures to worry about, though they are not nationally chartered institutions. The report of the corporation for the last six months of 1936 reveals that 31 insured State banks closed in that period (tut, tut!) "because of insolvency." Since the beginning of deposit insurance 75 insured banks have failed with deposits of $21,989,000, of which $18,130,000 was protected by insurance security, offset or preferment.

Freight Traffic Is 9.6 Per Cent Above Year Ago

Total of 691,618 Cars Is 2.5 Per Cent Over Preceding Week.

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended February 13 totaled 691,618 cars, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. This was an increase of 60,523 cars or 9.6 per cent above the corresponding week in 1936 and an increase of 109,949 cars or 18.9 per cent above corresponding week in 1935. Loading of revenue freight for the week of February 13 was an increase of 16,592 cars or 2.5 per cent above the preceding week.

Miscellaneous freight loading for the week ended February 13, totaled 273,181 cars, an increase of 7,364 cars above the preceding week, 60,132 cars above the corresponding week in 1936, and 60,822 cars above the corresponding week in 1935.

Loading of merchandise less than carload lot freight totaled 162,575 cars, an increase of 4,523 cars above the preceding week, 18,497 cars above the corresponding week in 1936 and 6,825 cars above the same week in 1935.

Grain and grain products loading totaled 30,473 cars, an increase of 1,559 cars above the preceding week, 2,378 cars above the corresponding week in 1936, and 5,281 cars above the same week in 1935. In the Western Districts alone, grain and grain products loading for the week ended February 13, totaled 18,953 cars, an increase of 933 cars above the preceding week and 2,481 cars above the corresponding week in 1936.

Livestock Increase.

Livestock loading amounted to 11,635 cars, an increase of 870 cars above the preceding week, 1,666 cars above the same week in 1936 and 64 cars above the same week in 1935. In the Western Districts alone, loading of livestock for the week ended February 13 totaled 8,502 cars, an increase of 608 cars above the preceding week and 1,457 cars above the corresponding week in 1936.

Forest products loading totaled 35,300 cars, an increase of 2,774 cars above the preceding week, 8,831 cars above the same week in 1936, and 70,566 cars above the same week in 1935.

All districts reported increases in the number of cars loaded with revenue freight, compared with the corresponding week in 1936 except the Pocahontas, which reported a decrease. All districts, however, reported increases compared with the corresponding week in 1935.

Holiday Closings.

All securities and commodities markets throughout the United States will remain closed Monday, Washington's birthday with the exception of various livestock markets. European and Canadian markets will be open as usual.

Factory Pay Rolls Up 155% From Low

Gold Imports Drop, Silver Increases

The Commerce Department reported yesterday that gold imports totaled $29,531,695 for the week ended February 12, a decrease of $3,102,293 under the previous week.

Silver imports were $7,276,872 during the week ended February 12, compared with $2,786,153 the previous week.

Mass. Mutual Life Reports Large Gain

The Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co. reports for 1936 new insurance sales of $141,410,115, an increase of 7 per cent over 1935. More insurance was sold in every single month of 1936 than in the same month of 1935. Fewer policies were lapsed or surrendered, and the mortality experience, which was 56.3 per cent of the expected, was also an improvement over 1935. The total insurance in force on December 31, 1936 was $1,874,069,619 or $22,615,000 more than at the beginning of the year.

In its financial operations also the company reported gains. Earnings on invested assets after deduction of expenses were at the rate of 4.06 per cent of such assets in 1936, as against 3.70 per cent in 1935. The assets of the company increased by $38,888,015 to a total of $572,112,957.60 on December 31, 1936.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Holland guilders and German reichsmarks improved their positions, in terms of the dollar, yesterday as most other leading currencies remained about even with the previous closings.

The guilder rose .03 of a cent to 54.72 cents. Registered and travel marks were, respectively, .25 and .35 of a cent improved. French francs were unchanged and sterling dipped ⅛ of a cent to $4.89⅞.

In London the dollar closed unchanged at 4.89¾ to the pound. In final dealings in Paris the dollar ruled at the equivalent of 4.654 cents to the franc.

Coal Bill 'Approved.'

By the Associated Press.

The House Ways and Means Committee tentatively approved yesterday the major provisions of the Guffey-Vinson coal control bill. It is designed to stabilize the industry through minimum price-fixing and marketing provisions enforced by a "compliance tax."

Schwartz Family To Inherit Estate

Charles Schwartz, for many years one of the city's better known jewelers, named the immediate members of his family as his principal heirs, it was shown yesterday when his will was filed in District Court. Mr. Schwartz, who died in Florida last Tuesday, did not give an estimate of the value of his estate. The value will not be known until a petition for probate is filed.

Mrs. Dora Schwartz, his widow, is to have the principal share of the estate held in trust for her benefit for life. Upon her death, Samuel T. Schwartz, a son, is to receive one-half of the estate and the other half is to go to grandchildren. The grandchildren will not receive their shares until the youngest of them reaches 30 years of age.

The Hebrew Home for the Aged is to have $500, and the Jewish Foster Home and the Jewish Consumptive Relief Association are to receive like amounts. In addition, Mrs. Dora Schwartz is to have $5,000 in cash and all of her husband's personal effects.

Witnesses Deny 'Drunk' Charge Against Scully

Question of Effects of 2 or 3 Highballs Issue in Auto Killings.

By the Associated Press.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 19.—The question of whether the "two or three" highballs Thomas G. Scully, jr., said he drank Christmas afternoon were enough to make him drunk became the main issue of debate here today at the fourth day of the prominent young attorney's trial for manslaughter.

Four defense witnesses took the stand and contradicted State testimony purporting to show Scully was "plenty liquored up" when his automobile crashed into a group of people and killed Homer Hook and Frederick W Affleck, on the Martinsburg, W. Va., pike Christmas night.

Mrs. Viola Henkel, Scully's hostess on Christmas Day, said "the boys were drinking cocktails" at her home during the day, but "as far as I know" Scully was sober when he left her home.

A garage attendant, John Boyrer, who talked with Scully when he came for a wrecker shortly after the accident, testified he saw nothing to indicate Scully was under the influence of intoxicants.

C. S. Lowery, whose car was struck by the lawyer's machine, testified similarly. He was unable to detect any signs of Scully's intoxication.

Another defense witness, Dr. James A. Miller, corroborated the defendant's own testimony. He said he smelled liquor on his breath but "he was in full possession of all his faculties."

The Commonwealth contends Scully was drunk and driving between 75 and 80 miles an hour when his car struck the men who were assisting at the scene of another fatal crash.

Assistant Attorneys Appointed by Garnett

United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett yesterday announced the appointment of Howard Boyd and Albert Goldstein as assistant United States attorneys.

Goldstein is to take the place vacated when his brother, Irvin Goldstein, resigned as an assistant to Col. Garnett to practice law. Boyd, for many years an attache of the Department of Justice, has been working in the District Attorney's office as a special assistant. His appointment will remove him from the Department of Justice roll to that of the United States attorney.

Graded Tests For New Deal Staff Opposed

Non-Competitive Examination for Civil Service Urged by Babcock.

Non-competitive examinations for some 300,000 New Deal employes, rather than competitive tests, to bring them into the civil service was urged by E. Claude Babcock, president of the United States Civil Service Employes, yesterday before the House Civil Service Committee.

He said 10,000 Government employes acquired civil service status in December, 1935, without any form of examination.

Babcock also proposed that employes in the civil service be given seniority ratings, if they have passed competitive examinations, as compared with those to whom the civil service is about to be extended.

Non-competitive examinations also were recommended by William B. Bergman, administrative assistant and chief clerk of the Navy Department, while Leo George, of National Federation of Postoffice Clerks, opposed the "blanketing."

John S. Middendorf, of the National Association of Special Delivery Messengers, said the Government workers for whom he spoke are the "forgotten men." He asked for remedial legislation, pointing out that messengers work seven days a week, sometimes 70 hours a week, and receive no stipulated salary.

Taft's Daughter Favors Age Limit for Judges

New Orleans, Feb. 19 (AP).—The daughter of the late William Howard Taft, President and Chief Justice of the United States, agreed toway with President Roosevelt that there should be an age limit for Federal judges.

She is Mrs. Frederick Manning, dean of Bryn Mawr College.

"My father would have preferred a legal retiring age, I have heard him say," she asserted. "He retired at 72, when he resigned."

Gandhi Called Father Of Sit-Down Strikes

By the Associated Press

Senator Thomas (Democrat), Utah, has suggested that sit-down strikes originated in the shaven head of Mahatma Gandhi.

The one-time college professor remarked during a Senate Civil Liberties Committee hearing that the recent General Motors strike was "based on Gandhi's non-assertion doctrine."

The committee's witness, Alfred Marshall, Chevrolet personnel official, sat a moment in puzzled silence, then replied:

"Well, if you had been with me in Flint, you might agree that it was a pretty dangerous affair."

Quezon Favors Philippine-U. S. Trade Treaty

Heads Delegation Which Will Confer Here With the President.

New York, Feb. 19.—While asserting he had "no propositions to make" President Manuel Luis Quezon of the Philippine commonwealth declared on his arrival from the West Coast today that "some sort of reciprocal trade agreement" with the United States would be mutually beneficial.

The dapper, volatile head of the young commonwealth led a delegation of Filipinos who will go to Washington within the next few days to discuss insular affairs with President Roosevelt.

He declined to confirm reports that he would seek to prevent the erection of United States tariff barriers against Philippine products when the islands become an independent country in 1946.

The independence act provides for progressively increasing taxes on Philippine exports to the United States. Virtually all of the sugar produced in the islands is shipped here and the trade balance consistently has favored the Philippines.

Pensions Pact For Rail Labor Expected Soon

White House Hints Agreement; One Law Voided by Supreme Court.

By the Associated Press.

A hint from the White House led informed observers to believe yesterday the Nation's $26,000,000,000 railroad industry is nearing an agreement with its employes on the question of pensions.

President Roosevelt told his press conference the Railroad Retirement Board would have an announcement in a few days regarding an understanding between the carriers and their 1,000,000 workers.

He did not disclose the subject of the agreement but members of the board have been participating in pension negotiations between rail management and labor. The discussions began two months ago at Mr. Roosevelt's request, against a background of legal struggle over rail retirement laws, which have been attacked by carriers.

Murray W. Latimer, board chairman, said yesterday that "we feel very hopeful some agreement will be reached soon." He said, however, that some time may be required for ratification of any agreement by individual railroads and brotherhoods.

Persons close to management and labor said any agreement probably would be built around the present rail retirement program.

Before the present legislation was enacted, the Supreme Court had invalidated the 1935 rail retirement act.

Informed persons said a pension agreement probably would involve dropping the railroads' court test of the existing statutes. Changes in the present program might be sought, however, to bring it into harmony with the agreement.

On Capitol Hill, the Senate Finance Committee reported without amendment a resolution extending taxing provisions of the retirement program from February 28 to June 30, 1938.

'Old 97's' Tuneful Approach Stilled by Death of Engineer

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., Feb. 19.—Montilla Clark's tuneful entry into Danville every third night driving one of the Southern's crack trains has been silenced forever by his death. He made no denial that he tried to play "Carry Me Back to Ole Virginny" by dexterous use of the whistle cord and hundreds of Danville people have smiled in bed at his efforts.

"Monk" Clark, 75, will be buried here tomorrow with a large attendance of railway men and ranking officials. He dropped dead at the end of his run at Spencer, N. C., on Thursday morning. He left Danville the night before jovial, ruddy and, his fireman said, with nothing to indicate a heart attack.

He was the oldest man in divisional service and had been in charge of the best and the fastest trains. Born at The Plains, he served two years as fireman and in 1885 was promoted to the post of engineer. He was "No. 1" man on the division in point of seniority.

His record for safety was considered outstanding. He was in one wreck, at Reedy Fork, N. C., when a broken rail spilled his train off the trestle killing 16 persons.

He was engineer of train No. 97 after the spectacular wreck at Danville which gave it a legendary standing in song and verse.

Surviving Mr. Clark is his widow, formerly Miss Ella Crawley, and seven children. He was a member of the Episcopal Church.

Mrs. Wickersham Rites Set Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Agnes M. Wickersham, 79, widow of Col. M. D. Wickersham, a colonel in the Union Army, will be held at her home, the Wyoming Apartments, this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Mrs. Wickersham, a resident of Washington for many years, died at her residence Thursday. She was widely known in musical circles here, and was vice president of the Friday Morning Music Club.

She was married in Washington, and later lived in Mobile, Ala., where Col. Wickersham was district attorney. She was a member of the League of Republican Women. Surviving her is a sister, Mrs. John Wesley Smith, with whom she lived.

Mrs. Mark Rites Scheduled Today

Mrs. Lavinia Knight Mark, 40, of Bethesda, Md., died Thursday at Mount Alto Hospital of pneumonia. She was a field worker in the Department of Child Welfare for the District of Columbia.

Funeral services will be held today at 2 p. m. from the Warner E. Pumphrey funeral home, Silver Spring, Md. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Surviving are her husband, Frank F. Mark; two sons, Fausten and Albin Mark, and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Merrill B. Knight, of Rockville. She is also survived by the following brothers and sisters: Mrs. J. S. Kasanin, of Chicago, Ill.; Merrill B. Knight, jr., of Roanoke, Va.; Miss Julia F. Knight, of Rockville; Owen Knight, of Forest Glen, Md; Albin F. Knight, of Asheville, N. C.; Carlton Knight, of Washington; Miss Ann Brooke Knight, of Silver Spring, Md., and Mrs. Lloyd Goebel, of Wheaton, Md.

8 Capital Men Join Cosmopolitan Club

Attired in bizarre costumes to signify their business or profession, eight well-known Washingtonians were initiated as members of the Cosmopolitan Club at a stag-night party in the Mayflower Hotel Thursday night.

Harry Baker, of the Wilson Line, wore a life preserver over a dinner jacket and carried an exaggerated bottle of "Wilson." John Chevalier, manager of the Palace Laundry, carried a huge laundry bag and wore a stiff shirt. C. J. Mack, of the Mayflower Hotel, carried a large calendar with the month of May decorated with flowers. William R. Teunis, optician, carried a large lorgnette with glass about a foot thick.

Torture Killing Witness Tells Of Knife Fight

Detective Says Girl Held His Arm While Hotel Man Slashed Face.

By the Associated Press.

Somerset, Pa., Feb. 19.—Detective John C. Wall, first defense witness at the trial of a State trooper charged with murder, testified today that 18-year-old Florence Dean held his arm while Frank Monaghan, hotel man, slashed his face and neck with a knife on the night of September 11 last.

Trooper Stacy Gunderman and six other peace officers of Uniontown, Pa., are accused of beating Monaghan to death in an attempt to force him to confess the cutting of Wall. Gunderman was the first of the defendants called to trial.

Wall told of stopping Monaghan's car along a rural road and offering to drive him and Miss Dean home because Monaghan "was too drunk and he might have hurt someone." Miss Dean was a chambermaid at Monaghan's hotel.

The detective testified:

"Miss Dean asked me to show the badge. I showed her it. Then she started to hit me with both hands. She yelled, 'Frank, are you going to let him get away with this? Do something. Do something.'

"Monaghan said, 'John you're a pretty nice boy. I like you.' The next thing, he put his arms around my head and put a knife to my neck."

The detective said he was cut on the neck, hands and face, adding:

"I was trying to defend myself and she (Miss Dean) grabbed my right hand and held it." (Wall has since brought charges of felonious assault and battery against Miss Dean.)

Defense Attorney John Duggan, jr., termed Monaghan a "rat" with a "vicious disposition," in his opening address to the jury.

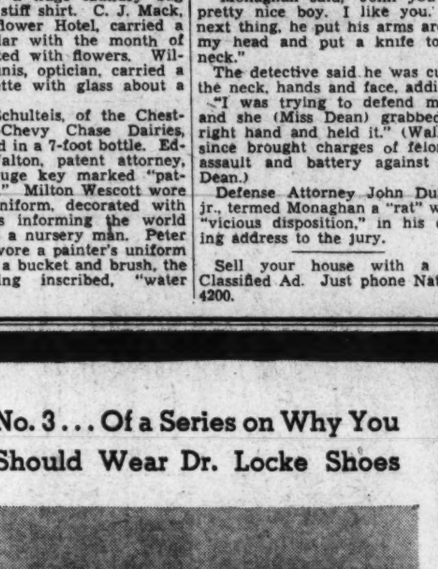
No. 3 . . . Of a Series on Why You Should Wear Dr. Locke Shoes

Do You Suffer From Aching Callouses?



Then You Should Wear

Dr. M. W. Locke Shoes for Men

A callous is a thickened, hardened area of the skin caused, in most instances, by the weakening of the arch. This weakened condition results in friction and pressure of the ordinary shoe on the sole of the foot.

Dr. M. W. Locke Shoes, through the medium of the "cookie" (a support constructed inside the shoe to hold the arch in its normal position), eliminates the friction strain, and, in most cases, the callous disappears in a very short time. Let one of our Registered Certified Fitters show you how these shoes fit in our modern Fluoroscope machine.
